By DAVIL HANLY
Legislative Chairman Tennessee Federation of Labor.

Nashville, April 27.—Labor legislation had few friends in the general assembly which adjourned Saturday, April 22. The great majority of the members had no conception of social justice. This was demonstrated when a resolution to ratify the child labor amendment to the constitution of the United States was considered in the house. One rural member in opposing the resolution said that if the amendment was ratified it would take every negro boy out of the cotton fields of the state. The charge was made that it would make a criminal of the farmer who sent his son to tend the stock. The child labor laws that were enacted in 1916 and 1919 did not touch the subject of farm labor. The Shelby and Davidson county delegations were the only ones that voted solidly for the resolution. Speaker Moore and Representative Smith, of Hamilton county, voted for it. Representative Robinson, of Hamilton county, voted "No." Of the Knox county delegation, Representatives Gaines and Faust voted "Aye" and Gervin voted "No." Representative Goodwin, of Knox and Loudon, voted "Aye."

A bill to amend the workmen's compensation law so as to change the method of computing the average weekly wage in the interest of the injured workman failed in the senate and was tabled in the house. In the senate the two senators from Davidson county, Alexander and Howard, voted "No." Senator Mooney, of Shelby county, voted "Aye." Senator Brown, of Shelby, voted "No," and Senator Crabtree, of Shelby county, deliberately walked out of the senate chamber to dodge the roll call. Senator Moss, of Madison county, voted "No." Senators Graves and Bell, of Knox county, voted "Aye." Senator Payne, of Hamilton, was present, but did not vote. The bill received fifteen (15) votes in the senate.

In the house it received the votes of the Davidson and Shelby delegations. Representatives Gaines and Gervin, of Knox county, voted "No." Representatives Robinson and Smith, of Hamilton county, voted "No." Speaker Moore was absent, Representative Cohn, of Shelby county, being in the chair when the bill was considered.

A bill to amend the garnishment law by providing a flat exemption of forty dollars ($40.00) a month for a married man and thirty dollars ($30.00) a month for a single man was enacted into law. There was not a vote against this bill in the senate. In the house, of the Davidson county delegation, Murphy, Millerlie and Woodroof voted "Aye," and Representatives Cross, Gilbert, Martin and Woodall voted "No."

A bill to regulate children in the street trades, sponsored by the parent-teachers' association and introduced by Representative Murphy, was tabled in the house by a large majority.

Bills to establish an eight-hour day for women and children were introduced in both houses, but were pickled in the steering committee. Bills to amend the child labor law in accordance with the recommendations of the national labor committee were also killed by the steering committee.

A bill to limit the power of judges in issuing injunctions in labor disputes. This bill was a copy of the La Guardia law enacted by congress. We could not get a hearing before the judiciary committee. It died in that committee.

An old-age pension bill was introduced in the house by Representative Murphy but it died in the finance, ways and means committee.

A law was enacted to limit the size and weight of trucks, also a bill imposing certain taxes on trucks.

A bill to repeal the primary law was introduced but did not come to a vote.

A bill to repeal the barbers' law was introduced, but died in the committee. Other bills to amend this law were introduced, but were never acted on.

Two bills affecting the public utilities companies passed the house by large majorities. One of these measures provided that [illegible] for taxation. The other provided for establishing power districts. The steering committee of the senate would not permit these bills to come to a vote in the senate.

Bills to repeal the public utility commission and to levy one mill per kilowatt hour on electrical energy were also introduced, but these bills did not come to a vote.

A law was passed to permit persons delinquent on taxes between 1920 and 1931 to pay these taxes up to December 1933, to avoid penalty and interest; also to permit delinquent taxpayers to redeem property sold for taxes without penalty or interest by paying before December, 1933. This law was later amended to exempt cities from its provisions.

A law was enacted to postpone from March 1 to June 1 each succeeding year payment of 1932 and 1933 state and county taxes.

Laws were passed cutting the price of automobile license tags twenty-five per cent (25%) and repealing the two dollar ($2.00) identification tag.

Laws were enacted legalizing the sale of 3.2% beer and providing for an election to be held in July to elect delegates to a convention to be held in August to consider the repeal of the prohibition amendment.

A bill promoted by certain banking interests in the state to permit branch banking did not come to a vote.

A resolution was passed ratifying the Norris [illegible] duck amendment to the federal constitution.

Laws were enacted amending the workmen's compensation law to provide that insurance companies writing compensation insurance give bond to insure payment of compensation claims, also giving grand juries the same inquisitorial powers over the violations of the act.

The general appropriation bill reduced the expenses of the state government $14,000,000 for the coming two years, as compared with the cost of the [illegible] government for 1931-32. The department of labor was reorganized materially. One deputy factory inspector was abolished, and the salary of the chief factory inspector was reduced from $2,400 a year to $1,800 a year. The salary of the division of workmen's compensation was also reduced from $3,000 a year to $1,800 a year. The salary of the woman deputy factory inspector was reduced from $2,000 a year to $1,800 a year.

The joint legislative committee of the Tennessee Federation of Labor will render a detailed report in the near future.

Electrical Workers Face "Argument" With Employers

NOTICE!

A special called meeting of Local 175, Electrical Workers, will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at Central Labor hall. Every member is requested and expected to be present, as business of great importance to all will be discussed.

E. E. McDANIELS,
Business Manager.

Electrical contractors, with two or three notable exceptions, have apparently combined to destroy Local 175, Electrical Workers, at least two of the larger concerns following the lead of others having this week returned signed contracts to local officials with almost identical statements as reasons therefor, according to E. E. McDaniels, business manager of Local 175.

Mr. McDaniels recalled that the W. C. Teas company was first to leave the union fold, followed by the Sweet concern. Terrell Electric company, given ninety days' grace to "think over" a new agreement, then refused to sign, and this week the letters were received from Chattanooga Electric company, Curtis Electric company and Central Electric company. An agreement, at least temporary, however, with the Central Electric company, has been effected since, Mr. McDaniels said.

At Central Body meeting Monday night the executive board was given power to act with the electricians in endeavoring to convince the employers that their newly announced non-union policy is a mistaken one.

Deserved Passing of A Worthy Unionist

Resolutions on the death of J. M. Noland, veteran member of Local 74, Carpenters and Joiners, were adopted by his fellow unionists at the regular meeting Thursday night. Mr. Noland was 74 years old, and had been a member of Local 74 for the past thirty years. Although not active of late years, he always took an interest in union affairs until his passing. At his home on Lookout mountain Wednesday, April 19. The resolutions, prepared by a committee consisting of Z. B. Bender, F. H. Mayfield and E. C. Corbin, follow:

Whereas a Divine Providence has seen fit to call to his final reward our brother, J. M. Noland; and

Whereas Brother Noland was a loyal and valued member of this local for many years; therefore, be it

Resolved: That we deplore the passing of this good citizen, and extend to his surviving relatives our heartfelt sympathy and condolence in it further

Resolved: That copies of this resolution be furnished the bereaved family, spread upon our minutes and furnished The Labor World for publication.

Peabody Police Use Tear Gas And Riot Guns Against Strikers

Boston, Mass.—Police of Salem, Beverly, Salisbury and Swampscott, armed with riot guns and tear gas, aided the police force in breaking up a parade of 6,000 leather workers on strike here for wage scales and sweating. Three strikers were arrested in Peabody, and two in the neighboring town of Lynn.

Mayor Leo Sullivan and Police Chief Edward J. Pierce, of Peabody, accused state police of dereliction, claiming they had been assured that twenty troopers would be stationed at Peabody for protection of the factories and to keep order. Officers of the state troopers denied, however, that they had been asked or had promised protection, and said that only the governor could order them on strike duty.

McGrady Slated For High Post In Labor Department

Well-Known Trades Unionist Will Be Named Assistant to Miss Perkins.

EDWARD F. McGRADY

Edward F. McGrady, member of the legislative committee of the American Federation of Labor and one of the most militant and aggressive members of organized labor, is slated to be assistant secretary of labor, it is understood.

McGrady, whose work as A. F. of L. legislative committeeman has made him an outstanding figure in Washington, is a veteran member of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union of North America. He was a leader in establishing the pressmen's tuberculosis sanatorium and the home of superannuated members at Pressmen's Home, Tenn. He was long prominent in organized labor in Massachusetts, being president of the Boston Central Labor union and vice-president of the Massachusetts State Federation of Labor. He was a member of the Boston Common council and the Massachusetts legislature and was also Massachusetts state superintendent of the United States employment service.

Mr. McGrady is best known in Tennessee through his activities in the Elizabethton rayon strike, where German mill owners were assisted by the discredited Horton administration in terrorizing thousands of men, women and young girls on strike for something like American wages. McGrady was kidnaped, together with Alfred Hoffman, textile organizer, and taken out of the state. Although warned not to return he immediately went back to Elizabethton and continued his good work there.

Tennessee trade unionists will congratulate the administration and the department of labor on the acquisition of this veteran labor official, and predict for him a successful tenure of office.

Mahoney Heads Committee to Check Number of Voters

"Every Member Qualified" Is Slogan of Labor for Coming Elections.

John T. Mahoney was Monday night named chairman of a committee from the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, whose duty will be to assure qualification and organization of labor and its friends for future elections in Chattanooga and Hamilton county. Assisting Mr. Mahoney will be Roy Lee, W. F. Lane and Joe Dobbs.

Appointment of the committee came after lengthy discussion in which delegates pointed out the necessity for unity in politics if the interests of the workers are to be protected. Although it was brought out that a few local unions require that all members be qualified to vote, too many have failed in the past to show proper interest in the election of officials who will consideration to the rights of all of citizens.

It will be the duty of the committee to record the number of qualified voters in each local, and the names of those qualified will be secured and efforts made to point out to them the error of their way. An attempt will be made to have each local enact laws requiring members to be qualified, the lines of requirements recommended by Central Body itself. Delegates must take an obligation to qualify and vote in all national, state and local elections.

The committee this week began its labors by addressing a letter to each affiliated body seeking information on the matter, as follows:

Dear Sir and Brother:

At the regular meeting of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council held Monday evening, April 24th, the question of the eligibility of members of our unions to vote in the city and county elections was discussed, and it was shown that too few of the union members of this city had paid their poll tax to date, and were, therefore, eligible to vote.

For our members to receive the consideration due them from the hands of office holders and the governing bodies of this community, it is necessary and essential that each and every union member be ready and properly equipped to vote.

For this purpose, a committee of the Central Labor body has been appointed to request each local secretary to ascertain the number of members of each local that are eligible to vote, and to insist on every union member registering and paying his or her poll tax, so that we might vote ture elections.

To complete our records, we desire that each secretary read this letter at the next regular meeting of the local and advise before May 8th, 1933, the total membership of your local and the total number of members eligible to vote at this time. Mail answers to T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of the council.

Yours fraternally,
JOHN T. MAHONEY, Chmn.,
Poll Tax and Vote Committee.

Tailors Postpone Convention.

Chicago, Ill.—The general executive board of the Journeyman Tailors' Union of North America decided not to hold a convention of the union this year. Gust Soderberg, president of the union, declared that the members are practically unanimous in favor of the board's action.

City Commission Maintains Stand On Short School Term

Offers of school teachers to accept "promise to pay" for their last month's service if the schools are operated the full nine months' term were declined by the city commission this week, and members of the board maintained their position that financial conditions make imperative curtailment of the term to eight months.

A great throng of citizens, composed principally of members of the parent-teacher association, attended city commission meeting Tuesday and appealed to the officials to recede from their stand with respect to shortening the term. A resolution adopted by the parent-teachers' councils called attention to the harm which would be done school children should the term be abbreviated, and declared that such action will "leave a scar which will never heal." The resolution was read by a representative of the organization, and was supported by a number of speakers, members of the council and others.

Considerable feeling was evidenced by the crowd, and it became necessary at one time for the mayor to caution a lady speaker against indulging in personalities. This lady declared that Commissioner Wilkerson, of the department of education, had been rude to her in discussing the possibility of reconsideration by the commission, and had stated positively that the school term would be curtailed regardless of public protests.

One speaker called attention to the fact that Mr. Wilkerson was not elected by the people, and by inference placed the incumbency of that official in the class of "frills." Reference was also made to the alleged luxurious offices fitted up by the education head, and it was stated that this expense alone might have been diverted toward payment of teachers' salaries.

It was announced later that the attitude of the commissioners was unaltered, and that the program to cut the school term would be carried out as originally planned.

Collective Action Is Only Salvation For American Teacher

Value and Need of Organization Fully Demonstrated, Says Green.

Cruel, Stern Economic Law and Economic Pressure Do Not Recognize Individual Merit or Special Training, Federation Head Holds in Statement Urging United Action and Offering Co-operation of Workers.

Experience through which public schools of the nation and the teachers have passed during the past three years has demonstrated the fact that the salvation of the teachers, their economic well-being and welfare, depend upon their own efforts and the exercise of their individual and collective influence, declares Colonel William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a statement issued appealing to the teachers of America to protect their interests by collective action through the federation.

School teachers, Mr. Green declares, like all other groups of citizens, are helpless as individuals but can be made strong and influential when organized into a strong economic and social force.

"Let no teacher labor under the illusion," the statement continues, "in these days of mass consideration and mass action, that he or she can secure and maintain an economic and social status in keeping with the teaching profession because of personal or individual merit. Cruel, stern economic law and economic pressure do not recognize individual merit, social standing or special training."

President Green's statement, in full, follows:

The American Federation of Teachers was chartered by the American Federation of Labor for the purpose of creating an opportunity through which the teachers of the nation could organize into and associate themselves with an organization of their fellow-workers in all walks of life for mutual helpfulness and protection.

The teachers of the nation occupy a very large place in the minds and hearts of all classes of people. One can truthfully say that they are generally held in high regard and in high esteem. They occupy a very close relationship to the home life and the family life of the nation. The very importance and dignity of their service and their position command sincere respect. But, even though the fathers and mothers of the nation entrust their children to the care and training of the teachers in our schools, colleges and universities, there is a manifestation of indifference approximating total disregard, in some places, of the economic and social welfare of the school teachers of the nation. This fact and the experience through which the public schools of the nation and the teachers have passed during the last three years serve to demonstrate the fact that the salvation of the teachers, their economic well-being and welfare depend upon their own efforts, upon the exercise of their individual and collective influence.

It has been made clear that they cannot protect their wages, salaries and their living standards except through organized action and organized activity. School teachers, like all other groups of citizens, are helpless as individuals but can be made strong and influential when organized into a strong economic and social force.

The value and need of organization among teachers has been clearly established. If the teachers are to save themselves, if they are to protect and promote their economic and social interests, if their living standards are to be placed upon a plane commensurate with the requirements of their profession and their social status they must unite and contend vigorously together for the realization and enjoyment of these priceless blessings.

Let no teacher labor under the illusion, in these days of mass consideration and mass action, of keen competition and blind commercialism, that he or she can secure and maintain an economic and social status in keeping with the teaching profession because of personal or individual merit. Cruel, stern economic law and economic pressure do not recognize individual merit, social standing or special training.

Let the teachers organize and organize effectively for mutual help and mutual protection. The opportunity is here and the organization which the teachers of the nation ought to join is functioning. The hosts of labor, those who make up the great organized labor movement, appeal to the teachers of the nation to join with them, to come with them and to work with them in the establishment of higher living standards and in the fight which the wage-earners and salary earners of the nation are making to bring about the realization of American ideals.

The teachers can save themselves, they can save the public schools of the nation and can establish decent living standards through organization and through affiliation with the American Federation of Teachers. Isolated, individualistic, acting separately and alone they will be forced to endure indefinitely the suffering which so many of them now experience.

In behalf of all those associated with the American Federation of Labor, I appeal to the teachers of the nation to organize through affiliation with the American Federation of Teachers.

State Convention Formally Postponed

Formal announcement of postponement of the annual convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, scheduled to be held in Memphis, was announced from Nashville this week in a communication signed by executive officers of the federation.

It is stated that final compilation of the referendum vote showed a large majority in favor of calling off this year's session and leaving matters in the hands of the executive board. A communication sent to affiliated central labor bodies and local unions contains the following comment:

"This is to officially notify you that the 1933 convention of the Tennessee Federation of Labor has been postponed. We wish to express to you our appreciation for the attitude assumed by the affiliated membership in dealing with this question.

"We also wish to convey to you our sincere thanks for the splendid cooperation that we have received during the past twelve months. We assure you that the officials of the Tennessee Federation of Labor will do everything in their power during the coming year to advance the cause of organized labor."

Iron and Steel Workers Indorse Thirty-Hour Week

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The convention of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers adopted a resolution indorsing the 30-hour week for all workers.

President M. F. Tighe, of the association, said the six-hour day and five-day week bill before congress would solve the problem of unemployment in the iron and steel industry. He denied that it is impracticable and said several steel companies are now applying the 30-hour plan with success.

Cuthbert Raps Commissioner

Editor Labor World:

In the now famous conference between General Kamin and his army, Cuthbert, with Mr. Wilkerson in his private office, the commissioner stated that as far as he was concerned he could not recognize organized labor. This was easily believed, Commissioner Wilkerson was told, because it is a well-known fact that no union man ever got any of the work that came out of his office. "Why should I pay a painter $6 a day when I can get them for $3 or less a day?" the fearless official asked.

Although Commissioner Wilkerson thinks it unethical to recognize a union man, we have in the past received warmest recognition from officialdom, such as presidents of the United States, chief justices, governors, mayors and even city commissioners. T. R. CUTHBERT.

What Next!

A musical instrument which looks like a piano, but plays like an organ, a flute, a guitar, a harp, an oboe—or as a variety of other instruments, including the piano—was recently demonstrated in New York. The instrument is called an "electronic piano" by its inventor, Benjamin Miessner.

The labor question is a question of providing for every worker an abundant life, a full and complete expression of personality.—Dr. John McDowell.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What has been the attitude of organized labor toward the fixing by law of a minimum wage for men?

A.—Labor has strongly opposed minimum wage laws for men. Its attitude was declared by the 1913 convention of the American Federation of Labor, which set forth the principle that organization is the most potent means for a shorter work-day and higher wages and said: "Through organization the wages of men can and will be maintained at a higher minimum than they would be if fixed by legal enactment."

A.—Yes. He has repeatedly expressed his belief in old age pensions as the most economical, practical and dignified way of caring for the destitute aged.

Q.—What is the official organ of the International Association of Machinists?

Begin Taking Cardui Today If You Suffer Like This Lady Did

"WHEN I was a girl, I began taking Cardui," writes Mrs. Maggie Stanfield, of Crandall, Ga. "I was very irregular for twelve months. Nothing did me very much good until my mother began to give me this medicine. Then I got all right, stout and well.

"After I was married, I was in bad health. I began taking Cardui again. I was troubled with my back a lot. Was awfully restless. I could not sleep well. I just weighed 90 pounds when I began taking Cardui. I improved rapidly. Before long I weighed 126 pounds. I felt fine. I was able to do a good day's work."

Cardui is sold by druggists here.

Thirty-Hour Week Unlimited

The 1932 convention of the American Federation of Labor declared that the paramount purpose of the American labor movement is to secure the nation-wide adoption of the six-hour day and five-day week and consecrated the full use of labor's economic and political forces to that end.

When on April 6 the United States senate passed the bill introduced by Senator Black, of Alabama, barring from the channels of interstate commerce goods manufactured by labor employed more than six hours per day or five days per week, the achievement of labor's paramount purpose received a decided impetus.

In a statement on the senate's action, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said:

"The senate of the United States did a very fine thing when it rejected a proposal to change the Black shorter work week bill from a 30-hour to a 36-hour work week measure.

"It did a finer thing when by a decisive majority it passed the Black bill which provides for a five-day work week, six-hour work day law, which applies to those employers of labor whose manufactured goods are shipped in interstate commerce.

"This action of the senate can be properly interpreted as a blow at the vital spot of unemployment. In operation it will create work opportunities for millions of idle working men and women. It represents the first real practical step on the part of the government to constructively deal with the problem of unemployment. Labor regards the passage of the Black bill by the United States senate as an outstanding achievement.

"Definite concentrated efforts will now be put forth to secure favorable action by the house of representatives. We feel positive and certain that the members of congress who make up the house of representatives will vote as decisively for the adoption of the shorter work week bill as did the United States senate."

With over 13,000,000 unemployed workers pounding the pavements throughout the United States, a large portion of them and their families eking out a precarious existence on charity relief, it is expected that the house of representatives will give prompt consideration to the 30-hour week bill and enact it into law without nullifying amendments disguised under the deceptive term "elasticity."

It should be remembered that the main purpose of the bill as passed by the senate is not to cater to the convenience of employers, but to provide jobs for around 6,000,000 unemployed workers and a decent living for their dependents. In the language of Senator Black, "it makes employment of the unemployed the major objective."

The crisis in unemployment demands the federal 30-hour week unlimited. Congressional statesmanship should not do less than meet this demand.

Methodists Criticize Profit Motive

The economic and social injustices which have developed with revolutionary intensity under the capitalistic system of production carried on exclusively for private profit are drawing the fire of organized Christianity as well as of organized labor.

Claiming that the present economic order does violence to the principles of Christianity, the recent New York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church declared:

"As followers of Jesus Christ, we are faced with the conflict between His ideals and our prevalent paganism.

"Our present debacle, in which millions are impoverished in the midst of plenty, marks our existing economic order as the supreme paganism of our day.

"We now know that the kingdom of God cannot be built upon the poverty of the many and the absurd and cruel wealth of the few.

"It daily becomes more apparent that people have been used for gain, when gain should have been used for people.

"Property rights have pushed aside human rights. Financial values have taken precedence over human values. This has resulted in such an uncontrolled orgy of production unrelated to consumption needs that our economic system is in a state of collapse."

The conference did not stop with criticizing the capitalist system of production and distribution because of its congenital disregard for the social welfare, but boldly declared for an economic order whose impelling purpose shall be the commonweal instead of profits:

"That society be planned primarily for the welfare of human beings is economically and morally sound. We face the old problem of transforming the world while living in it. Any society that cannot contrive to provide at least a minimum standard of decency for all its members stands self-condemned.

"It is our conviction that industry based solely upon the profit motive is doomed. The least definition with which the Christian conscience can be satisfied is that society is an organized co-operation for providing the largest possible measure of life for the greatest number.

"The present system, which permits private hands to manipulate for profit the processes which are vital to the economic well-being of all our people, must be set aside, or so fundamentally changed that the chief end of our economic activity shall be to meet the needs of all."

Such monstrosities as child labor, unemployment, poverty, and unjust distribution of wealth should be driven from our economic order. If the membership of organized religion generally could be mobilized along with organized labor for such a purpose, regardless of the effect on either institutions or individuals, America might again become the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Wage Cutting Not the Remedy

The Independent Laundry, of San Francisco, one of the largest laundries in Northern California, believes there should be no reduction in the minimum wage standards set for women. In a letter to the state industrial welfare commission, the laundry said:

"We believe that the highest possible standard of wages in a community the greater the purchasing power of the average individual, hence a more prosperous upswing in the business cycle . . . Wage cutting cannot solve the deplorable conditions confronting the entire nation at the present hour."

If there were more business concerns with the same view as the San Francisco laundry, this country would be better off.

New Deal Needed Here

Enormous bond issues seem to be in the making. Unemployment must be attacked by something bigger than the reforestation bill, which, if it works at its best, will merely take a drop out of the bucket of misery.

Who will get the bonds? Or rather, who will get the job of putting them "on the market?" Will the bonds go out through the same big banks that have been spilling out bonds like water through these past ten years? The banks that are now under fire, or will they be sold like liberty bonds?

Maybe there is a better way. We wait to see. Liberty bonds cost their original purchasers plenty, in most cases. They didn't go so good when it came to selling them.

A new deal in bond selling is needed. We have had a lot of new deals in these past few weeks. There is room for many more.

HE'S OUT AGAIN!

Where, Oh, Where, Were the Police!

By George Forbes

Gentle reader, don't take the time to read this unless you have plenty of time to waste. I have been persuaded to tell you my latest dream by the energetic young man who was assigned the job of editor-in-chief while the regular editor spent a week out of town.

I had spent a quiet day—work, a doubleheader ball game and a wrestling match—got home too early to go to bed, so I settled down in the old arm-chair, lit a cigarette and picked up the daily papers.

I read where the power trust had gone bolshevik and was opposed to the president's plan; that old man river was full again and on another rampage; there is much discussion about the beer tax; money is going to be made out of the same material as checks (rubber), so it can be inflated; the Parent-Teachers are still "whining" about the eight-months school term; the labor turnover in the attorney-general's office has increased; a New York lawyer told a Scottsboro jury to go take a bath; and that the "new deal" is speeding on its way. I turned over to the editorial page to see if General Kamin and his army (Cuthbert) had made another mustard gas attack on the city hall. You know, it's a shame how those big bullies try to frighten a poor little defenseless commissioner and try to run his job, the old meanies. Something ought to be done about that. You never hear of the nice little banks, public utilities or the taxpayers' league trying to dictate to our politicians; they just go out in the vacant lot next to the city hall and hold a prayer meeting service or something.

Well, I finally got over to the funny sheet and was about ready to wind the clock, put out the cat and one or two other things when my eyes grew dim and I seemed to be floating through space to find myself setting on a soap box in front of a general store in a "hick town". At first I thought it was Knoxville or Atlanta, but I heard somebody say, "Well, we won another ball game today," so I knew it was somewhere else.

While the town looked strange, several of the people seemed to have a very familiar look. There was a tall sanctimonious old hypocrite, two small town bsuiness men, and an elderly couple looking at the place where a house ahd burnd down. I thought I knew them, but was not sure until a small red-headed girl with a big dog came up. I knew then I was looking at Orphan Annie, her friends, and the place where the Futiles' house had burned down.

The next person to appear on the scene was a tall, handsome man, wearing a tin halike Chief Bob Jones wears at a fire. Then he walked up to the crowd within air of authority and commenced asking questions, I recognized my old friend, Paul Aymon, the fire mshal.

Paul said: "Mr. Chairman, distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen, I represent the American Federation of Labor and the great state of Tennessee, and it my duty to investigate the cause this fire, and I insist that you answer my questions truthfully to the best of your knowledge and belief I caution you, Mr. Pinchpenny, not to say anything that would incriminate you, as I am finally going to place blame on you. Now, Mrs. Futile, how long have you lived with your pretty husband, and does he snore? Well don't answer me now, I want your answers in writing. Have you any enemies in town? Yes, I know you have lots of friends or will have as soon as you collect the insurance money but I am particularly interested your enemies. Did you leave any matches around where the mice could get to them, or was there any fire around the house between you and the insurance company? I would like an amplified statement from you in regard to the meaning of sponous combustion. Do you read Shpeare, and have you any other habits? Did you harbor any wilenals on the premises except yourband? What kind of cigarettes do you smoke? Do you cook on a umade stove? Can you recite 'Ten Nights in a Barroom,' and how far is the hotel?"

About three a portly-dressed young man up about three sheets in the wind said, "What's going on, govern to old man Pinchpenny. When he spied him he said, "Come here young man, I am the fire marshal I have been looking all over for you. You're Elmer Pinchpenny, aren't you?" "Yes, sir," said Elmer, "it wasn't me set the house on fire as dad. I saw him." "I didn't do anything about the fire," said. "What I want to know is can I get some good beer in this."

About the a pan of water was rudely dashed my face, and I heard my wife George, if you don't quit smoking cigarettes in your sleep you are to set the house on fire. You burned a big hole in that new sleeping jacket I got you for Christmas with soap wrappers, and that you appreciate it. Get up from and go to bed." I did.

The Passing

Note and Comment on Things Doing

Many a young American, gazing upon the first glass of real beer he has ever seen, wondering whether to blow off the collar or drink it, will think that here, after all, is just a glass of beer, brewed by rote, uninspired, like so much sarsaparilla or molasses.

Hanley's Peerless Ale used to advertise that the discovery of fermentation lies buried somewhere in the mists of antiquity.

And beer itself has been brewed through centuries. William Penn, it is said, introduced beer into America in 1664—a long, long time ago.

Beer didn't go so well in the young America. The English settlers preferred their stronger drinks. It seems they wanted "kick."

It was the coming of great numbers of Germans, and the coming of lager, that gave beer, its big boom in the United States. From 1840 to 1895, the brewing industry grew with increasing pace, until a billion-gallon annual output was reached.

Bottled beer came along, but it, too, had a hard time. Not until after 1907 did it gain much popularity, but after that it came into wider use, until 20 per cent of the output was bottled.

There is a certain romance about the business of brewing. And there is a faithfulness about the lovers of beer. As for the beer itself, there is the magic of tiny yeast cells, working away, growing and multiplying, to turn grain and hops into delectable beverage. There are the enormous vats, the huge and shining copper kettles. And there is the brewmaster, almost a legendary figure through these many years. Whatever may be his surroundings, it is the brewmaster who makes the beer. What finally flows into the glass and down the throat is the product of his artistry.

Plenty of old time beer drinkers, and no doubt plenty of brewmasters, will be willing to quarrel with the findings of a San Francisco brewer, who, in the old days conducted something of a blindfold test and announced that the average man knew nothing about beer. He seated twenty men at a table and, one after the other, he set before them unlabeled glasses of beer, to show that without their eyes they could not tell which

Always demanding the UNION LABEL and SHOP CARD is evidence that you are a real live member of organized labor.

Let Get Together And Pull Together!

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-label products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not give to this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Organized craftsmen are asked to see that their label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence that goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

Argument heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assume that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare that or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consult taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find a second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

STATE HEALTH HEAD WARNS OF ILLNESS AMONG JOBLESS

Dr. Thomas Parran, of New York, Tells Medical Society 16 Per Cent of Destitute Idle Are Ill and Suffering Progressive Deterioration of Morale.

New York City, April 13.—An alarming picture of mental and physical deterioration among the destitute employed was painted by Dr. Thomas Parran, Jr., New York state commissioner of health, in an address before the Medical Society of the State of New York and broadcast over station WOR.

Dr. Parran declared that home relief is fast undermining the morale and character of those receiving it, and he expressed the opinion that unless useful work is provided for idle now dependent upon charity "our self-sufficient, upstanding American will become a lower order of being, full of resentment and inner rebellion that may become dangerous as well as degrading."

Reporting on an investigation made by trained public nurses last December in the homes of 1,600 families in New York state receiving public relief, Dr. Parran said:

"We found that the head of the typical family had been out of work for about twenty-two months and had been receiving relief for about nine months; that there were between four and five persons in each family, and that upon the day of the nurse's visit one person in six among these families, or about 16 per cent, was ill. More than half of these illnesses had received no medical attention whatever.

"Despite the best efforts of local relief officials and of private physicians, the health needs of these families are not being met."

Dr. Parran went on to say that the unemployed are not getting adequate food and added:

"I fear very much that the attitude of helpfulness, the sense of being beaten, the loss of initiative, self-reliance and courage, has taken something out of the lives of our people which will not be restored in this generation. Students of mental hygiene have already noted alarming reaction patterns among the unemployed.

"We can repair any material damage. We can rebuild cities destroyed by earthquake or fire; we can even recoup losses from plague or pestilence. But we cannot for years, and perhaps generations, repair losses to human character and mental health which are now resulting from our mismanagement of human factors during these years of the locust."

A MECHANICAL DESPOTISM

By H. E. BOOTE
Editor, the Australian Worker, Official Organ of the Australian Workers' Union.

We can't go on being oppressed by the machine. Something will have to be done about it.

Man is a reasoning animal. It is hard to believe it when you look at the world today. There is not much evidence of reason in the present situation of the human race.

Nevertheless it is true that man possesses the power of reasoning, and that he makes use of it. Is it not unthinkable, therefore, that he will much longer permit himself to be the slave, the victim, of a thing he has himself brought into being?

The machine has turned millions of men into drudges.

They are not born to live, but to toil, and at monotonous tasks, in which it is impossible to take any deep-down interest—tasks that awaken no creative impulses, and give no esthetic satisfactions.

Nor is that the worst. The machine renders other millions of men superfluous.

It will not even allow them the status of servitude.

Thus we have what is called the unemployment problem. It is really the problem of the machine.

And matters have come to such a pass that we've either to subdue the machine or go right under to the most degrading tyranny that mankind has ever known.

Vast numbers of our species would be better off if the mechanical achievements of modern times were wiped clean out of existence, and the clock were put back to the age of handicraftsmanship.

That can't be done, and we wouldn't do it if we could.

But the machine has got to be broken to the service of mankind. It has got to be used to minimize toil, and put prosperity into every home.

That can be done. Steps must be taken to insure that it is.

SUBSISTENCE GARDENS PROVIDE VEGETABLES FOR MANY JOBLESS

New York, April 27.—Subsistence gardens, by means of which many thousands of the unemployed are being enabled to supply their own families with greenstuffs for the summer and canned and root vegetables for the winter, are an important development in present relief plans, says a statement made public by the charity organization department of the Russell Sage Foundation.

These gardens are usually set up by the community itself through a special garden committee. Since the persons to be aided seldom have any resources, everything is supplied. Suitable land can usually be obtained free. Garden tools are often loaned, seeds are furnished free. Since January, 1933, the Reconstruction Finance corporation has ruled that federal relief funds may be applied to the purchase of such seeds.

Two plans of organization are common. One provides individual garden plots, each assigned to one unemployed man or one family. In other communities the large-unit garden is adopted. Here all the gardeners work at assigned tasks in a general community garden.

The investigators find that "for a cash outlay of from $5 to $10 per plot, depending on its size and the amount of contributed material and services, the average family can be supplied with all the greenstuffs needed for summer consumption, and with canned and root vegetables sufficient for the greater part of the winter's supply."

North Carolina Unionists Lashed; State Labor Demands Investigation

Raleigh, N. C.—Lashing of labor men has broken out again, to bring forth hot condemnation from organized labor in this state.

Two weeks ago, I. M. Richie, Central Labor union secretary at High Point, mill town, was taken six miles from town, beaten with a rubber hose and forced to drink a quart of castor oil.

Police were furnished with the license of one of the kidnap autos, but have taken no action. They also were given the name of one of the kidnapers, to no avail.

FARM BILL IS HELD BOUND TO INCREASE COST OF LIVING

Washington, April 27.—Commenting on the farm relief bill now before congress, the monthly survey of business of the American Federation of Labor says: "The farm bill provides a bonus for farmers who reduce their acreage, in order to lift farm prices. This bonus would be raised by a tax on the product paid by the merchants who handle it. This amounts to nothing less than a sales tax on food and clothing, two vital necessities for all of us. It is bound to increase cost of living and reduce buying power of other groups while increasing that of the farmers."

Don't get swell-headed. The cheers that you are getting today may be jeers tomorrow.

UNION PICKETS JAILED IN WEST HAZLETON, PA.

West Hazleton, Pa.—Burgess Kubitsky sentenced twelve members of Local No. 481, of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers, to pay a fine of $2.50 each or serve two days in jail for doing picket duty in front of the Diska stores here.

The picketing sentence was one of the outcomes of the antiunion campaign initiated by the management of the Spaulding Baking company of Binghamton, N. Y., which has branch bakeries here and in Hazleton, Shamokin, Norristown, Scranton and Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

The pickets, who were specifically charged with "loitering," carried what is termed sandwich signs and promenaded back and forth in front of the nonunion establishment without speaking to or molesting anyone. The picketing was absolutely peaceful. But Burgess Kubitsky claimed it was "loitering" and imposed the fines with the alternative of jail sentences. The pickets went to jail.

UNION CO-OPERATES IN EXHIBIT SHOWING MAKING OF POTTERY

Washington, April 27.—In co-operation with members of the United Potters association, the National Brotherhood of Operative Potters recently demonstrated the making of pottery and china at an instructive and interesting exhibit in Woodward & Lothrop's department store here.

The exhibit included the pugmill (claymaker), jiggerman and batter out (forming plates and flatware), thrower (demonstrating the old method of hand-potting) and the forming of hollowware, bakers and dishes. A feature of the exhibition was a tunnel kiln, giving the effect of a tunnel kiln in operation.

Six demonstrators aided in the exhibition, which attracted much interest. The exhibition will be shown in leading stores in other cities.

Jobs and Payrolls Reach Record Low Marks in March

Employment Down 4.2 Per Cent for Month, Contrary to Usual Seasonal Trend, Bureau of Labor Statistics Reports.

Washington, April 27.—Employment in manufacturing industries fell 4.2 per cent in March as compared with February, while payrolls decreased 8.2 per cent, the bureau of labor statistics, United States department of labor, reported. The sharp decreases were attributed to the national banking holiday in March.

The falling off in employment and payrolls was contrary to the usual March trend. While losses have been reported on several occasions since 1923, the average change from February to March in the last ten years has been a gain of 0.4 in employment and 1.2 per cent in payrolls.

The bureau's index of employment in manufacturing industries stood at 55.1 for March as against 57.5 for February. The March index for payrolls was 33.4 compared with 36.4 for February.

The new levels represented declines of 14.6 per cent in employment and 30.7 per cent in payrolls over March of last year.

Anticipation of legislation legalizing beer helped the beverage industriec, the index of employment increasing from 64.8 in February to 76.2 in March. Payroll totals showed an increase from 49.7 to 58.4.

The March figures marked new lows in employment and payrolls. The employment index fell 0.2 per cent below the low point of July, 1932, and the payroll index was 6.7 under the previous low of January, 1933.

Two of sixteen non-manufacturing groups reported on by the bureau showed gains in both employment and payrolls, the building construction industry reporting an increase of 0.2 per cent in employment and 3.3 per cent in payrolls and the quarrying and non-metallic mining industry reporting a rise of 0.9 per cent in jobs and 2.1 in payrolls.

Governor Lehman Appoints Sullivan to Liquor Board

Albany, N. Y.—Gov. Lehman appointed John Sullivan, of New York City, president of the State Federation of Labor, to be one of the four members of the state liquor control board which will take over the regulation of the 3.2 per cent beer and wine traffic on June 1.

Mr. Sullivan has been president of the state federation of labor since 1926 and for five years before that was a member of the executive committee. He was the first president of the New York City Central Trades and Labor council when that organization was established in 1916.

Under Gov. Roosevelt Mr. Sullivan was chairman of the state committee on industrial safety. He also served as a member of prison labor commission and of the temporary unemployment relief commission.

Reminds Cuthbert Is Only "Loaned"

Reminding the Chattanooga labor movement that T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of Central Body, belongs to Nashville and is only "loaned" to Chattanooga to show how live wires work, the Labor Advocate of the capital city in its last week's issue comments on the re-election of the former Nashvillian and says "We told you so."

The Advocate has this to say about the matter:

Although the voting was "fast and furious," as reported by our good friend, Robert M. Cooke, in the Chattanooga Labor World, T. R. Cuthbert was again re-elected secretary-treasurer of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council last week, without opposition.

As predicted last year by the Advocate, when Remy was first elected to this important position, he has rendered such efficient service to the cause in Chattanooga that it would have been impossible to defeat him, even though some one had been brave enough to make the race.

Remember, Brother Cooke, we told you last year that Remy belonged to Nashville, and that we were "lending" him to Chattanooga to show how live wires work. How about it?

DOPE ON THE ELECTRICIANS

Yowsah! A lot of things have happened since my last contribution. We got a new president, got beer back and Little Willie Irvin stepped out and got hisself a wife. My dog-gone tooth got well, and the baseball season has started up again.

Boy! Can't a lot of things happen in a short time. Looking back, it does seem like a lot has happened, and a lot more has happened than I mentioned above, but I was just trying to hit the high spots.

TEACHERS RE-ELECT ALL OLD OFFICERS AT REGULAR SESSION

All old officers of Local 246, American Federation of Teachers, were re-elected at a regulad meeting of that organization last Saturday morning, the membership obviously being pleased with progress made under the first administration. Among other business transacted, seventy new members were initiated, and it was announced that applications of sixty-odd more are now being considered by the board of directors.

The teachers' organization has had a remarkable growth since its formation only a few months ago, the membership now numbering in excess of 800, and including a vast majority of both city and county teachers. Able leadership and an unusually keen insight into the philosophy of the labor movement has marked the progress of this Chattanooga's newest affiliate to Central Body, and Local 246 has assumed a commanding position in the family of American Federation units which has for its purpose the development of social and economic betterment for the masses.

The officers re-elected are: President, Stanton E. Smith; vice-presidents, Miss Zada Crouch and G. M. Swingley; financial secretary, Mrs. Minnie Rogers; treasurer, G. Leslie Poe; recording secretary, Miss Lassie Munsey.

Woll Says Perkins Bill Would Make Serfs of Workers

A. F. of Executive Declares Proposals Would Outlaw Strike and Collective Bargaining and Make Toilers Virtual Slaves.

Washington, May 4.—Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor and president of America's Wage-earners' Protective conference, addressing the house labor committee, made a slashing attack on the bill proposed by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins as a substitute for the Black 30-hour week bill.

Woll told the committee that enactment of the proposals submitted by Miss Perkins would make serfs of American industrial workers; would permit of criminal prosecution of those who refused to abide by the findings of the secretary of labor, without any opportunity provided for a review by any tribunal, thus denying to the workers the right to strike; would force American labor into the political and revolutionary field; would penalize domestic producers for domestic and export trade while favoring products of foreign countries, thus stimulating production in branch factories in foreign countries.

Woll also declared that the Perkins bill would abolish the right of collective bargaining; could be used to set aside present contractural relations existing between organized workers and employers of labor; would modify the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction law which labor fought for so many years to secure; would make the low wages of unorganized workers the maximum wages which organized workers might be forced to accept, and would place in the hands of the secretary of labor the authority to socialize all American industries.

Physician Champions British System of Health Insurance

New York.—The British health insurance system was championed by Dr. G. F. McCleary, former senior medical officer of the ministry of health of Great Britain, in speaking before the house of delegates of the Medical Society of the State of New York. Dr. McCleary said the British system had brought adequate medical treatment to whole classes of persons who did not receive it before and had improved the standards of medical practice in England.

State Official

DAVID HANLY

Appointment, by Commissioner of Labor W. E. Jacobs, of David Hanly, legislative chairman of the Tennessee Federation of Labor, to be superintendent of the workmen's compensation division of the department of labor, was announced this week from Nashville, and Mr. Hanly has already assumed the duties of his new post.

Placing of Mr. Hanly in this important position will be a matter for gratification to hundreds of friends throughout the state, and will add strength to the state government organization.

As legislative chairman of the federation for many years, Mr. Hanly has evidenced a particularly keen interest in the administration of the workmen's compensation law, and is perhaps more familiar with its provisions and manner of application than any other man in the state. That he will prove exceptionally able in administering the law will not be doubted by anyone familiar with his activities along this line, and both Gov. McAlister and Commissioner Jacobs are to be congratulated on this unusually fine choice.

Mr. Hanly is known to many readers of The Labor World not active in state labor affairs for his weekly review of the legislature respecting labor legislation during the bi-ennial sessions of the general assembly.

He has for many years contributed an interesting, accurate and unbiased weekly resume of such actions, and in connection with felicitations upon his selection to this state office, The Labor World again makes public acknowledgment of his courtesy in thus favoring this paper and its readers.

MINERS' CHIEF IS VICTIM OF GUARD'S SLUGS

Graham Struck Down by Assassin's Bullets.

STREET IN WILDER SCENE OF MURDER

President of Local Union Was One of Best-Loved Strike Leaders.

Nashville, May 4.—Byron (Barney) Graham, president of Wilder local union, United Mine Workers of America, was shot and instantly killed last Sunday evening on the main street of Wilder by Jack "Shorty" Green, a mine guard of the mining section. Ten bullets were fired into Graham's body by Green and his accomplices as Graham walked down the highway towards home. The killing occurred immediately in front of the company store. Green is said to have been seated in a car, and according to eye witnesses, cursed Graham and opened fire, at the same time that two other men opened fire, and in rapid succession between fifteen and thirty shots were fired, ten taking effect in Graham's body. It is not known that Graham was armed, but it is reported that he did not draw his gun, if he had one. A gun was found in Graham's left hand, with the safety still on.

After Graham had fallen to the ground he was beaten over the head

IDLE ELECTRICIANS MARKING TIME AS BOSSES STAND FIRM

"Nothing to report," was the answer of E. E. McDaniels, business manager of Local 175, Electrical Workers, when asked by The Labor World this week for news concerning developments in the virtual lockout of members of that craft by most of the large electrical contracting concerns.

Refusal of certain of the contractors to sign a new agreement with the local union was followed last week by the "return for cancellation" of contracts signed by several others. Subsequent negotiations have developed nothing definite pointing toward a settlement, said Mr. McDaniels, although he admitted hopes were held of eventual adjustment of the difficulty.

The Cofer Electric company and the Hall Electric company are the only two local commercial contracting concerns which now employ members of the union, Mr. McDaniels said.

House Committee Told Work Hours Must Be Reduced

Citing Increasing Unemployment, Labor Head Emphasizes Need of Passing Restrictive Legislation.

Washington, May 4.—Representatives of organized industry and organized labor stood shoulder to shoulder in urging restrictive measures to curb unemployment, increase the buying and consuming power of the nation, and establish a minimum base under the wages of women and children employed in industry.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Gerard Swope, president of the General Electric company, defined before the house labor committee the steps in connection with the pending Black restriction-of-hours bill through which industrial balance and equilibrium may in their judgment be restored.

Mr. Green favored reduction of hours of employment, and also suggested that controlled production be undertaken "as an experiment." He expressed his opposition to government controlled and fixed wages, except as a minimum for women and children.

Mr. Swope said that his company with 60,000 employes is operating now on less than thirty hours of work a week for each employe.

"We have spread out the work," he continued, "and each employe is at least able to take care of his family. I favor a minimum wage for women and children, and I think it should apply as well to unskilled labor. I think if minimums for each of them is established, the wages of more skilled classes of labor will take care of themselves."

Mr. Swope asserted that the most serious threat to American industry at the moment is the importation of foreign goods as a result of depreciated currencies of other countries.

"I do not think," he added, "that reduction of hours of work in other countries would make much difference. A Japanese laborer turning out 1,000 or 2,000 machine-made articles in a day is paid from three to six cents a day. The element of labor cost in each one of those articles is so small that it makes little difference whether he is paid his present wage or twice his present wage, or whether his hours of labor are extended or reduced."

Mr. Swope pointed out that the severe difficulty confronting "big industry" in this country today is the small and more or less irresponsible employer who has reduced his wages and number of employes to the lowest possible point, and has "under-cut" both wages and prices of those industries which have sought to keep men employed and assist them in surviving the depression.

Innumerable laws are enacted with teeth in them, but in nine cases out of ten experience shows the teeth are false.

'RECOVERY' BILLS FOR INDUSTRY AND RAILROADS DRAFTED

Full Government Control Planned Under Measures Now Being Prepared.

Rail Bill Strongly Opposed by Unions---Both Proposals Safeguard Right of Collective Bargaining and Ban "Yellow Dog" in Efforts to Restore National Prosperity.

Washington, May 4. — Complete control of industry through a national board modeled after the war industries board is reported planned in a "national industry recovery act," which will be one of the administration's biggest guns in the war on the depression.

The bill is designed to stabilize industry, through preventing overproduction and ruinous price cutting, and to increase employment and purchasing power.

By the provisions of the bill, the anti-trust act and federal trade commission act would be set aside and the proposed national board given power to designate any industry as one affected with a public interest. Price fixing under government supervision would be authorized for the period of the emergency and a plan... self-organization of industry through trade associations put into effect. The act would safeguard collective bargaining and outlaw the "yellow dog" contract.

If the plan is adopted, it is said it will be a substitute for the Black 30-hour bill and the substitutes for the 30-hour bill proposed by Secretary of Labor Perkins.

Board of Seven Planned.

The bill would provide for a board consisting of seven members, headed by the secretaries of commerce and labor. The other members would represent labor, finance, commerce, agriculture and the public. Industrial and trade associations would be set up to correlate production with demand, and establish prices of commodities at fair levels.

Each trade association would have on its own board a representative of the government board of seven. Before the national board could approve prices and trade arrangements planned by the trade associations the national body would have to have all the facts at hand, obtaining them through its own agents and through data furnished by the trade association.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation would be authorized to make loans to any plants needing funds.

Individuals, partnerships, corporations and associations would be licensed under the bill to operate in accordance with the provisions of the measure. Licensees would have to agree to guarantee to employes the right to bargain collectively and to be represented by spokesmen of their own choosing and would also have to agree not to seek to compel employes to sign "yellow dog" contracts.

Green Approves Labor Sections.

Asked to comment on the reported labor sections of the bill, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, said that they met with the approval of labor. He also approved the licensing provision, as in line with action taken by the last A. F. of L. convention.

The proposed "national industry recovery act" does not include the railroad industry, which is to come under a separate bill setting up a federal co-ordinator of transportation under the president. It is proposed that the co-ordinator have the power to relieve the railroads from the restrictions of the anti-trust law, the interstate commerce commission act and state and federal laws for the period of a year. The railroads would be divided into three groups, Eastern, Western and Southern, with each group ruled by a regional co-ordinating committee of five members. The purpose of the scheme is to further efficiency and economy.

The bill provides that the right of collective bargaining shall be preserved and the proposed measure would not amend or modify the railway labor act or contracts entered into under that act. Another provision specifies that the co-ordinator shall provide means whereby central committees representing railway labor unions in each of the ...oups "shall be advised of any contemplated orders requiring changes in services or operation which will affect the interests of the employes, and he shall confer freely with such committees before issuing any such order."

Rail Labor Opposes Bill.

The railroad bill met the strong opposition of railroad labor, which, through George M. Harrison, acting chairman of the Railway Labor Executives association, declared that it saw "no justification for drastic reductions of essential transportation ...ned int... est may be paid on idle capital.

"Communities deprived of adequa... and competitive rail transportation will be further depressed," Harrison said. "Thousands of railway workers will be added to the breadlines. Economic recovery will be retarded by this further deflation of business and labor."

Declaring that the railroad unions will do all in their power to have written into the law adequate safeguards for the protection of railroad employes and workers in allied industries, Harrison added:

"We shall insist that this intolerable deflation of labor by cutting down jobs and wages, deepening the depression and steadily degrading the standards of American life, must stop.

"The railroad 'economy' program will not save the railroads. It is another measure of that false economy which is destroying the railroads and the other industries of America.

"Saving money and starving men is the road to ruin. Spending money and saving men is the road to national recovery."

NOTICE, SECRETARIES

Each month the organizer for this district is required to send in a report to the American Federation of Labor headquarters. In order to make the report really mean something, all secretaries are requested to mail at once to T. R. Cuthbert, care Labor World, a report covering the following questions:

1. Percentage of members working.
2. Prospects of trade.
3. Organization activities.
4. Percentage of your industry unorganized.
5. Detailed report of other items of importance.

These reports are very valuable, and it is hoped that all secretaries will co-operate at once. My report must leave here by May 15.

30-Hour Week in Klumac Mill Would Give Jobs to Many Idle

Salisbury, N. C.—The Klumac Cotton mill here is working three shifts of eight hours each daily on a full time schedule for all machinery for the first time in two years. Even the rug mill has started up with 100 employes and with large orders reported on hand. The adoption of the 30-hour week in this plant would provide jobs for 25 per cent more workers.

No "Frills" Here

Commissioner Wilkerson, discussing the Muscle Shoals development for the Chattanooga Times, was quoted Tuesday morning as follows:

"The advantage that will accrue for Chattanooga are incalculable."

Which may not be English as she is spoke, but anyhow it's the truth, and, after all, isn't that what counts in this good day of frills and furbelows?

What Next!

Two inventors have recently shown models of the "cotton house." The house is principally of heavy canvas laid about a framework of metal standards. Some of the designs shown were merely for week-end use, consisting of a square structure of several rooms. Other designs are more elaborate and are meant for more serious use. The cotton walls are of double thickness with a layer of insulation between the two and after the material has received a coat of it resists the weather effectu-

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Is organized labor supporting the payment of a "dismissal wage" to government employes who are discharged as a result of the campaign to reduce government expenses?

A.—Yes. Committees from the various unions having jurisdiction over workers in the government service are now drafting a bill for payment of "dismissal wages."

She Told 'Em

It took a woman member of the lower house of the Maryland legislature to set one of the big steel corporations down in its place and win a partial victory for a compulsory unemployment insurance bill.

Miss Lavinia Eagle was the woman and she took the floor to flay the Bethlehem Steel company, of which Charles M. Schwab is the executive head, for lobbying against the measure.

She charged that the steel concern had allowed 1,200 of its employes to go to charity for help and then had objected to paying three-tenths of 1 per cent of its payroll into a security fund under the bill.

"It is the narrow and sordid attitude such as displayed by the Bethlehem Steel company which will bring down upon our heads the same situation the bankers brought on in the world of finance," the woman legislator said.

The bill had seemed doomed to defeat but after her speech, it was carried by a vote of 72 to 27. The bill was beaten in the upper house, unfortunately, but ultimate victory for unemployment insurance in Maryland is certain.

Children Forced to Strike

An almost unprecedented thing, a strike of child workers, is going on in Allentown and Northampton, Pa. Child workers in shirt and pajama shops in the two cities have been driven to strike by astonishingly low wages and wretched working conditions.

Wages actually as low as 15 cents a week are known. Unscrupulous employers have taken advantage of the fact that the children's parents are out of work to hire the boys and girls at wages that are lower than the pay of child workers in China and Japan.

Low wages paid children are menacing the living standards of all workers and the profits of business. Starvation pay is starting a vicious circle of low buying power that hits back at the employers, which they will realize more and more as time goes on. The only remedy at present seems to be legislation to make sweatshop wages, hours and working conditions impossible. The quicker such legislation is adopted, the better for the nation.

Mr. Farley Makes an Announcement

Postmaster-General Farley has announced that Edward F. McGrady, A. F. of L. legislative committee member, is to be assistant secretary of labor. If the announcement has thus far come from no other source we may assume Mr. Farley knows what he is talking about.

On that assumption, this newspaper rises to remark that the McGrady appointment is the best yet made; bar none.

Edward F. McGrady "yesses" no man. He has quick wit. He thinks soundly. He sees a long ways ahead of his nose. He has the willingness to fight, amounting almost to eagerness. He has courage.

The McGrady appointment just about makes a certainty of the observation that the "Little Cabinet" is to be more important in this administration than the big cabinet.

Union Made Pottery Shown

The Brotherhood of Operative Potters deserves a big credit mark for a bit of good work. In co-operation with a half dozen employers of union pottery workers, the union has been taking a splendid exhibit from city to city for exhibition in leading department stores.

America makes as good pottery as can be found anywhere. American union pottery workers are as expert as the world has anywhere. And there are employers who know their worth.

This demonstration of co-operation is a credit to the union and to the employer. Wherever this exhibit is shown, union members should see it and join in the tribute to American union craftsmanship in this industry, as well as to the good sense of the employers who know the value of good will to their industry.

Cuba and Sugar

The Cuban ambassador has been to the White House. Upon emerging he has said the president talked to him about Cuban economic conditions, and sugar. There have been stories about a preferential for Cuban sugar, to give the island a "break."

Cuban conditions are terrible. Starvation is in evidence everywhere—except where tourists go. A preferential would help to relieve some suffering.

But if President Roosevelt or anyone else believes that a bit of gain in conomic conditions will still the conflict between the Cuban masses and the bloody Machado dictatorship, he simply doesn't know the full truth.

Cuba is torn today by a peculiar civil war that will end only when Mr. Machado is out of office. The United States ought to get wise to that important fact.

SCHOOL BOOK PUBLISHERS LOCK OUT UNION TYPOS

Philadelphia, May 4.—Forgetting that it depends upon public support for its patronage, the John C. Winston company, of Philadelphia, has locked out its union employes in the composing room.

Publisher of public school textbooks, which in several states can be used only if produced either under union conditions or where at least the prevailing rates of wages are paid, this concern decided to risk loss of business in its arbitrary action to slash the accepted standards of employment.

Negotiations had been conducted by the employers of union labor and representatives of the union, whereby a proposed reduction of 7½ per cent in the wage rate was accepted by the union. From the first the Winston company declined to enter into the general negotiations, and arbitrarily fixed the rate at which it would permit the men to work. All efforts of the union to have the company abide by the result among all other employers were in vain. Finally the company locked out its men because they could not give it special consideration, which would be unfair to the other employers.

NEW JERSEY'S JOBLESS RELIEF NEED IS PUT AT $8,000,000

Trenton, N. J.—New Jersey must have $8,000,000 to $12,000,000 in addition to what is left of a $20,000,000 bond issue to finance unemployment relief to the end of 1933, John Colt, relief director, informed Gov. Moore.

During the first half of March, Mr. Colt said, there were 115,000 families, totaling 489,300 persons, on the state relief list. Expenditures were at the rate of $2,500,000 per month. This amounts to a trifle more than $5 per capita, or 17 cents a day for each person, a figure which scarcely hints that jobless Jerseyites are idling in luxury. There has been a steady increase in the number of unemployed since last August, Mr. Colt told the governor.

Gov. Moore declared he would call a conference of legislative leaders to consider the situation and that he hoped a loan could be obtained from the Reconstruction Finance corporation. This would require approval of the voters, the governor said, and pointed out that the question could be submitted at the election next November.

A certain wholesaler who had a lot of trouble in getting a mall-town retail client to pay his bls finally lost patience and wrote the merchant a threatening letter. He received the following repiy: "Wha do you mean by sending me a letter like that? Every month I place d my bills in a basket and then figure out how much money I have to pay on my accounts. Next, I blindfold my bookkeeper and have her draw out as many bills from the basket as I have money to pay. If you don't like my way of doing business I won't even put your bills in the basket."

A well-known writer visited a jail to take notes for an article on prison life. On returning home he described what he had seen, and his description made a deep impression on the mind of his little daughter. A week later the writer and his little girl were in a train which stopped at a station near a gloomy building.

"What is that place?" asked a passenger.

"The county jail," another answered promptly.

Whereupon Mary embarrassed her father and aroused the suspicion of the other passengers by asking in a loud, shrill voice: "Is that the jail you were in, daddy?"

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March

"Hot oil" is a new term in American industry. It's like hot money. It's contraband. It's oil that escapes state tax and doesn't go through the pipe lines.

Big rewards are out for those who catch the dealers in hot oil. Dealers in hot oil probably are making big money.

Well, there is a cause back of this evil, as there usually is. Perhaps the heavy state taxes have caused some bootlegging of oil, but the pipe lines have caused more. Here again is the penalty of hoggishness.

Pipe lines come pretty near being big company monopolies and they have been used to gouge and choke the little fellows. So, today America has hot oil and a great war between the "independents" and the monopolists.

We read in the newspapers that the president may call upon the Red Cross to help feed the unemployed.

If that comes to pass, then let it be hoped the Red Cross may first recover from its idea that it is the rich and the idle meddlers and that the needy are "subjects" and "objects" and "cases."

The Red Cross is just finishing the distribution of some five million bushels of wheat and the nasty, superior attitude of at least some of the Red Cross agents in that work would create fury in the breast of anyone who could afford to let fury get the better of discretion—and of hunger!

Why must an agency of mercy be that way? Well, one reason is that in the communities of America it is run by those who have the time for such things and when you know that you know almost surely the type that will be found generally running the show.

Mary Anderson, director of the United States women's bureau, says that the average factory women in the country today earns considerably less than a living wage and backs up her statement with figures on women's wages in various industries and localities.

This breakdown in women's earnings is particularly disturbing, as it is common knowledge that wage standards for them have always been below those for men. Ample evidence of this difference is found in the bureau of labor statistics reports, over the 11-year period [illegible] which show that in va[illegible] woman-employing indu[illegible] average earnings were [illegible] per cent of men's. W[illegible] were less than 70 pe[illegible] in more than three-quarters cases.

In view of this data to [illegible] women's wages have [illegible] it is encouraging to see the extended interest in many states [illegible] means of preventing the [illegible] breakdown in pay and wage standards built up over [illegible] counteracting the increased cut-throat competition with its tendency [illegible] stitute cheap women labor for [illegible] wherever possible.

Labor is on the soundest possible ground in insisting that inflation will have a harmful effect on the [illegible] of the people unless wages are raised at the same time. [illegible] labor is behind rising prices [illegible] the first to suffer when the prices that inflation will bring, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor points out. The deleterious effects of current inflation can only be offset by increases in wages and through an increase in the mass purchasing power of the nation.

ELECTRIC TAX SHIFTED TO POWER COMPANIES

Washington.—The iniquitous Harrison-Crisp tax penalizing consumers of electricity has been transferred to the power companies under a new amendment to the revenue bill repealing the federal gasoline tax and lowering the postage rate on drop letters to 2 cents.

Friends of the power companies were caught napping by Representatives Whittington, of Mississippi, and Cochran, of Missouri. Completely surprised, they rallied desperately and put up a stiff fight for the public utility interest, but were unable to stem the tide.

In the original revenue bill the house put the tax on the companies but by an alleged senate trick it was shifted to the consumers and so passed through conference. Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, and Representative Crisp, of Georgia, who engineered the deal, now are numbered among the "lame ducks."

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-label products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This the main point in their favor.

Argument is heard that union-label products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to ask that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Is it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created, and if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

Maine Woolen Mill Closes; 125 Workers Lose Their Jobs

Oxford, Me.—The Robinson Woolen company mill here has been shut down for an indefinite period, throwing out of employment 125 workers for whom there seems to be no other source of livelihood in sight.

[illegible] W. Stanley, superintendent, said the shut-down was compelled by lack of orders, and that there would be no chance of reopening until sufficient orders for fall delivery had accumulated to assure resumption of profitable operation.

Richmond, Va.—Mayor J. Fulmer Bright vetoed a further 15 per cent cut in the pay of city employes.

In a message accompanying the veto, Mayor Bright told the city council he hoped Richmond would lead the way to early restoration of salaries to both city employes and teachers, in the fact of an almost certain increase in living costs to follow currency expansion.

GREEN URGES FAIRNESS IN DEALING WITH EMPLOYES OF U. S. GOVERNMENT

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, issued the following statement this week in reference to a dismissal wage for government employes which was submitted to the house appropriations committee as a substitute for the compulsory 30-year retirement proposal of the budget bureau:

"The American Federation of Labor, in co-operation with the American Federation of Government Employes, has prepared a dismissal wage bill for submission to congress. It is hoped that this measure will be favorably acted upon and become a law at this special session of congress.

"The bill provides that employes of the federal government shall be entitled to a dismissal wage after a minimum period of service of one year has been completed, the amount of the dismissal wage paid to each dismissed employe of the federal government to be determined by the length of service of each employe so dismissed. For instance, the bill provides that,

'In calculating the dismissal wage, the compensattion to be paid under the provisions of this shall be based on the total length of service of the employe, and the average monthly basic salary, pay or remuneration received during the twelve months immediately preceding the date of dismissal of the employe.'

"A fair, just and equitable dismissal wage law would, in operation, soften the blow which employes dismissed from the service of the federal government are bound to feel. It will help tide the dismissed employes over the very difficult period between their dismissal from the employ of the federal government and the date when they may find new employment in other lines or in ither callings.

"The payment of a dismissal wage has been made by a limited number of employes in private industry. There are instances where workers who have been displaced through the introduction of machines have been paid a dismissal wage. The wage thus paid has proved to be a very great economic and social benefit. It would seem but fair and just that the federal government should set an example to private industry by providing for the payment of a dismissal wage, particularly at this time when it is the announced purpose of the government to reduce the number of workers employed through consolidation of departments, the merging of others, and through a general dismissal of working men and women. Many employes of the federal government are being dismissed each day and each week. As a result they are forced to make immediate adjustments in living standards. None of these employes so dismissed are prepared for such an experience. It seems cruel, indeed, to dismiss workers abruptly, turning them loose to shift for themselves at a time when the opportunity to secure new employment is very limited, indeed.

"Let the government be just in dealing with its employes, let it apply justice to dismissed workers by paying them a sum of money classified as a dismissal wage, meager though it may be, but helpful to the distressed worker at a time when such help is badly needed.

"The representatives of the American Federation of Labor and of the American Federation of Government Employes are determined to appeal to congress to deal fairly and generously with dismissed government employes by enacting a dismissal wage measure into law."

MISSIONARIES ASK U. S. TRADE FOR LOW WAGE JAP PRINTERS

Preachers of the Gospel in Japan Forsake Business of Saving Souls to Solicit Business at Expense of American Wage-earners and American Wage Spenders, Printers' Ink Reveals in Comment.

New York City, May 4.—The American Baptist Foreign Missions society seems to have been put "on the spot" as a promoter of cheap wage importations.

Printers' Ink, magazine of executives and the advertising world, has done the job neatly.

Printers' Ink publishes a letter dated at Tokio Feb. 4, telling Americans that because of the dollar-yen rate of exchange, Americans can get more printing for their money if they have it done in Japan. The letterhead bears the cable address "Baptisma, Tokio," and lists Spencer Kennard as foreign secretary, with John Fullerton Gressitt as treasurer.

The letter, signed by Mr. Kennard, follows:

"To Whom It May Concern.

"Dear Sirs:

"The present rate of dollar-yen exchange with Japan seems to offer us rather unusual opportunities for economizing upon your printing.

"Press work and binding in the Far East, normally, is much less than in America. Today, with the currency depreciated by 60 per cent and costs little changed, you are able to get your printing done here for less than one-half.

"We should be glad to cooperate with you in taking advantage of this situation. Even a little saving should prove to you a great asset in meeting the slashes in your budgets.

"Distance from Japan, you will find, figures but little. On jobs ready in final form for press, three months should be reckoned liberal allowance for extra time required. Unless there is an unusual rush of work, or a need for manufacturing special materials, this time can be yet further shortened.

"As to quality, the printing and binding of books, pamphlets and periodicals here is fully equal to that of western countries. We have no hesitation to assure you of a high grade of work.

"Work undertaken now helps to relieve world unemployment and the universal depression. We hope, therefore, that through the offer of our services publication work which you otherwise would find unprofitable, or have to postpone, you can undertake at this time.

"Enclosed you will find detailed information as to types, printing materials, and prices, etc.

(Signed) "Spencer Kennard, "Secretary."

"Here is a curious situation, to be sure. A call to the Baptist board of missionary co-operation in New York reveals the fact that Spencer Kennard, on the editorial committee of 'The Christian Graphic,' is a Baptist missionary, and that J. Fullerton Gressitt, treasurer of the publishing committee of Shin-Sei-Sha, is also treasurer of the American Baptist Foreign Mission society in Japan.

"It would seem logical for these men to stick to their jobs as missionaries instead of (at this time of all times) emphasizing that the depreciated yen offers an opportunity to American manufacturers to get cheap printing in Japan at the expense of American wage-earners and wage-spenders.

"In this letter we are asked to give Japanese workmen a printing job while we maintain, on the privately financed dole, American workmen whose jobs have been lost by a depreciated currency exchange advantage. And, unless the letter is a fake or a forgery, American missionaries are lending their names to procedure which is not going to win them any good-will, to say the least."

Nesbit Urges Minimum Wage For Illinois Women Minors

Washington.—Congressman Walter Nesbit, of Illinois, urged the legislature of that state to enact promptly a minimum wage law for women and minors after the New York statute, as recommended by President Roosevelt in his recent communication to the governors of the states in which employers have used the depression to victimize women and children.

"The bill the president asks you to enact would grant minimum standards of life to women and children whose industrial well-being is not now geared to our social welfare," Congressman Nesbit said.

"We cannot attain economic health at the cost of undernourished and exploited women and children. The tragedy that threatens directly affects not only the women and children of today but future generations of Americans."

"Nine American states now have minimum wage laws as a result of the urging of labor and other social minded groups," Mr. Nesbit concluded. "In this type of legislation we lag behind many foreign lands.

"It is my earnest hope that Illinois will eagerly and speedily acknowledge her obligation to those in whose well-being and security rests the future destiny of our country, and that our legislature will accede to the president's request."

Man (rushing to rescue a woman who had slipped on the cement pavement)—Did you fall?

Woman—Oh, no. I just sat down here to see if I couldn't find some four-leaf clovers.

MORE ABOUT MINERS' CHIEF

with the butt of a revolver, inflicting four deep cuts. Dr. Collins, who examined the body, said that these blows were sufficient to kill Graham in themselves.

None of Graham's comrades were near him at the time of the killing. It is reported that Graham had been marked by the gunmen and that they had been laying for him for months. On Sunday night Graham was alone. Graham told Howard Kester, who was one of the dead leader's closest friends, he expected to be killed any time.

When the shooting occurred many people were in church just across the road from the company store. A crowd soon gathered around the body, and no union man was allowed to approach the body. James Crownover, one of the first to reach the scene, said he was told by a guard that if he advanced toward the body he would be "riddled with shot."

The strike at Wilder has been in progress since July 8. Graham's devotion to the union and his knowledge of how to carry on a strike made him the most dangerous enemy of the company. Graham never hunted trouble, and would walk out of his way to avoid it. The mountain men always said of him, "Barney minds his own business."

The body was taken to Livingston, where it was prepared for burial. The U. M. W. of A. provided the funds for the burial.

The funeral was held at 2 o'clock in Wilder cemetery, on a hill overlooking the mining community. About 700 union men, women and children met the body about one mile out of Davidson, and, two by two, marched down the highway through Highland Junction to Wilder, where they circled the spot where Graham was killed. Then they marched to the cemetery, where they were joined by several hundred other friends and comrades.

Mrs. Graham, who was ill at the time, was brought to the cemetery in an auto, but was too ill to witness the service. Mrs. Graham, who has been suffering from pellagra for months, though stricken with grief for her dead husband, told Howard Kester that she, too, was prepared to "die for the union, as Barney has."

The services were conducted by Rev. Johnson, a union miner who is also an itinerant mountain preacher. Johnson said that Graham was a victim of his efforts in trying to defend the right of the miners. Howard Kester, who has been feeding and clothing the striking miners and their families for months and who was a close friend to Graham, spoke. He said that he believed no truer leader of the people ever lived than Barney Graham. His loyalty and devotion to them had brought about his death, and out of it would grow a new determination to win the strike. He pleaded for unity and courage and for protection fer the family left destitute. He told the miners that Graham was powerful though dead, and that his spirit would be carried on. "This is not the end; it is only the beginning." He asked that all bow their heads in silence for one minute in memory of their departed leader and comrade.

William Turnblazer, district president, U. M. W. of A., closed the services. He said that Graham was one of the many working men who had given their lives for the freedom of the working people, and that he would be enshrined in the hearts of workers all over America.

At the conclusion of the services all of the miners filed by the bier of their dead leader and placed a sprig of evergreen on the casket. Slowly and with heavy hearts the hundreds who had come to pay homage to their departed comrade and leader walked to their homes.

immediately attempted to arouse the attention of the people to the enormous importance of this hearing. But The Labor World was the only paper that carried my interview.

Based on this publicity, we were able to focus the attention of the country upon the hearing. Later, when we went to Washington to secure Senator Norris' aid in checkmating the action of Maj. Fisk and the army engineers in their willingness to give the Tennessee river to the power trust, we carried with us copies of The Labor World, which aided materially in enlisting the interest of the veteran lawmaker and others in the matter.

NEW YORK PRINTERS DRIVE FOR LOCAL TRADE

50,000 Union Men Join With Employers in Campaign to Keep Orders From Being Diverted to Other Cities.

New York.—Union printers have united here with employers in a campaign to induce local users of printing to place their orders exclusively with New York City shops, according to announcement by Frank N. Rodman, president of the Printers league section of the Employing Printers' association, on behalf of a joint committee of union and employer printers.

Mr. Rodman estimated that 50,000 union printers will co-operate in the campaign to improve business for plants here having $25,000,000 invested capital and paying annual wages of more than $15,000,000, with gross yearly sales totaling $40,000,000. The drive will co-ordinate work hitherto undertaken separately by the "Big Six" Typographical union and the Printers' league.

Textile Mills Plan Price Boost for 30-Hour Week

Boston, Mass.—The belief that congress will enact the Black bill banning from interstate commerce the products of establishments where labor is employed more than six hours per day or five days per week led representatives of many textile mills and commission houses to make a new sales clause on invoices which read: "In addition to the prices stated herein, buyer agrees to reimburse seller for any additional cost resulting from federal legislation limiting the days or hours of labor."

It was not apprehended that the mills would experience any trouble in operating their plants to capacity if necessary under the shorter hours regime, declared the American Wool and Cotton Reporter, the official journal of the mill owners. There are so many jobless textile workers throughout New England that authorities on the labor situation expressed the belief there would be no difficulty in obtaining sufficient operatives to man the looms two, three, or four shifts, as required.

As to wages, the usual conclusion among mill owners and managers was that labor cost increases would run to 30 or 40 per cent, although some mill men expressed the view that where labor is paid on the piece-work basis it will not be necessary to increase the rates.

Lehigh Valley Silk Mill Employes Get Wage Boost

Bethlehem, Pa.—A 10 per cent wage increase was given employes of the Warren plant of the Lehigh Valley Silk mills in the adjoining borough of Fountain Hill, effective immediately, according to announcement by T. F. N. Gray, general superintendent.

Unpaid Teachers Besiege Chicago Banks; "To Hell With Trouble Makers!"—Dawes

Chicago, May 4.—"To hell with trouble makers!"

This is what Charles G. Dawes, ex-general, ex-vice-president, ex-ambassador to the court of St. James, ex-chairman of the Reconstruction Finance corporaion, from which he borrowed $90,000,000 to save his bank fom blowing up last summer, tol a delegation of teachers who invaded his sanctum sanctorun to plead that his hardly salvged City National Bank and Tust company buy board of educaion tax anticipation warrants to hlp pay them back salary amountig to $39,000,000.

It seems as though the dougly "Hell 'n M'ria" might at lest have whacked up a part of tht federal "dole" he got with te needy teachers. But no, he cosigns them to the blistering abode of his satanic majesty te Devil, and slams the door in the faces, closing his bank for a hour and a half in the busy pa of the day.

Two other of the five bi "loop" banks, the Harris Trus company and the Northern Trus company, closed their doors temporarily when 5,000 school teachers invaded the financial district seeking assistance, and police were stationed at the doors of the others to maintain order. The police, whose pay also is in arrears, made little effort, however, to make the teachers move on.

About 200 teachers passed the guards at Melvin A. Traylor's First National bank by showing pass books, and once inside pinned "unpaid teachers" badges on their coats and called for the "boss."

Mr. Traylor sent down word from the board room, upstairs, and a delegation of three went up and conferred with him nearly two hours.

He told the delegation they could prevent a complete breakdown of the local government only by getting behind the Chandler committee which is trying to sell tax warrants and obtain state legislation to speed up collections.

With SWP the painter finds it much easier to hide an old, discolored surface. This is because its extremely fine ground pigments make a closer knit film of greater opacity. It costs more to make SWP but its closer knit film doubles its protective value.

NEWS EDITOR ROUSES IRE OF CORRESPONDENT

Position on Short School Term Resented.

"FUNDAMENTALS" CRY AGAIN HEARD

Evening Paper Contends Child of 1880 Was Better Educated.

An editorial in Monday's issue of the Chattanooga News, advocating a six-months' school term, and declaring that the child of 1880 was given a better education than the modern youngster, roused the ire of several delegates to Chattanooga Trades and Labor council when it was read to that body by a member Monday night as a matter of information.

Local trades unionists expressed regret that the afternoon paper had apparently joined the reactionaries in their campaign against the public school system, and resentment was general.

A correspondent of The Labor World waxes sarcastic in a communication received this week, and indicates scant sympathy with the views of the editorial writer in the evening paper.

"It would seem," he declares, "that the News should devote itself to a twelve-months' program for equalized taxes instead of endeavoring to cripple the advantages of our children."

The communication follows:

Editor The Labor World:

The Chattanooga News' editorial writer evidently fired the opening gun for the further curtailment of our public school system in an editorial in Monday's paper. There are so many ambiguous, fallacious and misleading statements in the editorial, that much could be said of it.

To quote this editor, who must take his annual trip to Europe to keep his mind broad, and to relax from the worries of plebian duties: "We would rather have a child of ours learn the magic of Shakespeare's thought than to learn all about making dresses or cooking spaghetti." Rather! Now, if this editor should ever lose enough caste to be forced to come down to the lower levels, we think a little knowledge of spaghetti cooking and dressmaking would be of more concern. As things are now, one does not expect his child if any, to ever have to cook or eat spaghetti.

Further, the child of 1880 had a better real education than the child of today is given, the News says. How silly! Even their figures of per child expense are incorrect. They deplore the fact that more equipment is given the modern child with which to face life. The child must not be modernly equipped, yet the News would not dare compete with the Times with the machinery of 1880. Only recently the News made a large outlay of money to buy the latest thing in newspaper presses. Why could not the paper be printed on an 1880 press?

The News advocates a six-months school term. What would the all-wise "economists" do with the child the other six months of the year? What would they have done with the teacher the other six months of the year? And which six months would they choose in the child's life each year to develop its brain? Would they allow their children to be taught six months and allow the other six months to be lost, and even forget what was taught previously?

It is true, as well as trite, that fundamentals are of prime importance. But it is that extra polishing and training that allows our children to make their way in this highly specialized era. The numerous birdhouses that seem to bear most heavily on the mind of the writer of the editorial one can readily recognize as illy-resorted-to sarcasm. Birdhouses must be glutting the market if our school systems are teaching their construction as assiduously as is pretended.

One might also note that our commissioner of education eagerly pounced on the birdhouse phase in Thursday's News, and said, "Me too." He must say something in defense of his actions, and lo and behold, he brings forth birdhouses to justify himself. The commissioner is in charge of the vast program which he decries—why did he allow it to continue? Does this commissioner seriously propose that the elimination of birdhouse building will leave only six months of valuable teaching in the curriculum?

It would seem that our great daily paper could devote itself not to crippling the rearing of our children and limiting their education to six months, but to vigorously pushing a twelve-months program of honesty in tax assessments and tax-paying. A lot of hullabaloo and lather about frills and fundamentals in schools will always be out of place just so long as the per capita expense of the education of our Chattanooga children is as low as it is at present.

New Unemployment Total Is Higher Than Any Previous Figure

Alexander Hamilton Institute Makes Public Statistics Showing Worse Conditions Than Reported from any Other Source.

New York City, May 11.—More than 17,000,000 Americans have no jobs and no chance of getting any immediately. The Alexander Hamilton Institute has made public a report on unemployment that shows a condition worse than has been reported from any other source, exceeding the A. F. of L. figures on unemployment by some four million.

The institute reports that today's average income of those at work is $640 a year, against an average of $1,157 in 1929. The report asserts its figures are from government sources, but its figures on unemployment are larger than any the government has issued. The report says that whereas the government reported three million idle in April, 1930, in reality six million were idle and the estimates have been too small ever since.

It is asserted by the institute that 4,156,000 were idle in 1929, so that 12,878,000 have been added to unemployment totals during the depression.

"It is evident, therefore," says the institute, "that the unemployment problem was already a serious one in 1929, although it was not generally recognized and that consequently the situation today must be viewed from the standpoint of total unemployment rather than from the standpoint of the increase in unemployment during the depression."

By occupations unemployment is listed in the report as follows: Manufacturing, 5,846,000; agriculture, 1,253,000; wholesale and retail trade, 2,951,000; building, 2,186,000; railroads, 803,000; coal mining, 423,000; miscellaneous, 3,713,000.

The number of workers available for all occupations is given as 49,845,000; the number of employed as 32,811,000.

Why Not Cut Big Insurance Salaries, Labor Paper Asks

Toledo, O.—"Why not trim the big insurance company salaries?" asks the Toledo Union Leader, official organ of the Toledo Central Labor union, pointing out that an investigation in Wisconsin revealed the payment of fat salaries to the heads of insurance companies which do business in the state.

"It was found," the Union Leader says, "that the average salary paid to life insurance presidents was $50,000 in 1932, with many receiving much above that figure. Five presidents, for example, received an aggregate salary of $675,000, an average of the modest little sum of $136,000 each. One life insurance board chairman received $96,000 and another $101,000."

While insurance company officials' salaries and insurance company rates have continued at their old high level, wages of workers in public and private employ have been unmercifully slashed, the paper says, and asks:

"Why in their zest for economy, don't the economy shouters direct a part of their efforts toward the big insurance companies and the big private utility companies?"

Local Labor Disputes Multiply As Business Activity Increases

CHAIN OWNER ADVOCATE OF LOWER WAGES

McDonald Voices Queer Business Philosophy.

HOME STORES PLAN WEEKLY NEWSPAPER

Will Import an Operator. Again Placed on Local Labor's "Unfair List."

Former President Hoover made a grave mistake in 1929, when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders whom he had called into conference at Washington, that wages of working men and women would be maintained as a basis for the return of prosperity. Had the industrial leaders at that time slashed workers' pay in half, the depression would now be ended. And the end will never come until wages are cut further and further.

Such is the sage philosophy of Mr. Roy McDonald, manager of the Home Stores, a local chain grocery concern, as related to representatives of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council who called on the merchant Thursday in an effort to have him consider the claims of organized labor in connection with a weekly paper which he is to sponsor in addition to his grocery chain. The embryo publisher stated, incidentally, that while his publication would be a weekly, he is "casting wistful eyes" at the daily newspaper field, and the trade union representatives were duly impressed with the possibility of a new daily for Chattanooga in the near future.

The chain-store merchant stated, impressively, that he is an individualist, and indicated considerable pride in the statement that combination of competitors had failed to check his onward march to fame and fortune.

Operation of a union plant for his weekly newspaper, the merchant indicated, was unthinkable, because he could not prescribe the particular duties of each individual employe. In other words, if the management desired that the linotype operator also keep the books or due janitor work, such operator, being an employe of the firm, should be happy to thus favor his employer.

The visit of Central Body representatives to the merchant was the result of a communication received Monday night from Chattanooga Typographical union, No. 89, asking assistance of the parent organization in efforts of the local union to convince Mr. McDonald that the employment of union printers in the publication of his weekly would be the best policy, committees from No. 89 having failed to get any satisfaction from the prospective publisher on this point.

Mr. McDonald plans to broaden his plans of business operation in Chattanooga by reviving a weekly which relinquished the field only recently, known as "Bleacher Bill's Sports Journal," and edited by E. T. Bales, former sports writer for the News. It is understood Mr. Bales will be retained as editor of the revived publication.

Appeals of the local Typos, a number of whom are unemployed, failed to impress the new publisher, who apparently preferred to import his force.

Labor in Chattanooga has formerly had considerable trouble with McDonald, and he was for some time on the "unfair list" of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council. The Home Stores have again been placed on this list, as has the weekly paper, and Chattanooga Typographical union has begun an extensive campaign of publicity, appealing to advertisers for support in their efforts to keep Chattanooga workers employed.

The Home Stores' slogan is "Home-Owned, Home-Operated." It is not known whether the proposed new weekly, which is scheduled to make its appearance soon, will carry the same lines at its masthead.

Henderson-Coleman Refuse Settlement

Henderson & Coleman, dealers in men's clothing and furnishings at 1000 Market street, will remain on organized labor's "unfair list," according to Central Body officials, until such time as the firm decides to meet reasonable requirements for a return of friendly relations with union workers.

Acting upon a request made in a letter read at Central Body Monday night, the executive board called on the firm this week and endeavored to adjust differences which have existed for several weeks, and which arose over the employment of non-union building tradesmen. The letter from Henderson & Coleman expressed a desire to "make peace" with the workers, but, the executive board reported, members of the firm declined to sign an agreement that organized labor would be employed in the future.

Although the concern was formally declared "unfair" several weeks ago, it was pointed out, no active publicity campaign has been thus far carried out, it being the belief that the controversy might be satisfactorily adjusted.

Geo. K. Brown Co. Breaks With Union

A definite break between organized labor and the George K. Brown company, operators of a soda fountain and a sandwich shop on Market street, resulted last week when the Brown company ignored organized musicians and employed a non-union orchestra to play a two-weeks' contract.

Every offer of the officials of Local 80, it was reported, was refused by the proprietor of the concern, and the non-union outfit was even employed for an extra week after their contract was completed, it was said. Pickets were placed near the store in order to notify the public of the situation, after efforts of Central Body's executive board had failed to impress the management.

Soddy Hosiery Mill Workers Walk Out

Forty-five knitters employed on the night shift at the Soddy Hosiery Mills left their jobs this week, because, according to a spokesman for the strikers, the mill management failed to keep an agreement to restore wage cuts which were taken voluntarily this spring in an effort to co-operate with the management.

A representative of the strikers said this week that some time ago the management appealed to the workers to take a substantial cut in pay in order to complete a contract from the Red Cross. It was declared, the spokesman said, that the order had been taken at a very low price, and co-operation of the workers was necessary if the company made any profit. The workers agreed to the cut, he said, on the promise that when the order was finished the wage would be restored. However, when this particular contract was finished the company refused to restore the wage, although the mill continued to work night and day. The strike followed.

Asked about the wage rates, the strikers' representative told The Labor World he had worked twelve hours per day for 95 cents, and this was a fair average.

The day force at the Soddy mill had not yet joined the strikers. There is no textile union at Soddy.

BEER BRINGS FIRST DISPUTE WITH DEALER

"Textile" Concern Refuses Union Contract.

DISTRIBUTE TWO NON-UNION BRANDS

Silver Stock and X-Tra Fine Products of "Unfair" Brewery.

The Textile Storage and Warehouse company, a local beer distributing agency, is the first local institution in this line to decline to employ members of Local 79, Brewery and Soft Drink Workers, according to officials of the union. Efforts of representatives of Local 79 to negotiate an agreement with the management were reported as fruitless, the concern taking the position that under no conditions would a contract be signed for delivery of their beer.

Although there are a few distributors who have not as yet formally signed, practically all have agreed and no trouble is expected with any others.

Disagreement with the Textile Storage and Warehouse concern was developed early due to the fact that officials of Local 79 received information from their international that two of the brands distributed by the company here are non-union — Silver Stock Lager and X-Tra Fine Pilsner. These brands were immediately declared "unfair" by the local union, and the matter was taken up with the distributors' management. In a resultant conference, union representatives reported, the distributors announced their non-union policy locally.

Officials of Local 79 have taken up the matter with all the above brewers, informing them of the position taken by the local distributors.

Executive board of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, acting on authority granted at Monday night's meeting of Central Body, has formally declared the concern "unfair to organized labor."

Illinois Sales Tax Used To Victimize Consumers

Chicago.—"The three per cent sales tax enacted by the Illinois legislature is being applied in a manner that can only be described as outrageous, illegal and utterly disgraceful," declares the Illinois State Federation of Labor Weekly News Letter.

"Persons of limited means who are obliged to make their purchases in small amounts are being compelled to pay a 'tax' of 20 per cent or even more.

"In many places throughout the state a one-cent alleged 'tax' is being collected by merchants on a five-cent purchase. A ten-cent loaf of bread, likewise, calls for the payment of a cent additional.

"Thus the working people of Illinois are being required to pay far in excess of the 3 per cent provided by law. Who gets the money? That's not the main point.

"The tax is 3 per cent, not 10 per cent or 20 per cent. And no one—not even the state itself—has any legal right to collect or to receive more than 3 per cent as sales tax. That is the law.

"The collection of more than 3 per cent is a violation of law and is criminal in that it amounts to obtaining money under false pretenses. The practice calls for drastic action on the part of the state administration without delay."

Federal Workers Should Have Legal Right to Organize

Washington, May 11.—The United States senate adopted the Bratton amendment to the District of Columbia appropriation bill which permits the officers and members of the district fire department to join labor organizations which do not use the strike for any purpose.

Washington, May 11.—All government employes should have the legal right to belong to labor unions, declared William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a letter to United States Senator Bratton, of New Mexico, urging unqualified support of the senator's amendment to the District of Columbia appropriation bill providing that the firefighters of the district may become members of the Internattional Association of Firefighters.

Declaring that the Bratton amendment meets with the hearty approval of the officers and members of the American Federation of Labor, Mr. Green said:

Right to Organize Is Vital.

"The American Federation of Labor holds that all workers whether employed by the government or in private industry, should be permitted to exercise the right to unite and organize for mutual helpfulness and for the purpose of improving their social, economic and industrial status. We regard exercise of the right of all working people to organize as a vital, cardinal right which should not be interfered with."

Strikes Prohibited.

The Bratton amendment provides "that no officer or member of the fire department of the District of Columbia, payment for whose services shall be made from this or any other appropriation made for like purposes, shall be prohibited from becoming or being a member of any organization so long as such organization does not permit, claim, hold or use the strike for any purpose whatsoever, notwithstanding anything heretofore to the contrary."

Public Is Protected.

Mr. Green pointed out that "such an amendment serves two very distinct and definite purposes. First, it guarantees the right of employes of the fire department of the District of Columbia to organize if they wish to do so. Second, it amply protects the District of Columbia against interruption in service and eliminates the threat of a resort to strike as a means of settling any dispute over wages or conditions of employment which may arise."

"Surely with such ample protection and with such established guarantees," Mr. Green concluded, "there can be no objection on the part of congress or of the people to the exercise of the right of the firemen of the District of Columbia to organize for mutual self-helpfulness."

"I trust that you and the members of congress will share with me this point of view. I strongly urge the adoption of the amendment."

Building Workers Strike On Batavia Hospital Job

Batavia, N. Y.—Strikes occasioned by the failure of subcontractors to pay their men have been the principal factor in delaying the completion of the United States Veterans hospital, past due here, until June 1, or later.

The latest strike is by plasterers, who claim they are asked to accept less than the standard wage set by the government. This is one of a series of strikes by various trades making the same complaint.

RAILROAD GIVES UP WAGE CUT SCHEME

Chicago.—The U. S. board of mediation has notified officials of the railroad brotherhoods here that the Rock Island railroad has given up its scheme to cut wages by asking employes to "voluntarily return one-sixth of their pay. The plan was recently denounced by A. F. Whitney, chairman of the Railway Labor Executive association, as an illegal attempt to cut wages. He charged the road's plan violated its contract with its employes and provisions of the railway labor act.

LABOR AGAIN WINS BATTLE FOR TEACHERS

Green's Plea for Protection Is Heeded.

PROTEST BLOCKS BACKWARD STEP

Washington, May 11.—The senate adopted the amendment to the District of Columbia appropriation bill prescribing that temporary teachers for the schools of the district shall be appointed from the eligible list. The amendment, sponsored by the American Federation of Labor, was presented by Senator Bratton, of New Mexico.

Washington, May 9.—A vigorous protest against legislative action lowering the standards for teachers in public schools of the nation's capital was made by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a letter addressed to each of the ninety-six members of the U. S. senate criticizing an amendment to the appropriation bill for the District of Columbia containing a stipulation relative to the appointment of temporary teachers and the filling of vacancies.

Eligible List Defended.

The amendment appeared to be conceived for the purpose of reducing the cost of public education here by paying lower salaries to teachers without directly attacking the salary schedules.

One provision of the amendment authorizes the appointment of "qualified" temporary teachers notwithstanding the eligible list.

"The word 'qualified' obviously has little meaning if the statute destroys the eligibility requirements for teachers," Mr. Green told the senators. "The amendment would in practice subject the children of the public schools to the care of less qualified teachers than they could have were this amendment not enacted."

Another provision drawing Mr. Green's condemnation provided that in filling vacancies in the public school system teachers now in the system shall have preference "so far as practicable." Mr. Green pointed out that "this provision would permit the appointment of new teachers possessing less than the legal eligibility requirements in place of retaining in the system legally qualified teachers when such changes would appear to be more 'practicable.'"

False Economy.

"I do not at this time," he said, "raise the objection to the appointment of temporary teachers as I am cognizant of the fact that the appointment of a 'temporary teacher' saves the government some money because the temporary teacher cannot be paid longevity re. teaching service before his appointment to the local system.

"However, if 'temporary teachers' were appointed from the eligible list the saving would likewise be effected, and the children of Washington would have the privilege of being taught by highly qualified teachers."

Protect School Standards.

To protect the schools against the lowering of teaching standards, Mr. Green urged the members of the senate to amend the bill by providing that for the fiscal year 1934 temporary teachers in the public schools of the District of Columbia shall be appointed from the eligible list, and that the words "so far as possible" be stricken from the bill.

"That the senate would needlessly and ruthlessly seek to destroy the standards of teaching in the schools of the nation's capital, as the proposed amendment would do, is to labor unthinkable," Mr. Green's letter concluded. "I trust that we may have your active support for these suggested changes to be offered to this bill when it comes up before the senate for consideration."

A device for the use of ordinary furnace oil in gasoline engines was recently demonstrated in an airplane at Newark, N. J. Using fuel oil instead of gasoline, an airplane flew twice around the Newark metropolitan airport and the test is said to have impressed a group of engineers and pilots. The device, invented by Alfred Schwartz, metallurgist and petroleum expert, has been given successful tests on an automobile.

Supers and Choristers Strike Holds Up Opera in Baltimore

Baltimore, Md.—The curtain was nearly an hour late rising on the performance of "La Tosca" by the French-Italian Opera company at the Maryland theater here when striking choristers and supers refused to go on until assured of their pay.

The house manager finally got things going by promising to hold all receipts until after the show and settle with the strikers even if the money had to come from the house percentage.

Even then the jinx wasn't satisfied, but turned intended tragedy to farce when a gilded chair collapsed and dumped the "wounded" villain on the stage to the accompaniment of gales of laughter from the audience.

30-Hour Week Makes More Jobs for Linen Mill Workers

Webster, Mass.—Adoption of the 30-hour week in several departments, coupled with an increase in orders, has added 300 new names to the payroll of the Stevens Linen works here in two weeks. Approximately 1,000 employes now are on the rolls, according to H. Wadsworth Crawford, Stevens agent.

Mrs. R. L. West, of Huntsville, Ala., writes: "I was weak and run-down. I had a pain in my side, and I kept losing weight. I grew nervous over my condition—this was unusual for me, for I am very cheerful when I am well and don't easily get nervous. I knew I ought to take something. My aunt told me I ought to try Cardui, which I did. I began to feel better. I kept it up until I had taken three or four bottles. My side quit hurting and I was soon feeling strong and well."

Cardui is sold at drug stores here.

Reactionaries Gain a Recruit

Friends of education, who have been forced to do battle with increasing intensity during the past year or two to defend the public schools against assaults of reactionaries, awoke this week to find that the "enemy" had gained a new recruit. Which of itself was of only passing consequence. The fact that the latest addition to the ranks of these reactionaries, however, is the Chattanooga News was disappointing and surprising to many who had considered the editorial policies of the evening paper at most times constructive and fair.

"We believe that a six-months' school term, if properly managed, could give as much benefit to children as a nine-months' term does now," the News declares.

Picking up the time-worn and long-discarded argument of the selfish reactionary who would deny to the American youth anything further than the opportunity to spell and write his own name, the evening paper then avers that the child who went to school in 1880 had a better real education than the child of today. "Readin', writin' and 'rithmetic," according to the editorial writer, should furnish enough information to prepare the modern youngster to go out and meet the serious task of competing for his share of the material and spiritual things of life. And the cost of such instruction is vastly less, it is pointed out, than that of the present system.

While there has always been with us the type of thought which would destroy our educational system as it stands today, it required considerable stamina up until recently for any individual to suggest a curtailment of public school activities. In the last few months particularly, however, when the world has gone "cockeyed" on the subject of economy, enemies of education have become increasingly bold, and the advocates of the "little old red schoolhouse," with the blue-backed speller as the principal stock in trade, have become more bold, and have cloaked their 1880 ideas under the cover of "saving money for the dear taxpayers."

In 1880, the News points out, the cost of educating a youngster was considerably less than it is today. And it is true also that the cost of printing a newspaper was somewhat less in the "good old days." Also the cost of maintaining highways was not so great. Police and fire protection did not greatly bother our citizenship; street lighting, parks and playgrounds, if any, were doubtless less expensive; sanitary conditions were the cause of no worry to the taxpayers. In fact, the expense of everything which enters into the existence of our citizens was vastly lower. But there was nothing to pay for.

It would be a fine thing, according to the viewpoint of some people, to return to those old days; but there are still many who believe in progress, and who are willing to pay for it. Among these are the fathers and mothers of children who have not the advantages enjoyed by the offspring of the "favored of the gods," who may be trained in the arts and sciences by highly-skilled and expensive private tutors.

The public school system has suffered some major setbacks during this depression, and will doubtless suffer more. But ere this generation has passed the cause of edueation will be triumphant, and the individuals who are now taking advantage of economic conditions to enforce their reactionary program will be relegated to a past era of economic thought, where they have chosen to place themselves through their activities in this emergency.

That the News would join in with this type of thought, we repeat, is surprising and disappointing to those who had regarded that paper as progressive in its editorial expressions.

A Spike in the Wheels

A member of the general assembly of the state of Tennessee from Manchester, ably supported by some 200 members of the Tennessee Valley Association of Chattanooga, is being credited with throwing a spike into the wheels of the well-oiled machinery of the Chattanooga and Nashville chambers of commerce in the organization of the river association at the capital city Tuesday of this week.

The Chattanooga association, an organization formed only a few weeks ago to promote the development of the Tennessee basin in accordance with the president's program, attended in force a called session at Nashville Tuesday which was worked up by the Nashville chamber for the purpose of organizing river boosters.

According to reports from the meeting, Chamber delegates particularly from Chattanooga and Nashville had "caucused" on Monday and prepared a nice program for the conference to adopt on the following day, having, it is reported, even selected all the officers.

The well-oiled machinery functioned perfectly, it was said, until Representative Maysilles injected into the proceedings his bombshell in the nature of an amendment to the by-laws providing that no person even remotely connected with the power interests be eligible to hold office in the new organization. The amendment brought on a sharp battle, but when put to a vote it was overwhelmingly passed.

This pronouncement on the part of the delegates will do much to inspire confidence in the sincerity of the organization's purposes. It is formed ostensibly for the sole object of assuring development of the river program in the interest of the whole people, and anyone interested in protecting power company's interests should have no place in the executive direction of the activities.

Individuals in the local Chamber of Commerce have not conducted themselves in the past in such manner as to inspire public confidence in their desires to see the river development carried out solely for the benefit of the whole people, and the result of Tuesday's meeting should put such members on notice that a great majority of the citizenship not only believe the president's program shall be put through without change, but they mean to make their position known to all and sundry, regardless of what has occurred in the past with reference to river development.

Labor's Rights in 30-Hour Week Bill

The determination of the American Federation of Labor to guarantee that the workers under the federal six-hour day and five-day week bill shall not be deprived of the trade union rights was reiterated by William Green, president of the federation, in a letter to Congressman Connery, chairman of the house labor committee.

In Mr. Green's statement in favor of the bill before the labor committee he urged the inclusion of this amendment:

> "Provided, that the workers in any mine, quarry, mill, cannery, workshop, or manufacturing establishment within the provisions of Section 1 of this act shall not be denied by their employer the free exercise of the right to belong to a bona fide labor organization and to collective bargain for their wages through their own chosen representatives."

In his letter to Representative Connery emphasizing the tremendous importance of his proposal, Mr. Green said:

> "I cannot believe that there will be any serious objection to this amendment. It is nothing more than a reiteration in a very condensed way of the public policy declaration of the United States which is included in the anti-injunction bill passed by congress a short time ago.
> "Surely working people have a right to organize and to engage in collective bargaining. Congress can very well indorse the exercise of such a right and make it clear in this legislation that no employe shall be denied the right to join a bona fide labor organization if he desires to do so."

There are twenty-one members of the labor committee of the house of representatives. When the committee roll is called on Mr. Green's amendment, the vote should be unanimous in its favor.

BY THE WAY

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

What a mess schools are in! Chicago teachers, unable longer to hold their wrath in check, walk up to Charles Minute Man Dawes and give him a piece of their mind.

Well, that may make the teachers feel relieved, but it will take more than that to save the school system generally.

A people buried in debt and joblessness find taxes just one more thing to get away from. Cities, badly run, with populations out of work are in a jam. The schools are punished.

But America cannot afford to let her schools suffer, though perhaps it may be well to get some common sense back into them. That is another matter, however.

The rich can send their children to private schools, which is what many of them do. The poor have to send their children to the public schools, which is right.

Labor leads all groups in support of the public schools. Labor stands for the public schools today, as through all the years.

The public schools cannot suffer without putting a penalty on democracy. Here is an issue worthy of America's best thought.

Don't let the school system go to pieces!

Now, more than ever, it is important that state departments of labor be maintained at the fullest measure of efficiency. With wage and working standards attacked on every hand, it is imperative that state labor departments be in a position to do everything possible to protect the workers.

State labor departments do not need to be a burden on the taxpayers. New York's labor department proves this. The cost to the citizens of New York in maintaining their labor department is less than 11 cents per capita, or 10.8 cents, to be exact. While this department furnishes a variety of needed and valuable services to the employers and workers of the state, it would seem that if only its activities in accident prevention were considered, the 10.8 cents per person is a small sum for anyone to contribute to the saving of life and limb and to the reduction of the huge economic loss to industry from industrial accidents and disease.

Predictions that Hitlerism would seek to destroy German trade unionism and German social-democracy have been fulfilled. At one swoop, Nazi storm troops on May 2 seized the offices of the great German labor movement and arrested many union officials, in what was termed an effort to end "Marxism," as the Hitlerites call the labor movement. Consumers co-operatives and socialist organization offices were also seized, as were labor banks. It is announced the unions are to be fused into a "vertical" organization with the employers.

So, at a blow, Hitler and his fellow gangsters seek to destroy what has taken generations to build up. Will the workers take the blow lying down and submit to seeing German democracy perhaps irrevocably smashed? On their action perhaps depends the peace of the world and weal or woe for generations still to come.

No more deadly thrust at prosperity can be imagined than the orgy of wage cutting that is fast bringing back sweatshop labor conditions of forty years ago. Unless a stop can be put to the come-back of the sweatshops and its attendant low wages and long hours, there can be no hope for business recovery. When will industry and business realize this and throw every ounce of strength into war against the sweatshop and all that it stands for?

The reduction in the basic wages of organized newspaper workers has been negligible, Editor and Publisher says, pointing out that when increased volume of advertising permits the employment of more men on full-time schedule, the organized crafts will be in a measurably better economic condition than the unorganized groups, whose nominal basic wages have been drastically written down since 1929.

"The printers," the Editor and Publisher adds, "will start the climb from a point possibly 50 per cent higher than that of other toilers, and 100 per cent above that of most employers."

Who says organization doesn't pay?

It costs no more in effort or money to secure UNION GOODS and SERVICE, if you demand and insist on them.

It's so awfully simple to demand UNION GOODS and SERVICE that it is simply awful more trade unionists do not do this important thing.

Labor Wins on Muscle Shoals

The revised text of the Muscle Shoals bill as it passed the United States senate includes the wage provision incorporated in the house bill at the request of the officials of the American Federation of Labor.

The provision stipulates that all contracts made by the Tennessee Valley Authority, which is set up to administer the vast projects coming under the Muscle Shoals scheme, shall contain a provision that laborers and mechanics employed on the work shall be paid "not less than the prevailing rate of wages for work of a similar nature prevailing in the vicinity." The same stipulation is applied to work done directly by the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The bill also contains the provisions that if disputes arise as to what are the prevailing wage rates, the matter shall be adjusted by the secretary of labor, who in determining the matter is required "to give due regard to those rates which have been secured through collective agreement by representatives of employers and employes."

This provision means that the union wage rate will be held to be the prevailing wage rate.

The wage-rate stipulation had already been adopted by the house of representatives. Its approval by the senate insures its retention in the final text by the senate and house conferees who will adjust the differences in the two bills.

$500,000,000 for Unemployment Relief

The approval of both houses of congress of the La Follette-Costigan-Wagner bill appropriating $500,000,000 for the relief of the unparallel distress among the thirteen million unemployed workers and their dependents is a distinct achievement for the American Federation of Labor.

For month after month officials of the federation, knowing the intense suffering among the masses because of the failure of state, municipal, and private charity to provide the destitute with the commonest necessities of life, have urged the imperative need of a large federal relief appropriation upon the government. By the enactment of the La Follette-Costigan-Wagner bill the position of labor receives legal sanction.

The relief fund of $500,000,000 is divided into two equal portions.

One sum of $250,000,000 will be used to grant relief to the states by means of allowances, paid quarterly, equal to one-third of all public moneys expended by a state and its subdivisions on unemployment relief.

The remaining $250,000,000 will be used for grants of any size to states when it is found that funds available within a state, combined with the money received under the regular allotment, are insufficient to meet relief needs.

The $500,000,000 will be provided by the Reconstruction Finance corporation. The fund will be administered by a federal emergency relief administrator paid a net annual salary of $8,500.

Hitler's so-called storm troops have put German trade unionism out of business. Today there is no such thing as trade unionism in Germany. In the matter of labor regimentation Germany is on a par with Russia. The whole procedure is maniacal.

So much of the world as still clings to freedom and democracy must condemn Hitler's crazy move. Better failure in freedom than success under such tyrannies as those of Stalin, Mussolini and Hitler. That which is called failure by so many is in fact success.

Our question is: Where will the tide of regimentation stop? Or will it stop? Today's impossibility is tomorrow's actual fact.

It behooves democracy to function, to live and to grow. It is stalemate in democracy that gives Napoleonic ambitions their opportunity.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

TEXTILE WORKERS ASK QUICK ADOPTION OF 30-HOUR BILL

Philadelphia, May 11.—An emphatic protest to the administration and to democratic leaders in congress against reported sidetracking of the 30-hour week bill has been made by leaders of the United Textile Workers in this city.

"The situation in American industry today is so critical that congress simply cannot afford to postpone consideration of the revised Connery-Black bill now being considered by the house committee on labor," W. F. Kelly, vice-president of the United Textile Workers, said in a letter to Senator Joseph T. Robinson, democratic senate leader. A copy of the letter was sent to President Roosevelt.

Declaring that prompt governmental regulation of industry is imperative, the letter said:

"Business and industry cannot stand the strain of unregulated action any longer. The bankruptcy of individual firms might not mean so much if it were possible to isolate the effects of one failure from the whole section of industry in which it operates. Business difficulties will most certainly force an uncontrolled inflation with ultimate disaster.

"Members of the United Textile Workers of America in Philadelphia, as elsewhere, are emphatically in favor of the bill as amended by Secretary of Labor Perkins. We welcome the application of minimum wage regulations for men as well as women during the period of this emergency. Such minor disagreements as have been expressed on this measure must not be used as a pretext to delay a measure which is at least as urgent as currency reform or farm relief."

The practical trade unionist always demands the union label, shop card or button.

3 Contractors Indicted for Violating Federal 8-Hour Law on Public Works

Baltimore, Md., March 4.—The first indictment ever returned in this district under the 40-year-old federal statute forbidding contractors working employes more than eight hours a day on government jobs has been returned by a grand jury in United States district court against the general contractor, his superintendent and a sub-contractor on the recently completed Cumberland postoffice.

John Campbell Grant, trading as John Grant & Son, Cleveland, Ohio; John F. Fraser, the superintendent, and Sherman J. Hasbrouck, sub-contractor, Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, face trial on thirty-six counts. Hours worked varied between nine and one-half and thirteen daily, it is charged. William H. Talkin, assistant district attorney, and Simon E. Sobeloff, federal prosecutor, presented the case to the grand jury.

Stock Market Activity Provides Work for Long Idle Telegraphers

New York City, May 4.—Renewed activity in the stock market is bringing back men who have in many cases been idle as long as two years.

Some of America's most skilled Morse telegraphers are going back to work in brokerage shops.

Some of these men show up at division headquarters plainly showing the loss of weight and the lines of worry. They show up, too, in clothes that are worn and often patched, eager for a call to work a trick.

If they are called at all it means a minimum of $10—more money than many of them have seen in months.

LABOR ASKS PRESIDENT TO BACK GREAT PUBLIC WORKS PROGRAM

A. F. of L. Executive Council Calls on Roosevelt to Urge Support of at Least $5,000,000,000 Outlay to Provide Jobs—Enactment of 30-Hour Week Bill Declared Imperatively Necessary.

Washington, May 11.—Stressing the seriousness of the unemployment situation, the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor called upon President Roosevelt to urge him to support a public works program of not less than $5,000,000,000. The council also asked the president to back the 30-hour week bill and told him there should be an immediate halt to wage cutting.

The public works program asked by the council would include public buildings, road building, naval construction and shipbuilding, reforestation, flood control, soil erosion control and self-liquidating projects such as slum clearance, grade crossing elimination, housing and state and municipal enterprises.

"While labor realizes that a public works program of this character would not provide a complete remedy for unemployment," the council said, "it would in operation create work opportunities for a very large number of people who are idle."

In asking presidential support of the 30-hour bill, the council said it believed that the enactment of the bill is imperatively necessary if the problem of unemployment is to be dealt with in a constructive way.

Wage Cutting Assailed.

The council expressed grave apprehension over the economic and social effect which the wage reduction policy pursued by both the government and private industry is having upon the minds and lives of the laboring people. It expressed the opinion that the time had come when a halt should be immediately called to the imposition of wage cuts and instead wage increases must be inaugurated in order to avoid a further decline in buying power which might result from currency inflation.

The president was asked to appoint labor representatives on the American commission to the world economic conference in London in June. Labor is of the opinion, Mr. Roosevelt was told, that the recommendations and the point of view of labor upon economic, social and industrial questions should be submitted directly by representatives of labor when questions of this character are considered at the London conference.

The problem of the railroad workers in railroad legislation was discussed and the council urged that dismissal of railroad workers through consolidations be avoided. The president was advised that the A. F. of L. was giving hearty support to the railroad workers in the policies which they have outlined regarding railroad legislation and the protection of those employed on the transportation lines of the country.

The labor executives directed the attention of the president to the tragic situation which prevails in the mining industry. The president was told that miners employed in the non-union fields are forced to accept a rate of pay far below a subsistence wage and bad as conditions are in the agricultural industry they are obviously worse in the coal mining industry.

The council urgently requested the president to call upon congress to enact legislation recommended by the officers of the United Mine Workers of America, which is designed to stabilize the coal mining industry and to guarantee to the miners decent wages and the enjoyment of decent conditions of employment through the exercise of collective bargaining participated in by representatives of their own choosing.

Those who desire better living and working conditions must do their share to secure them. Demand union made goods and service.

NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS OPPOSE UNION CONTROL OF 5-DAY WEEK

New York City, May 11.—The American Newspaper Publishers' association, meeting here, said it didn't like the five-day week as applied by the International Typographical union.

The association adopted a resolution presented by Harvey J. Kelly, of Indianapolis, chairman of the special standing committee, that declared the association shall not recognise any rule or law of the I. T. U. "which contemplates union control of the sixth day." The resolution said the five-day rule is unsatisfactory and increases costs.

Union printers say that the five-day week in newspaper composing rooms is working satisfactorily and that the publishers are seeking an excuse to pick a fight with the union.

Utility Is Ordered to Cut Book Value of Properties

New York.—Striking a blow at public utilities' practice of carrying properties on their books at inflated values, the New York public service commission ordered the New York State Electric and Gas corporation to correct its books to show the true value of certain parcels of land and water rights.

The commission found that properties which did not cost the Associated Gas and Electric system more than $2,275,000 when bought from outsiders were placed on the books of the New York State Electric and Gas corporation at $6,500,000.

The commission reported that at eight hearings it was revealed that the $6,500,000 was to "cover a purported sale to the New York State Electric and Gas corporation of certain parcels and of land and water rights consisting of hydroelectric plants and undeveloped sites located on the Ausable, Battenkill, Kallkill and Chateaugay rivers."

The report charged that the cost of the properties, including improvements, was $2,271,668. "It is significant," the commission said, "that the New York State Electric and Gas corporation did not apply to this commission for permission to acquire these properties or to distribute the cost of the same on its corporate books, as it was required to do by the uniform system of accounts."

Cloth Hat and Cap Workers Strike Against Low Wages

New York City.—Sweatshop conditions and inadequate wages have forced out on strike 1,500 members of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' union employed in 225 shops here, according to announcement by Nathan Spector, manager of the union's joint board.

The strike followed a mass meeting presided over by Max Zaritsky, president of the union. Settlements will be made, it was stated, only with individual employers who are financially responsible or whose payment of wages agreed upon is guaranteed by jobbers or others who are financially responsible.

Gov. Olson Signs 54-Hour Bill for Women and Minors

St. Paul, Minn.—Gov. Floyd B. Olson has signed the 54-hour week bill designed to protect women workers in Minnesota industry. It supersedes four old bills which failed to remedy conditions under which women were compelled to work in restaurants and stores.

Labor unions and welfare organizations have fought for twelve years for such small protection for women workers as is provided by a nine-hour day, and it is hoped that the fact that some of the legislators advocated a 30-hour week, as proposed in the federal congress, may presage something better to follow for Minnesota women workers.

Fifty-Hour Week Applied By Hudson Motor Company

Detroit, Mich.—The Hudson Motor Car company now is working its commercial car department six full days a week in order to speed samples and orders for its new half-ton units.

The regular schedule in other departments calls for five and one-half days of nine hours each for the week. Driveaways, some to far distant points, are being organized for dealers unexpectedly pressed for early deliveries.

With workers called on for an average of 50 hours weekly now, the adoption of the 30-hour week in the Hudson plants could provide jobs for two-thirds more workers than under the present system.

Seventy Employes Scrapped When Maine Silk Mill Closes

Westbrook, Me.—Seventy employes were thrown on the scrap heap when the Haskell plant here, Maine's only silk mill, closed down permanently after operating nearly sixty years.

The business was founded by James Haskell and has been owned ever since by the Haskell family. It at times employed as many as 140 workers, and the parents and grandparents of many of the workers who are now "ditched" after a lifetime in the mill were among the founder's first employes.

Vegetable Gardens Provided For Unemployed of Ashland

Ashland, Pa.—Unemployed here are clamoring for the opportunity to raise their own foodstuffs this summer on vacant lots leased by the borough to be converted into garden plots.

According to Dr. J. L. Hoffman, president of the borough council and treasurer of the local Red Cross, 273 unemployed had applied for ground allotments even before the arrival of seed and fertilizer, which will be provided free at relief headquarters. He expected this number to be largely increased.

N. Y. Typos Want Printers Included in 30-Hour Week

New York.—Typographical Union No. 6—"Big Six," as it is known to printers throughout the country, delegated the veteran Edward F. Cassidy to attend the house labor committee hearings in Washington and advocate the inclusion of periodical and newspaper workers among those to be covered by the federal 30-hour work week bill.

The union holds there is no reason why the benefits of the bill should not be extended to newspaper and periodical workers, and Mr. Cassidy argued before the committee against the amendment to the Black bill which would exclude these printers from its operation. The exclusion amendment was sponsored by Senator Tydings, of Maryland.

Lehman Appoints Woll and Beha To N. Y. State Insurance Board

Albany, N. Y.—Gov. Albert H. Lehman appointed Matthew Woll, president of the Union Labor Life Insurance company, and James A. Beha, a director of the same organization, to membership on the New York state advisory insurance board, whose powers are to advise with the New York state superintendent of insurance and to make recommendations to him on matters submitted to it.

Jersey Governor Asks State Milk Board to Fix Prices

Trenton, N. J.—Gov. Moore in a special message asked the legislature to hurry the creation of a state board to control the New Jersey milk industry, with an investment of $75,000,000 and an annual output of $22,000,000, imperiled, he says, by a price war and the passage recently of a price control measure in the neighbor state of New York.

Milk prices in New Jersey, Gov. Moore says, have fallen below the cost of production, and he fears further declines will be caused by a flood of milk from other states.

Printers Take Referendum On Postponing Convention

Indianapolis, Ind.—Members of the International Typographical Union of North America are taking a referendum vote on the question of postponing for one year the annual convention of the union scheduled to meet in Chicago the first week in September.

BUSINESS MEN DENY INTEREST IN NEW WEEKLY

Shy at Rumored Connection With Project.

LOW-WAGE POLICY WIDELY RESENTED

Importation of Non-Union Operator Finds Little Public Sympathy.

TYPOS RAISE PRICE HOME-STORE "GRUB" TO LOCAL MEMBERS

Price of groceries bought at any of the local chain of groceries known as the Home Stores has been given a considerable raise by Chattanooga Typographical union, providing the purchaser is a member of the union and is caught in the act of patronizing institutions operated by Roy McDonald, self-styled individualist and advocate of low wages and long hours for working people.

By unanimous vote, the Typos placed an automatic fine of $10.00 on any member patronizing the stores. It is not expected, however, that the treasury of No. 89 will be enriched to any great extent by the new regulation.

Responsibility for the idea of publishing a weekly paper in Chattanooga operated by imported non-union labor was strongly denied this week by several local business institutions whom Dame Rumor had linked with financial backing of the project headed by Roy McDonald, local chain-store owner, who proposes to issue a sort of combination sport sheet and handbill, to be distributed free in various sections of the city for the edification of Chattanoogans and, supposedly, for the advancement of the chain of grocery stores operated by McDonald.

Investigation of the project by a committee named by Chattanooga Typographical union developed statements that the "new idea" was fostered by certain large local advertisers, who had agreed to use the new sheet as an advertising medium, thus guaranteeing at least some revenue. The matter was taken up with certain of these supposed sponsors, and in each instance quick denial of interest was made by the reported backers.

Among the local firms named as one of the sponsors, however, was the Fowler furniture concern, and due to the fact that this company has long been on the "unfair list" of labor in connection with the non-union Mascot Stove company, no communication was attempted with the management. Whether or not the Fowler concern is connected with the "newspaper" project is therefore not known.

It was recalled, however, that the announced labor policies of the proposed publication are peculiarly similar to those carried out by the Mascot company—employment of imported cheap labor.

Mr. McDonald, the chain-store owner—the "Home" stores—indicated little sympathy for the claims of Chattanooga printers to employment, stating to a committee that he is an "individualist," that powerful combinations of capital have failed to interfere with his business progress; that his employes would be compelled to labor such length of time each day as the management desired, and at various and sundry tasks, according to the whim of the "boss."

The chain-store operator, whose business slogan is "Home Owned, Home Operated," is said to have sent to Mississippi for a linotype operator for his new business venture, disregarding the fact that Chattanoogans in the same line of business, who have doubtless contributed to some extent to the success of his grocery chain, have felt the depression for months through inability to secure sustaining employment.

Mr. McDonald's economic philosophy, as reported by The Labor World last week, was the subject of considerable comment by local citizens. Mr. Hoover, the prospective publisher declared, made a grave mistake when in 1929 he exacted a promise from the nation's industrial lead-

Thirty-Hour-Week Bill Reported To the House of Representatives

Substitute for Black's Senate Measure Provides Federal License System—Includes Minimum Wage, Trade Union Collective Bargaining—Bans Yellow Dog Contract and Cheap-Labor Foreign Goods.

Washington, May 18.—As a substitute for Senator Black's straight six-hour day and five-day week bill passed weeks ago by the senate, the house labor committee reported favorably a broad measure for federal regulation of industry, the hours on which it may operate, and the wages to be paid workers coming under the scope of the measure. The revised bill was largely dictated by Representative Connery, chairman of the house labor committee.

Federal License System.

The ends to be sought by the bill would be enforced by a federal licensing system, with a federal board of three members to supervise the proposed regulation of production, wages, and hours.

The Black bill barred from interstate commerce products made by labor employed more than six hours per day or five days per week. Under the house labor committee bill licenses to manufacture and ship goods in interstate and foreign commerce would be issued only to manufacturers who agree not to work their employes longer than the 30 hours per week prescribed by the measure.

Discretion Allowed.

A degree of flexibility in hours is provided by the authority vested in the federal regulatory board to permit certain industries under certain conditions to operate on a longer week "upon the submission of satisfactory proof of the existence of special conditions making it necessary for certain workers to work more time than herein provided."

Industrial Regulation.

The bill includes provisions to permit trade associations and organized labor to work out, within the limitations of the measure, their own problems of wages, hours, working conditions and restrictions of production. Industries following this practice would be automatically licensed by the federal board. Other industries, not members of trade associations but willing to abide by trade association standards, would also be promptly licensed.

Industries which refuse to be bound by trade association agreements would be regulated directly by the federal board.

The bill stipulates that a license would be denied to any manufacturer or dealer whose employes do not receive "a just and reasonable weekly wage sufficient to permit such workers to maintain standards of living of decency and comfort."

In the enforcement of this minimum wage section the federal board would be empowered to determine what wage would permit "decent and comfortable standards of living" adjusted to a weekly basis.

Yellow Dog Contract Banned.

The Connery bill would deny licenses to producers who employ persons under 16 years of age, forced or indentured labor, or whose employes sign yellow dog contracts.

Covers Foreign Goods.

One of the important restrictions carried by the measure would direct the secretary of the treasury "to prohibit the entry of foreign-made goods, which are similar or comparable to goods produced in the United States, if such foreign-made goods are entered at total landed costs which are less than American cost of production of similar or comparable American-made goods."

Exempted Commodities.

Agricultural products processed for first sale, dairy products and canned goods including sea food, fruits and vegetables, are exempted from the terms of the bill. Canneries would only be exempted seasonally.

Federal Board Members.

The federal regulation board prescribed by the bill would consist of the secretary of labor and two members to be appointed by the president. One of the presidential appointees would be a representative of organized labor, the other a representative of employers participating in trade association agreements. The appointed members would receive salaries of $10,000 each.

Anti-Trust Laws Modified.

The operation of the Connery 30-hour week bill is limited to two years, during which period the provisions of the Sherman and Clayton anti-trust laws conflicting with any provision of the measure would be suspended.

The penalty for violation of the measure would be a fine of $500 or six months' imprisonment.

Higher Mill Wages Held Move To Forestall U. S. Regulation

Greenville, S. C., May 18.—Announcements of wage increases in southern cotton textile mills is mainly a move to forestall legislation pending in congress that would shorten hours and establish minimum rates of pay, John Peel, southern representative of the United Textile Workers of America, says.

"The fact should be stressed that these increases do not represent any appreciable recovery of earning power on the part of the masses of southern textile workers who have been so ruthlessly deflated during the past three years," Peel says. "Average earnings for full time work in the Greeneville Piedmont section range from $3.50 to $12,00 per week on skilled operations. Median earnings are much nearer $3.50 than $12.00.

"In the past, it has been the customary procedure for employers in the south during a session of the legislature with some labor bill pending, to promise that conditions in their mills would be improved. The idea is suggested that if legislation is killed, the employer will voluntarily make the necessary reforms. These promises are of course never carried out.

"The textile employers have had ample opportunity to set their house in order and haven't done a thing. Here in Greenville today, women and children are working in the mills at nights just as they did years ago. The majority of mills normally operate two shifts of 55 hours each to conform to the law. We find, however, that actual hours of operation are between 60 and 70 per week. In some plants the operatives are obliged to be at their looms an hour before the whistle blows and in others, the machinery runs until late on Saturday afternoons.

"The workers in the mill villages of the south are praying for government action; they know that the shorter workday and the minimum wage are their only hope."

Labor Official Made Member Of N. Y. Beer Control Board

New York.—James C. Quinn, secretary-treasurer of the Central Trades and Labor council of Greater New York, has been appointed a member of the New York City beer control board, which will pass on all applications for manufacture and sale of 3.2 per cent beer in the metropolitan area, making its recommendations for license to the state board headed by Edward P. Mulrooney, former police commissioner.

Quinn is resident of Brooklyn and a member of the United Hatters Union of North America since 1907, serving as international representative from 1918 until recently. He is 45 years of age.

MISSOURI OVERALL WORKERS STRIKE AGAINST WAGE CUT

Lebanon, Mo.—Around 300 employes of the Rice-Stix overall and shirt factory here struck in protest against a new production system which speed-up industrial engineers were seeking to install. Representatives of the strikers claimed the system would result in a wage cut. E. R. Freece, manager, said it was designed to "equalize" wages.

MINE WORKERS OFFER TRIBUTE TO SLAIN LEADER

Wilder Strikers Deplore Death Barney Graham.

SUFFERING GROWS MORE INTENSE

Williams Declares Unionists Carrying Burden With Patriotism and Patience.

Conditions at Wilder, Tenn., and surrounding communities grow steadily worse, according to Ben Williams, representative of the United Mine Workers of America, who returned to Chattanooga this week after a few days spent in the district with President William Turnblazer, of District 19.

Starvation and misery are the rule in the strife-torn territory, Mr. Williams said, and the organized workers, who refuse to work and starve at the same time, are carrying their burden with a spirit which is typical of the pure Americanism which these Tennessee mountaineers represent, he declared.

A wonderful spirit of restraint is being maintained by the locked-out miners in the face of accumulating aggravations, and few if any law violations have been properly charged to the strikers, Mr. Williams said.

A tribute to B. F. Graham, president of the Wilder local union, who was shot down two weeks ago Sunday while on his way to a drug store to obtain medicine for his wife, was adopted by the union of which he was head and a beloved and highly respected leader, at a regular meeting May 9.

The resolution indicates deep resentment of the workers at conditions forced upon them by eastern operators of the Tennessee mines, and recites the brutal methods of the assassins of Mr. Graham.

Be it resolved, That Wilder Local Union 4467, United Mine Workers of America, at Wilder, Tenn., takes this means of expressing our regret at the death of B. F. (Barney) Graham, our local president.

He was a great leader and a tireless worker in the Wilder field for the past two years. He met his death at the hands of three or four company gunmen on the night of April 30, 1933, about 7:45.

He was murdered, shot in the back and from both sides while he was traveling the highway in front of the store of the Fentress Coal and Coke company, at Wilder, Tenn. After he was shot seven times he was hit in the head seven or eight times with the butt of a gun which bursted his skull.

The handle of a .38-caliber Colt's pistol was found lying on the ground by his head, where it had been shattered from the death-dealing weapon.

After the shooting had occurred several of the company's gunmen stood guard over the dead body and would not permit any of his friends to go near it for several minutes. These gunmen were armed with machine guns, high-powered rifles, pistols and sawed-off shotguns.

They dared any of B. F. (Barney) Graham's friends, even a neutral deputy sheriff, to touch his dead body for about two hours.

His death was mourned by more than a thousand of his local friends.

We wish to extend our greatest sympathy to his wife and family.

I. F. T. U. MOVES TO PARIS.

Paris.—Because of the hostility of the Hitler government to trade unionism, the International Federation of Trade Unions has moved its headquarters from Berlin to Paris. The new address is as follows: 9 Avenue d'Orsay, Paris, VIIeme.

Roosevelt Plans Partnership Of Government and Industry

Compulsory Industrial Agreements Advocated to Increase Profits, Obtain Fair Wages and Hours, Prevent Cut-Throat Competition and Lessen Child Labor—Commodity Price Boost Justified.

Washington, May 18.—Federal legislation to bring about economic planning, prevention of cut-throat competition, reorganization of the railroads, modification of the anti-trust laws, and other measures designed to assist in restoring normal business conditions were outlined by President Roosevelt in his second radio address to the American people.

"Well-considered and conservative measures," he said, "would be proposed which will attempt to give to the industrial workers of the country a more fair wage return, prevent cut-throat competition and unduly long hours for labor, and at the same time to encourage each industry to prevent overproduction."

The president pointed out that the railroad reorganization bill now before congress "seeks to provide and make certain definite planning by the railroads themselves, with the assistance of the government, to eliminate the duplication and waste that is now resulting in railroad receiverships and continued operating deficits."

On the disputed question of economic planning, the president said that the "government ought to have the right, and will have the right, after surveying and planning for an industry, to prevent, with the assistance of the overwhelming majority of that industry, unfair practice, and to enforce this agreement by the authority of the government."

The president took the cotton goods industry to illustrate what he meant by government compulsion to enforce industrial agreements.

He expressed the belief that 90 per cent of the cotton manufacturers would agree to eliminate starvation wages, would agree to stop long hours of employment, would agree to prevent child labor, would agree to prevent overproduction that would result in unsalable surpluses. "But what good is such an agreement," he said, "if the other ten per cent of cotton manufacturers pay starvation wages, require long hours, employ children in their mills and turn out burdensome surpluses? The unfair ten per cent could produce goods so cheaply that the fair ninety per cent would be compelled to meet the unfair conditions." Under these conditions, he claimed, the federal government should have the authority to enforce the agreement.

While advocating the continuance of anti-trust legislation to prevent the creation of monopolies and forbid "unreasonable profits", the president held that "these laws were never intended to encourage the kind of unfair competition that results in long hours, starvation wages and overproduction."

With regard to price boosting, the president said that the "definite objective" of his price-raising policy is to jack up the prices of commodities "to such an extent that those who have borrowed money will, on the average, be able to repay that money in the same kind of a dollar which they borrowed."

The president emphasized the point that his various forms of government regulation of economic affairs, including legislation already enacted as well as measures in preparation, are not in reality government control, but rather a "partnership between government and farming and industry and transportation, not partnership in profits, for the profits will still go to the citizens, but rather a partnership in planning and partnership to see that the plans are carried out."

Head of American Federation of Labor Says Inhuman Conditions Are Imposed Upon 12,000 Children—Urges Adoption of Child Labor Amendment to Federal Constitution.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 18.—A strong condemnation of Pennsylvania employers who pay starvation wages to 12,000 children under 16 years of age was made by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a statement for Pittsburgh newspapers on the child labor situation in this state.

Declaring that Pennsylvania child labor exploiters are enemies of the people and should be subjected to public scorn in every community, he stressed the important work done by the A. F. of L. in protecting the nation's children and urged the prompt adoption of the federal child labor amendment by the Pennsylvania legislature.

"The public disclosures which are being made regarding the employment of children at starvation wages in manufacturing plants in Pennsylvania reveal a most shocking state of economic and social affairs," Mr. Green said. "It is reasonable to conclude that similar conditions, or perhaps even worse, prevail in other manufacturing states.

"I regard those who are responsible for the exploitation of children in Pennsylvania, as revealed by the reports which have been made, as public enemies. They ought to be classified as such, and ought to be treated as such. It is bad enough to exploit adults, but it is infinitely worse to exploit helpless, defenseless children.

Abolishes All Child Labor.

"Labor holds that child labor should be totally abolished. There is no defense for the employment of children.

"It is because labor realizes fully the evil of child labor that it favors the enactment of federal legislation which would eliminate child labor throughout the nation. Minimum wage legislation will not accomplish this purpose.

No Mercy for Child Labor Exploiters.

"At the moment when revelations are being made showing the extent to which employers are going in the exploitation of children, the Pennsylvania state legislature is in session.

"It has thus far refused the appeal of labor to adopt the child labor amendment to the constitution of the United States.

"Surely the horrible conditions surrounding the employment of child labor in Pennsylvania offer an unanswerable argument in favor of the adoption of the child labor amendment to the constitution of the United States.

"No mercy should be shown to these manufacturers and employers of labor who are exploiting child labor in towns and cities in Pennsylvania.

"The reports show that more than 12,000 children under 16 years of age, exclusive of those engaged in domestic service, are working under inhuman, sweatshop conditions in Pennsylvania. This is a blot upon our civilization and a reflection upon the commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

"Let every employer of labor who is guilty of child exploitation be held up to public scorn. Let an aroused public conscience and an active public opinion be the forces which will compel organizations of all kinds, and legislative bodies, to act and act quickly in order to prevent further exploitation of child labor.

Federal Amendment Necessary.

Regardless of the indifferent attitude of many state legislatures to the serious question of child labor, the American Federation of Labor will continue its efforts to secure the adoption of both the child labor amendment to the constitution of the United States and federal legislation as well, designed to prohibit child labor and to protect the children of the nation."

UNION FINDS BEER DEALERS MOSTLY FAIR

Little Trouble Experienced With Local Distributors.

TEXTILE CONCERN ONLY ONE "UNFAIR"

Officers of Local 79 Say One or Two More May Attempt Non-Union Operation.

These are busy days for officers and members of Local 79, Brewery and Soft Drink Workers. What with the "three speck two" flowing so fast and furious local dealers are hard put to supply the trade, members of the local union are co-operating in assuring to the retailers the best possible service.

Added to the old standbys of other years, many new brands are being placed on the local market. So far as can be learned, however, the only non-union product now offered Chattanoogans is that of the Graupner Brewery, Silver Stock and X-Tra Fine, distributed by the Textile Warehouse and Cold Storage company. Negotiations with this firm, as reported in The Labor World last week, developed the fact that the distributor does not think well of signing contracts with local unions, and Central Body declared the distributor as well as the two brands of beer "unfair to organized labor."

Response of the unions to appeal to retailers to handle only "fair" products, it was said, has been very gratifying, although shortage of the better-known brands has compelled quite a few to stock the brands delivered by the concern which has been declared "unfair." The Textile concern advertises some half-dozen other beers, and the matter has been taken up with various breweries.

Most agencies have already signed with Local 79, but there remain two or three who have not yet agreed to terms, and who handle union-made products. When a reasonable length of time has been allowed these distributors to "sign up," officials of Local 79 declared, the breweries whose products they handle will be notified of conditions, and are expected to act accordingly.

R. R. Lee, secretary of Local 79, said Thursday the union officers expect little trouble after a few minor "arguments" are settled, and there is little doubt but that any beer which enjoys a successful sale in the Chattanooga territory will be made and delivered by 100 per cent. union labor.

Gov. Lehman Signs Three Prevailing Wage Bills

Albany, N. Y., May 18.—Governor Lehman has signed three bills strengthening existing laws relating to payment of prevailing wage rates on public works.

One provides that municipal and state contracts shall include a clause specifying the prevailing rate of wages to be paid on each job.

Another bill provides that all contracts for state, county, town and village highways must state the minimum hourly wage to be paid.

The third bill provides that in sparsely settled areas where there are no workers of the type for which the rate is to be established the fiscal agent may take the rate for the "first large civil division," which might be a city or an entire county.

Shirt Workers Close Shops.

Hartford, Conn.—Shirt shop workers of Bridgeport, New Haven, Derby, Branford and Wallingford put on a one-day holiday to celebrate the announcement of a movement by the Connecticut labor department to abolish "sweating" in the state.

About 600 Danbury hatters quit work when their demands for living wages were refused by the employers.

What Next!

Dr. K. Cuker, a chemist, of Prague, has made sugar drive a gasoline engine by pulverizing it, combining it with alcohol and feeding it to the engine mixed with air. To make certain that the mixture will explode, a little nitrated sugar is added. Sugar thus treated is reported to make a remarkable engine fuel, with no sediment and no ash.

Wisdom

A life of slothful ease, a life of that peace which springs merely from lack either of desire or of power to strive after great things, is as little worthy of a nation as of an individual.—Theodore Roosevelt.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—When was the first effort made to organize a national miners' union?

A.—In 1861, when an effort was made to form a nation-wide miners' union under the name of the American Miners' association.

Q.—Was the Cigar Makers' union the first to use a union label?

A.—A leaflet on the history of the union label, issued by the Union Label Trades Department, American Federation of Labor, says: "While the cigarmakers are generally allowed to be the inventors and sponsors of the earliest trade union label, a similar device was used six years earlier, in 1869, by the carpenters' eight-hour league of San Francisco. This league furnished a stamp to all shops operating on the eight-hour plan in order that they might be able to identify the work of the ten-hour mills."

Q.—How did Samuel Gompers define the object of the American Federation of Labor?

A.—In testifying before the United States commission on industrial relations, Gompers said: "The general object of the federation is to better the conditions of the workers in all fields of human activity. Economic betterment in all directions comes first."

SOUTH CAROLINA WORKERS STRIKE FOR INCREASED PAY

Bamburg, S. C.—Approximately 250 employes, men and women, of the Bamburg branch of the Santee mills struck when the management refused a 15 per cent increase in wages.

A committee of the strikers stated that the price of cotton has been boosted and that merchants have jacked up the cost of living.

John H. Cope, of Orangeburg, is president of the two South Carolina units. He refused to make any statement regarding the strike. Evidently he had not heard of President Roosevelt's request that employers advance wages at least in accordance with increased living costs.

It is an impressive fact that many women have said they learned of the value of Cardui from their mothers.

What stronger evidence of her confidence in a medicine could a mother have than that she advises her daughter to take it?

Cardui is given the credit for relieving so many cases of womanly suffering that it is widely and favorably known. Druggists, everywhere, sell it.

If you are weak, run-down, suffering monthly, take Cardui. Take it for a reasonable length of time and try it thoroughly. As your health improves, you will share the enthusiasm of thousands of women who have written to say: "Cardui helped me."

Solving the Problems of Industry

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States is the outstanding representative of that eminent and almost sanctified leadership which has had full control for years of all the means of production, the channels of distribution, and most of the avenues of expression and government.

With this unlimited power these business executives have led us to our present exalted state where more than 13,000,000 working men and women are in the army of the unemployed, while both they and their dependents, numbering many millions more, suffer distress that comes from destitution flowing from inadequate provision for relief.

In addition, this exalted leadership has arbitrarily made wholesale reductions in wages amounting to billions of dollars, by means of low wage rates and part-time work, for millions of other workers who are told they are indeed fortunate to have jobs.

With this brilliant record of their defeat and bankruptcy as industrial administrators, the chamber of commerce at its spring meeting in Washington paid the following tribute to the self-asserted ability of its members to rejuvenate business prosperity:

> "Those who are best equipped to solve the problems of industry are those who themselves are engaged in industry."

It might be arrant effrontery, but probably it is merely sheer stupidity, that leads this self-righteous instrument of befuddled big business to oppose President Roosevelt's bill to curb the issuance of fraudulent securities, and to proclaim that the orphaned gold standard still "is the only international monetary standard that has commanded general acceptance."

In explaining its proposed machinery for the solution of industrial problems, including wages and hours for the workers, the chamber said:

> "Each trade association representative of its industry or branch, in accordance with its conditions and in conference with the approved agency of government, should be permitted to promulgate fair rules for industrial production and distribution, to improve the status of labor, the industries of the nation and the public welfare."

Organized labor, scanning the effect of years of industrial self-government by these trade associations made up exclusively of employers, will prefer to improve its own status by effective trade unionism rather than depend on those agencies which have by arrogance and stupidity brought the industries of the nation to such a sorry pass, which agencies are so happily represented by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

A Dangerous Proposal

Railroad workers tell the government that it cannot at the present time assume the responsibility for depriving workers of employment without assuming at the same time the responsibility for their future support.

Reason and logic support the stand of the railroad workers, who are very properly opposing consolidation proposals that will throw railroad men out of employment. Nothing should be done at this critical period to increase the already great host of unemployed. Any proposal that means more unemployment is dangerous and leads toward national disaster and destruction.

Justice for Children

The nation cannot defer the physical care and education of our children to the future, the American Federationist points out, in declaring that the nation's duty toward the children is a primary responsibility. Listing the nation's obligations to the children, the Federationist says:

"Our first obligation is to maintain unimpaired educatioanl opportunities for all minors. . . . We must restore what we have taken from the children and maintain our educational facilities. . .

"Our second obligation is to raise the standards of compulsory school attendance legislation and regulation of the employment of minors. When there are not enough jobs for adults there can be no wise reason for employing girls and boys under 18 years of age.

"Our next obligation is to provide adequate appropriations for family relief where the income-earners are unemployed."

A Ridiculous Exhibition

The wholesale burning of "un-German" books and literature by German college students fired with Nazi enthusiasm is one of the most astounding spectacles of modern times. To think that a nation could be so childish and to countenance the burning of books under the impression that it is thereby destroying ideas it doesn't like is enough to make an intelligent person gasp. It is a thing that could only happen in a topsy-turvy world, such as this has been since the great war ended in 1918.

The New York Times reported that there was good reason to believe that the ripple of amusement that went through the outside world when plans for the book burning were announced had some effect on the older and wiser university heads. "German propaganda authorities themselves, who recently had seen the effect of making Germany ridiculous as well as censurable, may even have been heard from," the Times said. "At any rate, not everything under attack went into the discard."

The Times' dispatch gave the only cheering note that came out of Germany in connection with the infantile exhibition and indicates that responsible German opinion realized the foolishness of the book burning exhibition.

Dismissal Wage for Federal Employes

The introduction by Congressman William T. Schulte of the dismissal wage bill for federal workers, prepared by the American Federation of Labor in co-operation with the American Federation of Government Employes, places this matter of equity squarely before the congress.

The bill undertakes to give a modest amount of economic protection to deserving employes of the government who may be dismissed before they are eligible for the benefits of the retirement law.

It provides for a dismissal wage after a minimum employment period of one year. The amount of the compensation wage would be based on the total length of service of the employe and the average monthly basic remuneration received during the twelve months immediately preceding the date of dismissal.

The major object of the bill is to partially should government employes from victimization resulting from dismissals in connection with the consolidation of various departments and bureaus.

In describing its purpose, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said:

> "A fair, just and equitable dismissal law would in operation soften the blow which employes dismissed from the service of the federal government are bound to feel. It would help tide the dismissed employes over the very difficult period between their dismissal from the employ of the government and the date when they may find new employment in other callings.
> "Let the government be just in dealing with its employes, let it apply justice to dismissed workers by paying them a sum of money classified as a dismissal wage, meager though it may be, but helpful to the distressed worker at a time when such help is badly needed."

The Schulte dismissal wage bill was referred to the house committee on civil service. Hearings on the proposal will be held in the near future.

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

Prices are going up. If prices go up faster than wages, that is just like a cut in wages. The president has urged employers to raise wages. If they do and if they raise them fast enough to keep pace with the rise in cost of living, they will do something they never did before.

No, employers will not raise wages, unless they have to. We live in an age of rapid and sweeping change, but not in an age of miracles. So, it looks as if the worker will get one more blast before he finds conditions getting any better.

With a pay envelope no bigger, and for millions entirely absent, the workers will be faced with constantly rising prices. That looks like more hunger. Can anybody see anything else?

There is a lot of talk about the banks. We are told they will be sounder hereafter. Probably that is so. But what about this? Is there not already a new and greater concentration of wealth in the hands of fewer people? If that is not true, then what has become of all of the foreclosures and of all the bankrupt concerns? Where have all the distress' mortgages gone?

Does more concentration make for greater safety and more freedom? A "yes" answer requires a good deal of explaining.

Those are just a few of the questions that float around looking for answers. The air is full of them. Maybe they will be answered, just as maybe the question, "Why did the Akron go down?" may be answered.

Government officials want to know why income taxes have fallen so badly and they're trying to find the answer to that. They won't find it in the Lost and Found columns, but maybe they might find it in the unemployment statistics and in the figures on wage cuts.

Once a fellow got famous asking "Who's looney now?" and another gent is remembered because he said, "One more such victory and I am lost," or words to that effect.

It might be a good time for Croesus and Pyrrhus to get together over a mug of beer and talk things over.

> The millions who no longer hear
> That all-softening, overpowering knell,
> The tocsin of the soul, the dinner bell, might hope to gain some advantage from such a conversation.

However, things are happening so fast that a great deal of the American population is like the man in murderer's row—he hasn't long to wait, knowing that he'll get rope or reprieve with a few more turns of the clock.

Meanwhile, prices are going up and if labor has its old-time spunk there'll be a grand battle under way to send wages up faster and a whole lot higher. That's the need of the nation and the need of the hour—wages higher than we ever knew. Wall Street has had its cut of wealth. Let there be an end of that. Demos, where art thou?

The children's bureau of the United States department of labor finds that the cumulative effect of years of hardship are becoming increasingly evident on the health of children. School and relief agencies have put up a determined fight against malnutrition but the situation is described as grave.

It is futile to talk to parents about building up weak children with good food, fresh air and rest, when there is little money for food and there is no relief in sight. The only remedy is work for the parents at decent wages and, failing that, adequate money and food relief until work is forthcoming.

The situation among children bears out what this department has repeatedly pointed out, that the depression is bound to have an adverse effect on health conditions, despite optimistic reports purporting to show good health conditions among the population since the slump began.

Labor has for years contended that fair distribution of the products of industry is the key to prosperity. Business and politics have largely ignored labor's view. But the depression has taught them a few lessons and they are now echoing labor's arguments for better distribution.

Henry A. Wallace, secretary of agriculture, is one of those who have seen a light. Speaking in Philadelphia the other day, he warned against a drifting in dealing with the depression and said:

"I want the standard of living, in city and country alike, constantly improved. But we shall never achieve that desideratum unless we learn to distribute what we have produced as well as we have learned to produce it. Science has done the first job and done it magnificently. Now let us turn to the second and infinitely more difficult one."

PROPOSED LEGISLATION SPELLS DOOM OF OLD ECONOMIC SYSTEM

National Recovery Act and Other Bills Before Congress Mean End of "Individualism" in Industry and Setting Up of New Order, Supervised and Regulated by Government.

By B. C. CLARKE

Washington, May 18.—With self-regulation in industry as the keynote, the special committee headed by Senator Wagner, of New York, engaged in drafting a "national recovery act" that may be a substitute for the Black 30-hour bill and the proposals of Secretary of Labor Perkins for a governmental dictatorship in industry, is continuing its sessions.

Secrecy covers the deliberations of the committee, although it is known that one of the objectives which it hopes to attain with the measure is to afford employment by next September to 3,000,000 of the approximately 15,000,000 idle men and women of the nation.

It is understood that intimations have been conveyed to the committee from within cabinet circles that the functions of labor leaders as a stabilizing influence in industry should for the time being be exercised or at least directed by the government itself, and possibly best by the department of labor.

Industry will be asked through this bill to suppress its own unfair practices and throat-cutting competition, and to conform to such practices as will prevent large overproduction, wage slashing, and the employment of children. As nearly as can be ascertained, a 30-hour provision for industry will not be included in the new bill.

In the meantime, the house committee on labor has continued its hearings on the Black and Connery 30-hour bills, and is preparing a report on them for the house. While these bills do not appear to have the sanction of the White House, there is a growing indication that the Black bill, which has already been passed by the senate, may be passed by the house and sent to the president for his signature.

Industry is quite insistent that with reasonable assistance by the government, it shall be given an opportunity to undertake its own housecleaning, and restore order from the chaos of the last two or three years. Efforts are being made to have the anti-trust laws modified by the proposed new measure that is being drafted to an extent that will permit a degree of co-operation, and will serve only to restrict monopoly and prevent arbitrary and undue price fixing.

Regardless of what measure is passed by congress, it is clear that an old economic order is passing, and that a new system is rising in its place—a system that does away in large measure with rugged individualism in industry, with overproduction and peaks and valleys in commerce and trade, and installs in its place a system supervised by the government, and regulated as to practives, hours of operation and production.

Sales Tax Movement Suffers Two Blows

The sales tax movement received a heavy blow in two different states this week, says Labor. In Illinois, it was declared unconstitutional by a unanimous decision of the state supreme court. In Ohio, a two per cent tax measure recommended by Governor George White appears doomed to die in committee, seven of the committee's thirteen members being definitely opposed to the bill.

A curious situation has developed in connection with the Illinois law. Retail stores have, since April 1, been collecting the 3 per cent tax on all sales. Now, the court's decision, upholding a lower tribunal's injunction, prevents the state from collecting the tax from the merchants. The first collection was to have been made on May 15.

As matters stand, it looks like the retailers are 3 per cent "to the good."

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

FEW TRADE ASSOCIATIONS COMPETENT TO UNDERTAKE STABILIZATION PROGRAMS

Washington, May 18.—With discussion of the proposal that the federal government shall undertake the stabilization of American industry through "co-operation and aid" extended individual industries through their trade associations, the type of character of the associations is coming in for unusual scrutiny in Washington.

Careful appraisal of the associations collectively indicates that there are possibly as many as a half dozen in the United States with a competent staff of officials and a mechanism adequate and sufficient to work with the government in this respect.

The vast majority of trade associations, it is found, are manned by industrial politicians with little or no experience in industrial management and coming into their positions by reason of high-powered salesmanship or a genius for back-slapping. Their selection has usually been the result of clever maneuvering among coteries of leaders in an industry, backed by previous experience as a member of congress or a congressman's secretary, and thus possessed of a knowledge of clever and adroit lobbying.

In illustration, there is the trade association secretary who abandoned his wife and several children by the Reno divorce route to marry the daughter of an influential man within his industry in a western state and thus draw strength and solidity to his shaky and uncertain tenure of office.

So pitifully weak are the majority of trade associations found to be that it is frankly admitted that if the government should undertake co-operation of industry, rather than in establishing an outright dictatorship, it must be through the creation of committees within industries especially established for that purpose.

Strike of Columbia River Fishermen Spreads Out

Astoria, Ore., May 18.—The strike of the Columbia river fishermen and cannery workers entered the second week of the new packing season yesterday with no signs of settlement, but, on the contrary, indications that it was spreading over the coastal area into the north.

Plants on Columbia river are, of course, suspended, after packing a little fish that had been caught in the first few days of the season up the river.

The cannery workers are out in sympathy with the fishermen, and the compromise offered by the packers was rejected.

The fishermen have demanded 8 cents a pound for raw stock, as against 6 cents paid last year. The compromise was believed to have been 7 cents, which would have permitted an opening of $1.75 Coast on fancy halves. If the packers are forced to yield in full, and this is not unlikely, the opening on fancy halves will be $2.00, Coast.

Brokers here are being posted about developments on the river every day. Reports coming from the Northwest have indicated the spread of the trouble up to Puget Sound.

Frank Cabe vs. Joe Anderson
Before J. B. Bayless, Justice of the Peace for Hamilton County, Tennessee

In this cause it appeared by affidavit that the defendant is justly indebted to the plaintiff, and is a nonresident of the state of Tennessee, so that the ordinary process of law cannot be served upon him, and an original attachment having been levied on one Whippett auto, Motor No. 96-A-396159, in possession of said defendant, it is therefore ordered that publication by made in The Labor World, a newspaper published in the City of Chattanooga, Tennessee, for four consecutive weeks, commanding the said defendant to appear before me at 111 East Sixth street, Chattanooga, Tennessee, on May 29, 1933, at 10 o'clock a.m., and make defense to said suit or it will be taken for confessed and be proceeded with ex parte.

This May 4, 1933.

TOTAL OF JOBLESS ABOVE FIRST OF YEAR FIGURES

Bank Crisis Causes Big Loss of Jobs and Half Million More Joined Ranks of Unemployed From January to March, American Federation of Labor Reports.

Washington, May 18.—Trade union reports for the first four months of 1933 show a worse unemployment situation than at the first of the year, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, said in making public the federation's monthly employment report.

President Green attributed the increase of unemployment to the banking crisis and declared that unemployment is the greatest human and economic problem before the nation. He added that to put the unemployed back to work is the task of the federal government.

"Normally," Green said, "from 2 to 3 per cent of the membership should find work from January to April; but this year our records show more out of work in April than at the first of the year.

Bank Crisis Responsible.

"The weighted figures show: 25.8 per cent of the membership out of work in January, 25.9 per cent in April. The unemployment level in April was about 10 per cent higher than it would have been if seasonal gains had been normal.

"This loss is due largely to the bank crisis. Closing the nation's banks caused such heavy reductions in business that over four hundred thousand industrial workers lost their jobs, according to the federation estimate of unemployment in March. Most of this loss was in manufacturing, where nearly 225,000 were laid off; wholesale and retail trade contributed another 60,000 to the unemployed, railroads nearly 30,000.

"Although farmers took over 50,000 for spring planting activities, these jobs were few indeed compared with the number thrown out of work by the bank crisis. The total figures for February and March show: 12,988,000 unemployed in February, and 13,360,000 in March (preliminary).

"Thus unemployment increased by over 500,000 from January to March this year; while even under the depressed conditions of last year the increase for the same period was only 173,000. Normally, about 300,000 workers should be re-employed from January to March, while this year over 500,000 lost their jobs.

"Both union figures and government records tell the same story: That the bank crisis has meant a higher level of unemployment, and there is no evidence yet to show that this loss has been regained.

"Unemployment is the greatest human and economic problem now before the country. Industry cannot borrow money, increase activity and put men to work; banks cannot lend. To get these unemployed millions back to work in the normal channels of trade and industry is clearly a task for the federal government. To use federal credit to start work creating wealth in 'reflation' is the safe way to build back to normal, avoiding the dangers of inflation."

Plans Shaping For "Birthday Party"

Plans for the "birthday party" of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, which will be given on Monday, May 29, are rapidly taking shape, according to George Forbes, chairman of a special committee for the affair, and report to Central Body meeting Monday night will indicate the details of the program.

The affair will be in the nature of a celebration of the thirtieth anniversary of the reorganization of Central Body, and a feature of the program will be the presence and participation of many who took part in the early struggles of local labor.

In connection with the affair, annual Spring Supplement of The Labor World will be off the press next Friday, and will contain much valuable information concerning the history of organized labor of Chattanooga and of Tennessee.

President Signs Wagner Bill For U. S. Aid Grants

Roosevelt Says $500,000,000 Relief Measure Is Challenge to Every Community to Do Best to Help Destitute.

Washington, May 18.—Urging that local communities make every effort to meet their own relief needs, President Roosevelt signed the Wagner $500,000,000 bill for direct relief grants to states. The measure was strongly supported by organized labor.

One-half of the $500,000,000 authorized by the bill will be given to the states as outright relief gifts, while the remainder will be distributed on a basis of $1 federal aid for every $3 the states spend in relief.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation will supply the $500,000,000, which will be distributed to the states through a relief administrator, whose salary is fixed at $10,000 a year.

Old Fund Neared Exhaustion.

Final approval of the bill by congress and signing by the president came just as a relief fund handled by the Reconstruction Finance corporation was close to exhaustion.

In signing the bill, President Roosevelt said:

"I want to make it very clear to citizens in every community that the bill I have just signed, authorizing an appropriation of $500,000,000 of federal funds for unemployment relief, does not absolve states and local communities of their responsibility to see that the necessities of life are assured their citizens who are in destitute circumstances.

"The bill, in effect, is a challenge to governors, legislatures and local officials to stimulate their own efforts to provide for their own citizens in need.

Explains Principle.

"The principle which I have on many occasions explained is that the first obligation is on the locality; if it is absolutely clear that the locality has done its utmost but that more must be done, then the state must do its utmost. Only then can the federal government add its contribution to those of the locality and the state."

ers to maintain wage scales as a foundation for a return of prosperity. He did not state whether he was a participant in the conference, but averred that wages should have been slashed in half at that time, and, further, that there could be no return to normalcy until the pay of workers is reduced still lower.

Committee from Chattanooga Typographical union last week sent several hundred letters to local advertisers, notifying them of the situation with respect to the proposed weekly publication, and the result of this campaign will be carefully checked. The committee is confident that no loyal business man will approve of the archaic philosophy as expressed by the chain-store operator as the guiding policy of the proposed publication.

H. Clay Timmons, chairman of No. 89's committee, expressed satisfaction Thursday with the publicity campaign, and stated the members are leaving no stone unturned to broadcast the attitude of the merchant-publisher, who has ambitions to be the directing head of a great daily in his home city.

Mr. Timmons gave The Labor World the following statement Friday morning:

"This fight on local union printers is a blow directed at the lowering of wages that constitutes, according to the president, 'a serious form of unfair competition against other employers, reduces the purchasing power of the workers and threatens the stability of industry.'

"The committee is on the job every minute, and already has wide assurances of support and disagreement with the announced policies of this embryo publisher.

"The chief aim of the committee is to keep before the public the fact that he is hiring not only non-union help, but out-of-town help. He has received whatever of this world's goods he has from the people of Chattanooga, and hopes to receive more. But there are printers in the city who have been working on part time for the past two years, and for whom the local union has spent many thousands of dollars to keep out of the bread lines and away from charity. To have non-union men come in from outside, who have not contributed one cent to this cause, is more than any just and fair-minded person could approve.

"In behalf of the committee, let me ask for the complete confidence of the fair-minded citizens of Chattanooga and for their support in the elimination of one more obstacle in the path of prosperity."

Letter Carriers Send Three to State Meet

Annual convention of the Tennessee Letter Carriers' association is expected to be unusually well attended, according to local members of the organization, and many matters of vital importance are scheduled to come before the delegates for discussion and action.

According to M. A. Lichtenstetter, of Branch 62, retirement legislation, furloughs and restoration of recent salary slashes will be among the problems facing the convention.

Importance of this year's session, which will be held at Lebanon on May 30, is recognised by the local branch, which will send three representatives to the pow-wow, all of whom have had much experience in work of the organization. The three named by Branch 62 are Mr. Lichtenstetter, J. L. Carson and J. L. Turner.

Interesting Program Promised for 'Party' Staged by Workers

Crowley, Smith, Clark Principal Speakers.

KNIGHTS OF LABOR TO BE HONORED

Members With Thirty Years' Service Invited to Sit on Platform—General Public Extended Cordial Invitation to Attend Ceremonies.

"Looking backward" over the thirty years since the reorganization of Chattanooga Central Body in 1903 will be the theme of speakers at the "birthday party" to be staged under auspices of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council Monday night at the courthouse.

A review of the struggles and accomplishments of the local labor movement will be given by several of the "old-timers" who have had a part in the progress of labor locally during the past three decades.

Neil J. Crowley, president of the Intertype Composing company, and member of Chattanooga Typographical union, will discuss the old days, with the trials and tribulations of the trades unionists of half a century ago. Incidentally, Mr. Crowley is this month celebrating an anniversary of his own, May, 1933, marking the fortieth year of his membership in the International Typographical union. Since coming to Chattanooga some quarter-century ago, Mr. Crowley has served the labor movement in various capacities, including a term as vice-president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor.

An indication that the program will be varied is seen in the announcement by Chairman Forbes that Stanton E. Smith, president of Local 246, American Federation of Teachers, will also be a speaker, discussing the labor movement from the standpoint of the "newest" member.

Hon. Hays Clark, criminal court clerk, who has been called upon many times to furnish entertainment in lighter vein at labor gatherings, is also on the program, and those who have heard Mr. Clark speak know that he is a past master at the art of holding the attention and interest of his audiences.

An orchestra under the direction of Johnny Mahoney will furnish music for the occasion, and Chairman Forbes promises an interesting program for all who attend.

Members of the Knights of Labor, and all who have had a record of thirty years or more service in the local labor ranks are especially invited, and will be provided with seats on the stage, Mr. Forbes said.

It was stressed that the meeting will be open to all friends of organized labor, and the invitation is open to the general public to attend and hear the story of labor's progress outlined by those who have been on the "firing line."

The program will be given in Judge Yarnell's courtroom, beginning at 7:30 p.m. President Kamin, of Central Body, will open the meeting, and then turn the festivities over to Mr. Forbes.

British Chemical Workers Demand Large Wage Raise

London, England, May 25.—The Chemical Workers' union demanded a heavy wage increase from the Drug and Fine Chemical Manufacturers' association on the expiration of the agreement which had been in effect since 1925.

The old agreement provided minimum wage rates of 50, 55 and 60 shillings for men workers, and 34 and 28 shillings for women. The union asked that the new agreement embody minimum wages of 80 shillings for men and 40 shillings for women.

The union also asked a 40-hour week and the employment of only one minor to every four adults.

$15 PER WEEK OFFERED TYPO BY M'DONALD

"Home Store" Owner in Generous Mood.

LOW-WAGER GRANTS LOCAL MAN AUDIENCE

Printers Wonder if Mississippi Operator Will Draw Same "Princely" Salary.

Mr. Roy McDonald, self-styled "individualist," merchant prince, bakery magnate, dairyman extraordinary, who recently decided to enter the weekly newspaper field as a sort of stepping stone to the daily publishing business, almost had a change of heart this week, according to local printers, and actually "talked terms" to a Chattanooga Typo.

Although it was not known, of course, to what extent the new publisher had gone to secure additional help in other localities, the fact remains that he called on a member of Chattanooga Typographical union who had innocently and with good intent solicited a situation on McDonald's new weekly, before the non-union policy of the publisher was announced, and before he had sent to Mississippi for a printer to operate his plant.

The Chattanooga printer, one of the younger members of No. 89, was summoned into the presence of the publisher this week and actually offered employment—in fact, lots of employment. But it early developed, according to the Typo so honored, that although the job was long the pay would have been short. In a moment of weakness, perhaps, and doubtless accompanying a surge of generosity, the local printer was offered fifteen dollars ($15.00) per week for his services. Nor is that all. Publisher McDonald offered the further inducement to the young Typo that perhaps, in time—who knows?—the craftsman might even reach the princely salary of twenty-five ($25.00) per week! The extent and "spread" of duties which would be required of the prospective employe, however, was not gone into, Mr. McDonald having previously indicated that any of his employes would be expected to perform such varied service as the head of the corporation might deem fit and proper at the time.

It will be remembered that Mr. McDonald, owner of the so-called "Home Stores," having, as a "lone wolf," conquered the grocery field, the dairy business and the bakery business, decided recently to enter the newspaper field—modestly, of course, beginning with a weekly "throw sheet," and according to his own statement leading up to his entry into competition in the daily field with the News and the Times.

Ideas of Mr. Hoover, President Roosevelt and many leading business people of the nation as to fair wages were disagreed with by the local merchant prince, however, and what might have been considered a handicap by some less ambitious capitalist did not feaze the embryo publisher, and he openly announced that "high" wages was the cause of economic distress, and that until working men's pay was further reduced there could be no recovery. Presumably proceeding upon this theory, McDonald sent

Shirt Factory Girl Strike Against 10 Per Cent Pay Cut

Alexandria, Va., May 25.—Forty employes of the Century Manufacturing company's shirt plant here struck against a 10 per cent wage cut. The factory is owned by Morris Weinman of Baltimore.

ASKS FAIR PAY FOR FUTURE COUNTY WORK

Cuthbert Urges Cummings to Hold Levels.

POSSIBLE FEDERAL LOANS ARE NOTED

A fair wage for any improvements undertaken by Hamilton county through possible federal loans was asked by T. R. Cuthbert, secretary-treasurer of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, in a letter sent Thursday to Hon. Will Cummings, county judge.

Mr. Cuthbert's letter followed an article in the Chattanooga News which stated that Judge Cummings is seeking federal funds for public works, including roads, schools and similar necessities.

The letter to Judge Cummings asks that, if such funds are secured, arrangements be made to pay prevailing wage scales on any improvements undertaken as a result. Public improvements based on wages such as have been paid to "charity" cases or R. F. C. work, the judge is told, are not in themselves "improvements."

Every co-operation and support is offered the county official in the proposed program, and particular approval is expressed in the program for repair of school buildings, long recognized as practically imperative.

Mr. Cuthbert's letter to Judge Cummings follows:

May 24, 1933.

Hon. Will Cummings,
Hamilton County Courthouse,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dear Judge Cummings:

In today's News there was an article stating that you might seek a fund for public works, such as roads, schools and other like things. As you and other public officials well know, organized labor has for a long time advocated such policies of public improvement in times of unemployment and lower costs. We approve particularly of improving our school buildings and the elimination of the slum sections.

This article in the News stated that you had instructed Supt. Rankin to launch a survey of needed improvements and prepare a program. At this point may we respectfully draw to your attention and request that such representations as you may in the future make to the federal government shall be based on the payment of union scales of wages? Union wages are the only standard and prevailing rate of wages, and to plan to do any public improvements based on wages such as paid to "charity" cases or R. F. C. men is not in itself a public "improvement."

It would seem unnecessary to ask this of you or any official who has the interest of the community at heart. However, when we recall that only recently one of our officials of high rank stated his belief that it is the duty of public officials to take every advantage of the working man whenever possible—such as hiring $6.00 painters for $3.00 if such painters are hungry enough to submit—you can see why we go through the formality of reminding you to take care of the wages to be paid.

Hoping that you will carry on your improvement plans, we offer to you our support and co-operation for their success.

T. R. CUTHBERT,
Secretary.

'Industrial Absolutism, Possibly Benevolent,' Seen by Labor Editor

Analyzes New Act

CHESTER M. WRIGHT

Impossible to Predict How Masses Will Fare.

POINTS TO POWERS GIVEN PRESIDENT

By CHESTER M. WRIGHT

Washington, May 25.—Industrial absolutism looms, possibly benevolent, immediately ahead of the United States under the terms of the new W[illegible], known briefly as the ind[illegible] product of the administration "brain trust" aided by a committee of four named by President Roosevelt.

Newspapers thus far have paid far more attention to the taxation features of the bill than to the section reorganizing American industry under presidential direction. But the industrial reorganization section giving the president complete power to regiment all industry under rules of his own making is scarcely matched in all the world. It would be impossible and unfair at this time to say whether the masses will fare better or worse, because there is no way of knowing what is in the president's mind.

Wide Powers to President.

In three major sections, the bill provides power for reorganization of interstate industry, provides for a $3,300,000,000 program of public works and provides for bond issues and taxes.

Throughout the industrial reorganization section it is provided that "the president may or may not." He is given complete power and authority to prescribe rules for trade associations by which competition may be regulated, to prescribe wage and working conditions, to license and to revoke licenses.

Perhaps most striking of all, the president is authorized to deal with labor organizations for establishment of wage and working conditions, pitting unions against the power of the presidency.

There appears to be no guarantee to labor, beyond the fact that the president will have power to prescribe fair conditions. The 30-hour week is not established in the bill, so far as interstate industry is concerned. It is applied only to government construction. Except for construction the 30-hour week is junked and the president is left to be judge of the work week where there is no mutual agreement or where there is an agreement that he does not approve. He is supreme authority.

Road Open to Evasion?

Whether the bill will actually control all interstate operations seems open to question. It has been pointed out that a road to evasion has been provided by failure to mention jobbers and wholesalers in the draft. These critics hold that manufacturers, operating within a state, may, as intra-state firms, impose such conditions as they please, turning their output over to jobbers within their own state, while the jobbers, free from restrictions, may ship as they choose. Whether this is so remains to be seen. The bill stipulates "the trade or industry." Moreover, the bill will, when enacted, become a

Chicago, May 25.—Chicago bankers have promised to pay the school teachers of this city half price for being "good," according to the special correspondent in the current issue of "Labor."

In other words, if the teachers don't stop parading in the Loop and saying unkind things about Chicago bankers in general and "Hell 'n Maria" Dawes in particular, the banks will not buy enough tax anticipation warrants to pay the teachers half the back salary still due them.

The teachers have not greeted the plan with wild enthusiasm. They point out that they got nothing until they started in to raise Cain. Last week they got their pay for last September and are wondering whether a few more calls on the Loop banks may not bring a few more months' back pay.

Bitterness at Dawes is growing and spreading. Spokesmen for the teachers declare that the Reconstruction Finance corporation loaned Dawes money on some very shady securities. Some of them, indeed, were Insull securities; and that is the last word in worthlessness for Chicago just now.

But tax anticipation warrants, which in a city like Chicago are practically certain to be paid some time, are not good enough for the R. F. C. unless indorsed by banks.

Norwich, Conn., May 25.—Approximately 200 weavers employed at No. 4 mill of the Ponemah company struck against a new work scale which they claimed means a cut in wages. The day shift, which operates on a 6 a.m. to 3 p.m. schedule, left their looms in the afternoon, and the night shift, which operates on a 3 p.m. to 1 a.m. schedule, refused to go to work.

The workers appointed a committee to confer with the management.

30-Hour Week Would Make More Jobs in This Factory

Hudson, Mass., May 25.—The Hudson Worsted company announced it was operating on three eight-hour shifts daily to take care of seasonal orders.

This eight-hour shift policy shows what the federal thirty-hour week bill now before congress would do for the tens of thousands of jobless men in the textile industry.

Were the bill a law, the Hudson Worsted company would have to substitute four six-hour shifts for its three eight-hour shifts, thus increasing the number of employes 25 per cent.

Child Labor Amendment Wins Vote in New Hampshire House

Concord, N. H., May 25.—The New Hampshire house of representatives adopted a concurrent resolution ratifying the child labor amendment to the federal constitution. The committee on labor recommended the ratification. A similar resolution was rejected several years ago.

Got Over Weak, Painful Condition By Taking Cardui

"I was weak and run-down and suffered quite a bit with pains in my side," writes Mrs. Nick Barranco, of Beaumont, Texas. "I was nervous. I did not rest well at night, and my appetite was poor.

"My mother had used Cardui with beneficial result, so I decided to take it. I surely am glad I did, for it stopped the pain in my side and built up my general health. I took seven bottles in all."

Cardui is sold at all drug stores.

Government figures in 1919 showed 9,041,311 wage earners employed in manufactures; in 1920, about 1.6 per cent above that—boom year—making a total of 9,185,972 employed in manufactures in 1920.

Railways employment in 1920 was 2,022,832; and mineral industries employed 1,090,223. That makes total 1920 industrial employment about 12,299,027. The all-peace-time-high-water-mark. It has never been equalled.

There were that many "employables" in 1920.

Well, in 1929 there were 8,836,403 employed in manufactures. That was 349,569 less than 1920. Railways employed 1,660,850 in 1929; or 361,982 less than in 1920. Mineral industries employed 928,648 in 1929; or 161,575 less than in 1920.

Add those. It makes a total industrial employment in 1929 of 11,425,901; or 873,126 less than in 1920. Why? In 1919 the capacity of installed manufactures equipment was 29,000,000 horsepower. In 1929 it was 43,000,000 horsepower. An increase of 48 per cent. But manpower was cut.

Meanwhile: the babies! Population increased 15.3 per cent in those nine years. With that rate of increase for those industrially employed, arrived another 1,881,751 potential wage earners. Add that to those displaced, to get the total of 2,754,877 available wage earners more than those employed in 1929. No place for them to go!

Did those 3,000,000 folks and their wives open gas stations?

Some of them did; and then fought with displaced farmer boys for trade.

That is where we were in 1929; when some folks thought unemployment might begin pretty soon. But today over 17,000,000 are idle.

Where did we go from there? Where do we go from here?

More Factory Inspectors Needed

That despite the present unemployment, thousands of workers with jobs and putting in long hours comparable to those of the sweatshop days of the early 1900's, is emphasized in a recent report from the Pennsylvania department of labor. Stress is laid on the inability of a limited staff of sixty-five general factory inspectors to prevent such conditions in Pennsylvania through the enforcement of existing laws. The officials are required to investigate facilities for accident prevention, hours of women and children and general sanitation of 32,000 factories and 135,000 retail stores.

"As long as the inspection service," the report says, "is so inadequate in numbers that 14-year-old girls making children's dresses are found working as high as 11¾ hours a day, and 15-year-old boys are found working 12 hours a night in any of our factories, we are but adding to industrial confusion.

"We are dynamiting the dams which have been built to hold up the standards of living in the commonwealth."

Job Insurance for Small Communities

The practicability of protecting the workers of a small community from the distress caused by employers dismissing them is shown in the report by Sir Claude Hill, Lieutenant-Governor of the Isle of Man, recommending a scheme of unemployment insurance for that island.

The Isle of Man has a population of around 60,000. Its principal occupation is catering to 500,000 summer visitors. Agriculture and market gardening are the most important industries.

The insurance plan covers men only. The contributions are paid exclusively by employed persons, with the addition of a retrenchment premium paid by employers who reduce the number of employes after the summer season. The retrenchment premium is calculated on the average numbers employed in the twelve weeks ending with September. One pound would be paid for each unit below the summer average employed in the first twenty weeks after September, and a second pound for the next twenty weeks, so that if the average number of men employed in the summer were twenty and the average for the rest of the year ten, the employer would pay a retrenchment premium of one pound.

The full rate of benefit is 14 shillings a week for a man, with the addition of six shillings for a wife and two shillings six pence for each child up to a maximum of 30 shillings a week for 26 weeks.

There is also a provision that part-time earnings must not be supplemented by unemployment insurance benefits beyond the point where the earnings and benefits together amount to the weekly wage of an unskilled laborer.

The unemployment scheme is based on the recommendations of a commission which reviewed the economic conditions and financial arrangements of the island. The commission expressed the conviction that the plan is actuarily sound.

Those Wage Increases

Reports of wage increases come from many sections. The newspapers have been printing a column or so of such dispatches daily, with the idea of spreading cheer amidst the prevailing economic gloom. In some cases these reports have been ballyhooed as an indication that the depression is on the way out.

Most of the pay raises reported are from five to ten per cent. Every wage increase is welcome and helpful to purchasing power but it should not be forgotten that wages have been so severely slashed that it will take a lot of raises to bring them anywhere near levels that prevailed before the depression began. To bring lasting revival, wages must soar higher than ever before. Only in that way can prosperity be restored and buying power keep pace with production.

Railroading; Oh, Yeah?

Technological unemployment in railroading meant bigger locomotives, longer trains, hump switching yards. In 1929 it spelled 200,000 railway men unemployed. By 1931, 440,000 more had been forced into unemployment, besides those who were demoted and put on part time. Now comes railroad consolidation. More unemployment?

New Comptroller of Currency May Discourage Bank Pay Cuts

Washington, May 18.—J. F. T. O'Connor, a former law partner of Senator William G. McAdoo, of California, has been confirmed by the senate as comptroller of the currency, replacing F. G. Awalt, who has held that position.

The change has been in contemplation for some time, but was held back because of the banking holiday and the confusion that resulted from it.

One of the changes which Mr. O'Connor may effect is that of encouraging banks of the country that are under the control of his office to put a stop to the wage and salary slashing on bank payrolls that has been in progress since the banking holiday was proclaimed.

Mr. Awalt declined to affirm or deny reports that he had issued an order of recommendation to the banks that the salaries of all clerks and other employes should be slashed by at least 10 per cent, and that the salaries of officials should be cut even more.

Most banking employes have already taken heavy wage cuts in recent months, although even before that time working generally for salaries that were notoriously low. It is not believed that the recent wage slashing among bank employes has had the sanction of President Roosevelt, or in fact, that he knew anything about it.

Who Are the "Trouble Makers?"

By Mr. Modestus

"To hell with the trouble makers!"
So said General Hell 'n Maria Banker Charles G. Dawes one day.
Of course, he was provoked.
An impudent school teacher had mentioned the R. F. C.'s loan to his bank—
That little loan of 80 million dollars.
Another teacher—probably a redheaded one—
She suggested a connection between Dawes and Insull's cheating—
Before Insull decamped for the classic shores of modern Greece.

Now, if the general had only said something original—
But the teachers said it first,
Thousands of them!
America is getting ready to say it with—
Well, who knows what they are going to say it with?
"To hell with the trouble makers!"
When they have really made up their minds—
Who the trouble makers are.
General: you'd be surprised.

Did the teachers make the trouble?
Teaching Chicago's children for months without pay—
Did the union labor men make trouble?
Taking wage cuts quietly—and other bitter medicine—
Did the bank depositors make trouble?
Taking their losses, while government R. F. C. fed the big banks—
Who made the trouble, anyway?
Whoever made it, it came from unpaid taxes.
And who is supposed to pay the taxes?
Well, those who get the tax receipts—directly.
And who might that be?
Mostly the big bankers,
And their friends.
The folks who got theirs from that 80 million gift from the R. F. C.

So, sure! You bet!
To hell with the trouble makers.
Who held the money the depositors will never get back again?
Who took the money they knew they never could pay back again?
Who rigged the stock and bond market for suckers to bite at?
Who sold rotten bonds to school teachers and anybody else?
Who knew that the depression was coming on, and never peeped?
Who profited by the selling out of the little fellows?
Who skimmed the cream out of the yellow money harvest?
The trouble makers!
To hell with 'em!
You bet!

Who used to import cheap foreign labor?
The trouble makers!
Who swore to smash organized labor?
The trouble makers!
Who defended child labor?
The trouble makers!
Who demanded—and got—machine guns to beat labor's fight for life?
The trouble makers!
Who owned—and rewarded—the yellow dog injunction judges?
To hell with THEM!

Confessions of a Chamber of Commerce

Pennsylvania Organization "Gleefully" Boasts It Defeated Humane Legislation Through Discreditable Machine Methods

The bulletin of the Pennsylvania State Chamber of Commerce on the legislative session recently ended in that state is one of the most shameless and most shocking statements ever printed.

It boasts that the chamber "feels particularly gleeful" over the fact that it was able to kill all progressive legislation, except a bill outlawing the "yollow dog" contract. It shows equal pride that this result was gained by violating every rule and principle of free government, and muzzling the legislature by machine control.

The statement praises Edward Martin, chairman of the republican state organization, "who at all times gave his whole-hearted support to protect business from the dangerous and crazy proposals advanced."

It praises Speaker Talbot, of the lower house, for appointing "air-tight committees," in which progressive legislation could be smothered, and adds that "our biggest job was to keep this class of bills safely tied up in committee."

And what were these "dangerous and crazy proposals" against which the state chamber of commerce fought so valiantly?

One was a bill for old age pensions. One was a bill reducing hours of labor for women in factories from 54 to 44 hours per week. One compelled employers to pay wages in cash and at regular intervals. One was a resolution to ratify the nattional child labor amendment.

Others were bills reducing interest on small loans, placing occupational diseases under the workmen's compensation act, "requiring a method of proper measurements in bituminous coal mining," providing an income tax for state and local governments.

Every one of these measures has been passed by other legislatures, not only without harm but usually with decided benefit to the state. Yet the chamber not only gloats over defeating these bills, but seems to gloat even more that it defeated them by packed committees, gag rules and machine politics.

It would seem in order next for someone to discover a bulletin from the Chamber of Gangsters in Chicago, boasting of the defeat of laws against racketeers and regretting its inability to release Al Capone.

"WHAT THIS NATION NEEDS—"

(It has been said that "What this nation needs is a good laugh." In the judgment of The Labor World, the following quips provide several. Now, therefore; Editor Keating, of "Labor," being a patriotic and whole-souled citizen, we are quite confident will take a tolerant view of the fact that we have "swiped" his joke column, verbatim, from the editorial page of the current issue of his paper. In order to salve his injured feelings (if any), however, we might remark parenthetically that "Labor" is our idea of the most ably edited and most effective workers' publication in America.—Editor.)

"Ah!" said Pat, "you can't fool me. It's the pony's head that won't go through, not his feet."

The editor of a country newspaper retired with a fortune. When asked the secret of his success, he replied:

"I attribute my ability to retire with a $100,000 bank balance, after thirty years in the newspaper field, to close application to duty, pursuing a policy of strict honesty, always practicing rigorous rules of economy, and to the recent death of my uncle, who left me $98,500.".

Wottoquottok Mill Employes Get Peculiar Pay "Raise"

Hudson, Mass., May 25.—Evidently to decrease industrial unrest, the Wottoquottock Worsted company notified its 200 employes here that they would be given a pay raise.

Mill officials refused to state the amount of the raise. They believed the psychology imparted by the indefinite promise of an unstipulated increase in the contents of the pay envelope would anaesthetize their workers into complete obliviousness to the suffering caused by their present low wages.

Wage Boost anl Hours Cut Demanded by Silk Workers

Paterson, N. J., May 25.—The Associated Silk Workers at a meeting here voted to call a strike in all silk mills.

Officers of the union asserted that workers now average $10 to $12 for a 60-hour week.

The strikers demand a 44-hour week and a wage scale of 4 cents per 60 picks per yard, which would result in an average weekly wage of $18 to $20.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Congress seems on the eve of adjournment. It's been a mad whirl since March 4. Too early at this time to put much of an assessment on the doings.

Ten years hence it will be clear that this was the year of the big hurricane.

Not since the early days of Woodrow Wilson has there been anything like such a whirl of change.

It seems that pressure of need jams up until, finally, old restraints have to give way. Like waters backed up against a dam until the pressure gets heavier than the dam can stand. Then! Wild rush.

America seems aware that great change has taken place, but to most of us the change still seems to be something impersonal, in books, but not in life.

Soon it will dawn upon us good and plenty that a change in the way of living is to follow all these changes in the law books.

Only then will we know whether we like it or don't like it.

Some think that the Big Fellows will have harder going from now on. Let us hope so. But about that, let us not give cheers too soon.

The Big Fellows have a way of slipping in under the tent, even when we think everything is staked down. Everyone hopes the crooks of large size will not have such an easy time looting the people's pocketbooks and if it turns out that way, this will be a year to celebrate hereafter. Long experience, however, should have bred caution in such matters into the human race. We can afford to hold the cheers for a little while.

There has been so much rotten that it seems impossible that it should all be cleared up in a few months. Clearing up the mess means remaking the social order to a considerable extent and nobody need think that is an easy job.

Great strides have been taken. Fundamental changes have taken place on the law books. They remain to be worked out in real life. Soon we shall know more about that. The fear is that the important crooks still have enough foothold to make life worth while for them. Again the counsel is, hold the cheers for a bit—hope, but don't over-hope.

This may be but a small voice yelping in the wilderness, but take this, nevertheless, as a matter of importance. If the national recovery act becomes law, as it probably will, the workers in non-union industries will be more voiceless and much more helpless than ever.

Unions will become ten times as necessary. Their functions will be much more important.

Under the new dispensation—it will be nothing less—workers will either organize completely or they will be at the mercy of bigger powers than they have ever faced. Then they will confront a whole industry, not just one corporation. And the acts of the bosses will have all the force of statute law. Verily, something lies ahead of this great nation. Its like has never been.

The memory of the great company that have perished in the nation's wars is honored on Memorial day. Their graves are decorated and their services and sacrifices lauded throughout the country.

Why would it not also be fitting on Memorial day to remember the even greater company of workers with hand and brain whose lives contributed to the upbuilding and the greatness of this nation? Surely they deserve tribute, whether they died at their tasks as the result of accident, were cut off before their time as the result of lives of unremitting toil and hardship or died a so-called natural death. In any case, these men and women were heroes of peace and contributed as much or more to the national welfare as did the heroes of war. They were the millions who, "humble and nameless, the straight, hard pathway plod" in every generation and a grateful nation should be proud to do them honor.

Discussing the troubles of the cement industry, the Business Week asks:

"Which is in the public interest—to insist upon new price wars, with low wages, unemployment, and eventual bankruptcy as the price to be paid in return for, possibly, lower prices to the consumer? Or to permit, encourage and supervise a sensible co-operation which shall stabilize orderly production and distribution, and incidentally permit steady employment at fair wages?"

The same question might be asked in connection with any or all industry. There is only one answer. The "sensible co-operation" mentioned by the Business Week is undoubtedly in the public interest and there is every indication that the people favor it.

The American League to Abolish Capital Punishment says that for the most part the death penalty falls upon the "poor and helpless." Those familiar with the administration of the criminal law know that this is a fact. How often do we hear of a man or woman of wealth and position being executed? Not often.

Citizens' Councils Suggested to Guide School Economies

Washington, May 25.—One of the practical outcomes of the Citizens Conference on the Crisis in Education, held in Washington early in January at the call of former President Hoover, is the movement for the organization of citizens' councils in every community. In a circular on this subject recently issued by representatives of a number of organizations, it is explained that after a newly appointed general committee had held two meetings of which Carl H. Milam of the American Library association is the chairman, it was agreed that the end sought could not be achieved by any over-all national action, but by appropriate cooperation of citizens' groups in each community and state.

In compliance with this determination follows this circular, as a follow-up, but chiefly as tip-supplying media to those who are interested in this important subject, naming the objectives of the movement and giving hints for "constructive economies." Regretfully they cannot all be given here. A paragraph or two may serve to give a hint of the circular's value.

"For what services do you pay? How much?

"Has the enrollment increased? In what grades? Are the demands for adult classes less or greater than formerly? What economies have been put into effect? What were total expenditures and expenditures per capita of the population for each of the last three years? How much of this is for the debt service? What are the schools' chief problems?

"What are the comparable facts about libraries, museums, playgrounds, parks, public health and sanitation, relief, welfare, hospitals, police and fire departments, streets and roads, other city departments, and municipal administration?"

The circular also requests that non-governmental public services, such as relief, welfare and local college, be included in the information obtained.

Railroad Bill Gives Workers A Hard Blow

Washington.—Donald R. Richberg, of Chicago, attorney for the railroad brotherhoods, made a vigorous protest against the administration bill for emergency reorganization of the railroads at the hearings on the measure held by the senate commerce committee.

"Ninety per cent of the operating economies proposed under the bill," he said, "would be achieved at the expense of the railroad employes."

The committee heard Richberg after Interstate Commerce Commissioner Joseph B. Eastman had declared that large numbers of railroad workers would lose their jobs by the proposed consolidations of service and elimination of waste.

"Unemployment is the fundamental problem with which the country must deal and solve, if ruin is to be averted," Eastman said. "Nevertheless, it seems to me an unsound conclusion that employment should be preserved by retaining waste and inefficiency. This is particularly true of the railroads."

Senator Long, of Louisiana, urged the 30-hour week to "sop up the loss of jobs." Mr. Eastman opposed this on the ground that it would increase the wage bill of the owners. Mr. Eastman is prominently mentioned for the post of federal co-ordinator under the terms of the measure.

Dr. W. M. W. Splawn, counsel for house committee on interstate and foreign commerce, agreed with Mr. Eastman that the proposed reorganization changes would throw large numbers of railroad workers into the unemployed army. He felt, however, that if the large economies resulted in lower freight and passenger rates, higher wages might follow.

Taking the position that those who assume responsibility for depriving men of employment must accept the obligation to provide employment or support for the men they force into idleness, Mr. Richberg offered a number of amendments to remedy the fundamental weakness of the reorganization bill.

The contended that the act should comprehend measures to improve labor conditions and insisted that to provide economic stability provision should be made for the participation of labor in planning industrial operations. In addition, the co-ordinator should be empowered to rehabilitate and improve the roads.

Chicago, May 18.—Headquarters of the American Federation of Teachers here is receiving daily from teachers' organizations all over the country copies of resolutions which have been passed with unanimity by these bodies which extend sympathy to the Chicago teachers in their endeavor to secure justice in the matter of unpaid salaries. These resolutions pledge the teachers making them to refrain from patronizing the Century of Progress exposition until the just demands of the Chicago teachers are met.

Among cities from which these resolutions have been sent are San Francisco, Cleveland, Brooklyn and New Orleans. The associations represent many thousands of teachers in all parts of the United States who pledge themselves not to patronize the fair and also, in the words of one of the resolutions, "urge others to refrain from attending the exposition in Chicago unless that city makes satisfactory compensation and redress to its teachers."

This action has been taken not because Chicago is unable to make any attempt to pay the back salaries due her teachers but because the teachers of the country, in common with those of Chicago, have finally come to realize that the Chicago teachers remain unpaid for so long a time because of unfair, discriminatory tactics on the part of Chicago banking institutions and financial interests. They know that the teachers of Chicago have not been given an even break with other public employes in the matter of partial payment of back salaries.

PINCHOT ASKS INVESTIGATION OF COAL DISTRICT CONDITIONS

Washington, May 25.—On behalf of thousands of miners, suffering from the closing of anthracite coal mines in Schuylkill county, Gov. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, asked President Roosevelt to order a federal investigation of conditions in the county.

Presenting a petition to the president signed by 5,000 miners and their families, Pinchot said that closing of mines recently had thrown 3,000 miners out of employment, causing much suffering. The petition asked that the federal government investigate wage conditions and the closing of mines in the county, which is the largest hard coal producing region in Pennsylvania.

In urging an investigation, Gov. Pinchot expressed the belief that soft coal prices should be stabilized.

Senator Neely, of West Virginia, and Huston Thompson, former chairman of the federal trade commission, made a request for stabilization.

Gov. Pinchot said he was heartily in accord with a plan for coal legislation prepared by Nathan Margold, interior department solicitor. The plan, he said, was much like that proposed by a group of western Pennsylvania independent operators. The operators' plan called for limitation and distribution of production, with minimum wages and minimum prices, regulated under the supervision of the government.

RAILWAY MANAGERS PLAN TO SPLIT BROTHERHOODS IN BATTLE FOR PAY CUT

Washington, May 25.—Railway managers are putting themselves in readiness to try to club the Railroad Brotherhoods into acceptance of a sharp decrease in wages. The strategy is to be that of pitting the trainmen and firemen, who are suffering most under seniority rules from the decline in traffic, against the conductors and engineers.

Many engineers who less than four years ago were at the throttles of through freight trains have been forced back to the firing of switch engines, and through freight conductors are looking for a day's work as yard switchmen. Some of these enengineman and conductors are working only five or six days a month.

A trainman in Alexandria, Va., who found a minor job the other day in a government hospital, said his name is posted on the train master's list, but under the seniority rule he expects from five to eight years to pass before he is called to go out with a train.

Managers believe that under the pressure of unemployment among firemen and trainmen, they can compel the engineers and conductors to accept a sharp cut in wages, and to modify the rules of seniority to provide a larger spread in available work. They count on the idle trainmen and firemen to support them in their course.

Meanwhile, the salaries of railroad presidents ranging from $75,000 to $150,000 a year are to remain untouched, and there are no signs of reduction in salaries of almost as much to vice-presidents and other transportation executives.

MORE ABOUT RECOVERY BILL

criminal statute, because it provides a $500 fine for violations, as well as possible suspension of license.

The purpose of the bill is to procure "co-operative action among trade groups to induce and maintain united action of labor and management under adequate governmental sanctions and supervision, to eliminate unfair competitive practices, to reduce and relieve unemployment, to improve standards of labor, and otherwise to rehabilitate industry and to conserve natural resources."

Act Good Two Years.

An "administration" and an "administrator" are provided for in the public works section, but supreme authority is reposed in the hands of the president. The life of the act will be two years, upon the seemingly sound assumption that the bill will be enacted into law.

Trade associations, upon application, may have approved by the president a code of fair competition, but in approving such code the president may impose terms of his own, without limit. United States district courts will become the agencies through which suits for violation may be brought. Where no application for approval of a code is made, the president may impose a code. The president is authorized "to enter into agreements with" and to approve voluntary agreements between employers and workers. The president may make the terms upon which businesses may be licensed and no firm shall thereafter operate without such a license.

It is provided that every code shall guarantee the "right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing" and that no worker shall be required to be or not to be a member of any organization of workers; but this is regarded as an academic statement of a right which will be of little value unless enforced by labor itself. It is pointed out that the Clayton act and the anti-injunction act also guarantee labor's rights to organize and bargain collectively and to refuse to sign yellow dog contracts, but that the statement of these rights in law has not made them effective in operation.

Whether for good or ill, the bill appears to provide that the president shall have power to prescribe the conditions under which industries shall operate, to fix the wages and working conditions of workers and, in fact, to determine the whole method of American industry.

It is argued that the bill provides for voluntary action first, with compulsion afterward, but that is evidently a moot question. The unquestioned authority for dictatorship is written into the bill, without any valid guarantee to the workers, or to employers either, for that matter, in which respect it falls far short of the Black-Connery revised bill which President Green, of the A. F. of L., has approved.

British Chemical Concern Restores 1931 Wage Cut

London, Eng.—In his annual address at the meeting of the stockholders of Imperial Chemical Industries, Limited, Sir Harry McGowan, chairman and managing director, announced that the wage reduction imposed on a large body of the concern's employes in 1931 had been abolished.

"This restoration of pay to our workers," Sir Henry said, "will add to the current purchasing power of those affected at the rate of 180,000 pounds per annum. This money will pass into circulation and will be of benefit to unemployment."

It was stated that an increase in net profits of 1,320,788 pounds, 38 per cent, made the wage restoration possible.

to Mississippi for a printer to operate his typesetting machine, and local typos were the beneficiaries of some sage economic philosophy as their share of the new business project.

Local Typos were in somewhat of a speculative mood this week. Assuming, as one member of No. 89 expressed it, that the Mississippi operator will draw the same salary generously offered the local man—$15.00 per week—and figuring the possibility of five or six children to feed, how much will the Mississippian have left on Saturday night to spend at McDonald's "Home Owned, Home Operated" grocery stores?

Chattanooga Typographical union, having a half-century record of friendly and honorable dealing with local publishers, is loath to enter a "battle" with anyone, but it is announced that due publicity will be given to McDonald's policy of low wages and imported help, and there is no doubt whatever in the minds of members of No. 89 that the philosophy of the self-styled individualist grocery-bakery-milkman magnate will be disapproved by the business men of Chattanooga, as well as the public in general.

And, oh, yes; the young Typo who was offered so much employment by the merchant prince, having received a larger weekly stipend for possibly half as many hours the second year of his five-year apprenticeship, declined the generous offer.

Forestry Workers Strike; 15 Are Expelled from Camp

Camp Dix, N. J.—A strike at the citizens conservation camp here resulted in the summary dismissal by Brig.-Gen. H. L. Laubach, commander, of forty-five of the forestry workers, and the reinstatement of seventeen who claimed they were forced to join the "walkout" by threats of being "beaten up."

The strike started when beans were substituted at the mess hall for potatoes, which the men claimed were not properly cooked, and other conditions at the camp were denounced. Major William R. Schmidt, executive officer, said the strike had been expected for some time. There are about 1,400 men in the camp, of whom some 600 are negroes, recruited from among the unemployed in New York City and Newark.

MR. WORKING MAN:

Wages Cut 50%?

That's What ROY McDONALD, Owner of the HOME STORES, Wants

Can You Afford to Spend Your Money with a Man Who Wants YOUR Pay Cut in Half?

AN EXAMPLE OF MR. McDONALD'S POLICIES:

He took over the Bleacher Bill Sports Journal, which paid decent wages for reasonable hours, and is now publishing it under the name of "Chattanooga Free Press," paying low wages and working his men almost from "can till can't."

McDonald says his stores are "home-owned" and "home-operated"—yet he brought in a man from out of town to run his paper when there are many Chattanooga printers who have been out of work for months.

McDonald says: "President Hoover made a mistake in 1929 when he asked that wages be maintained. If he had cut wages 50% in 1929 the depression would now be over."

DO YOU BELIEVE THAT?

ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION IS HUGE SUCCESS

Labor's Program Enjoyed By Fair-Sized Crowd.

CLARK, CROWLEY, SMITH SPEAKERS

Tableaux Depict Progress of Local Workers — "Old-Timers" Honored.

"A good time was had by all" at the celebration Monday night of the thirtieth anniversary of Chattanooga's Central Body, reorganized in April, 1903. The "birthday party" was staged in the circuit court room at the courthouse, and the large room was nearly filled with an appreciative audience of men, women and children. A ten-piece orchestra furnished by Local No. 80, American Federation of Musicians, opened the program and enlivened proceedings throughout the evening.

President Kamin, of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, after outlining the purpose of the gathering, turned the meeting over to George Forbes, chairman of the committee which arranged the affair.

A feature of the celebration was a series of tableaux posed in a shadow box made for the occasion by M. H. Ortwein. Labor was depicted in its various stages since 1903. The first "picture" was posed by Miss Ruth Forbes, daughter of the chairman, in nurse's costume and holding the infant "Labor." As the curtain was drawn, Mr. Forbes said:

"Back in the good year 1903, when working men were not bothered with foreign war debts, jig saw puzzles, walkathons or automobiles; when the older workmen had union cards and were proud of them, and the younger men looked forward to the day when they could complete their trade and secure a journeyman's card—when the Knights of Labor were giving way to the different craft organizations, there was born in Chattanooga a bouncing baby.

"This baby was named the Central Labor union, and in spite of setbacks, fights from without and within, the opposition of organized capital, the mistakes of its officers and the jealousies of its members, it grew up and prospered. The first officers were Clarence Swick, president; I. L. Wade, secretary-treasurer."

The second picture, 1910, was posed by E. E. Crosby, Jr., young son of the Central Body's sergeant-at-arms, dressed in overalls and holding a hammer.

"Seven years old and still going strong," Mr. Forbes said.

"By this time there were united in the Central Labor union many craft organizations. The painters, carpenters, molders, tailors, coopers, brewery workers, machinists, car workers, barbers, pressmen, boiler makers, typographical, blacksmiths, plumbers, bartenders, and several others.

"This was the day of the big Labor Day parade and celebration.

"Production was far behind consumption, but with modern machinery being installed in many industries, the eight-hour day was just around the corner."

The third pose represented the period of 1917-1918, showing a young man in uniform, with bugle.

"The wheels of industry are speeded up to make war material," the chairman explained. "Many members of organized labor are in the army now—with the hollow promise of the same old job at the same old bench when they return.

"Labor is in great demand, and wages are higher, and organizations are at their peak. The name is changed to the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council. The Labor Day celebration made enough money on one celebration to adopt thirty-five French war orphans, and there were many members of organized labor that were on hand when your Uncle Sam's army broke the Hindenburg line. But nothing is as easily forgotten by the public as yesterday's hero."

For 1928 a young man in overalls proudly held up his union card, while the "boss" shook his fist at him, and Mr. Forbes said:

"Through war, pestilence, or economic stress of whatever character, the union card stands always as a

Recovery Bill Protects Labor; Bans Fake Union

House Committee Passes Amendments Offered by President Green in Interest of American Workers.

Washington, June 1.—The ways and means committee of the house of representatives adopted the amendments to the president's national industrial recovery bill offered by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to more thoroughly protect the rights of the workers to organize into bona fide trade unions and to prohibit employers from compelling their employes to join company unions.

The original draft of the bill prescribed that the fair-competition codes, agreements and licenses which the measure authorizes should contain a stipulation "that employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing."

Coercion of Employes Prohibited.

In the hearings held by the ways and means committee, Mr. Green urged that this protective clause be made more explicit by adding the guarantee that the employes shall also "be free from the interference, restraint or coercion of employers of labor, or their agents, in the designation of such representatives or in self-organization or in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection."

Anti-Injunction Principle Reaffirmed.

"This amendment," Mr. Green told the committee, "does not include within it any form of new legislation. It is a verbatim statement taken from the declared public policy of the government as set forth in the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction law.

"Congress adopted this declaration by an overwhelming vote when it passed the Norris-LaGuardia act. It is now a part of the law of the land.

"We ask, labor asks, that it be included in this emergency legislation. Labor believes it necessary in order to confirm and emphasize the guaranty of the right of organization and of the exercise of collective bargaining.

Real Guarantee of Right to Organize.

"I am only refreshing your memories when I call your attention to the declared public policy of the government as set forth in the Norris-LaGuardia act.

"That, it seems to me, is a declaration that has been accepted and is in effect and can be incorporated in this legislation.

"There will be no departure from policies heretofore pursued. We are not asking that something new be incorporated, but that we lift out of that declared public policy this section and include it in this emergency legislation for the reason that labor will then feel better satisfied that its right to organize is really guaranteed, and that it will be permitted to exercise freedom of action in that direction."

Company Union Given Knockout.

The same section of the bill also declared that in setting up the codes, agreements and licenses "no employe and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any organization or to refrain from joining a labor organization of his own choosing."

"It is the opinion of the American Federation of Labor," Mr. Green said, "that this amendment would make clear and definite the real meaning and purpose of this part of the act.

Employers Use Coercion.

"I think, if I could interrogate the committee who were engaged in drafting this section, that they would admit that they had in mind the words I have suggested as an amendment to this section of the act.

"Labor has been faced with this problem, that corporations set up their own company unions. These unions are the creatures of the corporation, and function only at the will of the industrial corporation.

"Many workers are required, as a condition of employment, to join a company union. These unions are the creatures of the corporation, and function only at the will of the industrial corporation.

"Many workers are required, as a condition of employment, to join a company union. When they become members of that company union then the corporation is secure, because it simply deals with itself. We want to avoid that very thing.

NATIONAL LABOR CONFERENCE TO CONSIDER RECOVERY BILL SET FOR JUNE 6 AT CAPITAL

Strategy Map To Be Made in Big Sessions

Employers Plan Campaign to Leave Labor "Out of Picture," But Unions Will Meet Issue in Extraordinary Gathering.

Washington, June 1.—A national conference of representatives of national and international unions will be held in Washington, D. C., June 6 to lay plans and map strategy for organizing the workers of America to function under the industrial recovery bill.

By that time the bill will have become law and the government will undoubtedly have announced its set-up of machinery for its enforcement.

Green Sends Call.

President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, is sending out an official call for the conference, with a statement of the reasons for calling such an extraordinary session of labor.

Indicative of the speed with which the industrial revolution of America is getting under way is the fact that the National Association of Manufacturers has prepared and distributed to its members a chart showing the employers' idea of a program of action under the new legislation.

It is taken for granted that labor will prepare a program to meet the employers' program.

Employers Lay Plans.

The employers' effort has taken definite shape already, in the direction of shutting unions out of the picture as far as possible.

Labor strategy will, naturally, be shaped to meet this program of perversion by the big employer organizations.

The bill is now before committee in the senate, with a favorable report scheduled, except for the taxation features on which there may yet be hot fighting. But the vital labor amendments are expected to get senate approval and to go into law as now written and as adopted by the house.

The whole feeling in the capitol and in labor circles here is that the nation is on the eve of developments perhaps more important than a declaration of war.

HERE'S SECTION OF BILL COMPELLING UNIONS!

Here is the official text of Section 7, industrial recovery bill, passed by the house, introduced in the senate by Senator Wagner, now before committee in the senate and scheduled to be passed as a paramount administration measure. Indications are the senate committee will accept Section 7 as passed by the house. Here is the new section, in all likelihood due to be the law of the land within a few days:

"Sec. 7. (a) Every code of fair competition, agreement, and license approved, prescribed, or issued under this title shall contain the following conditions: (1) That employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from the interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor, or their agents, in the designation of such representatives or in self-organizations or in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection; (2) that no employe and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining a labor organization of his own choosing; and (3) that employers shall comply with the maximum hours of labor, minimum rates of pay, and other working conditions, approved or prescribed by the president."

Labor's 'Manifest Duty' Clear And Imperative: Must Organize

By CHESTER M. WRIGHT

The union that doesn't wake up and "step on it" under the new industrial recovery act will be sunk.

The new legislation creates an industrial dictatorship, the like of which America has never dreamed of—an astounding thing—but it opens the door to such a trade union opportunity as we have not known since the war.

Under the new legislation ORGANIZATION BECOMES COMPULSORY!

Think that over.

Organization is compulsory, but trade unionism isn't compulsory.

It will be up to the labor movement to claim the field by actually occupying the field.

If trade unions occupy the field, NO OTHER ORGANIZATION CAN GET IN.

If trade unions do not occupy the field, something else will get in and trade unionism will be OUT FOR KEEPS.

Here are three striking facts:

1—Employers, organized in trade associations, must file with the president or his agent their codes of practice and ethics.

2—Wage agreements must be filed, along with price lists.

3—There can be no wage agreements unless workers are organized; therefore, workers MUST BE ORGANIZED!

The president can, himself or through an agency which he will create, modify or set aside any price or wage agreement and he can change the hours of labor. He also can change the working conditions. He is DICTATOR, under the terms of the Wagner industrial recovery bill.

Labor, through its spokesmen, has accepted this dictatorship. The time to protest has gone. Like it or not, it is here! it seemingly had to come.

The fact is, unions were going down hill. They had lost strength since the war. They were in no position to fight this legislation. The depression was knocking the life out of them.

Some would have nailed the old battle flag to the mast and gone to glory fighting the oncoming dictatorship. But the chosen representatives, going over the whole ground, decided otherwise.

We can theorize no longer. TODAY IS THE DAY OF ACTION.

The great message is this: ORGANIZE ALL ALONG THE LINE—ORGANIZE EVERYONE EVERYWHERE. If there are no unions then unions must be made.

It is of no use to view the field with old spectacles. A whole new condition confronts labor. That may be hard to realize, but it is true.

America is shortly going to be a land of universal organization, with known terms of relationship in every industry.

National and international unions will lead in completely organizing their fields. Local labor bodies can and must wake up the workers in every community. The day when an industry could be half union and half non-union has gone. A lot of things have gone. Unions that have tried to build a wall around little corners of the field are through. And the day of the racketeer who has crept in here and there is over, too. That is, if real unionism rises to its opportunity and is true to its mission. In the next year, perhaps in the next six months, trade unionism in America will pass its greatest crisis, either to pass out or to function as labor's portion of the machinery in a new and vital industrial democracy.

We start with a dictatorship, but we can build industrial democracy.

Or we can sink. And if we sink perhaps we deserve to sink.

There is reason to believe that unions and employers will have a full chance, under the new law, to come together and establish voluntary agreements; that government will step in to rule and determine terms and conditions only where unions and employers fail. That ought to make our course clear and our duty clear.

In this town and every town there must be tremendous organizing campaigns.

We have a new reason for organizing; a new goal to achieve; a new demand for unionizing EVERY WORKER.

New methods will be necessary. We have now the task of winning under NEW conditions and if we must use new tactics, then that is the thing to do. Use yesterday's methods and ideas only so far as they fit the new needs.

America is to be plunged overnight into a new industrial order. He who thinks only yesterday's thoughts will be lost.

Every Central Labor union and every Council of Trades ought to be NOW in the midst of a tremendous organizing campaign. There is no time to think about whether we want to do this thing; WE HAVE TO DO IT.

If we do not do it, then somebody else will do it, BECAUSE ORGANIZATION HAS TO COME.

Whether we like the dictatorial power in the hands of the president is now just an academic question. It's like whether we like the weather.

The fact is that, under this new industrial civilization we can have a trade union movement powerful enough to command and in the end we can have an industry operating in response to democratic control.

Labor gave that idea to America. The whole great program of organized forces meeting to work out programs and terms and restrictions is labor's program. Labor called it "Industry's Manifest Duty." We can come to that through the machinery which we now have the chance to build. We can do that because we have the power to end the dictatorship when it has served its purpose and when we shall have built the organizations capable of carrying through a program of democratic operation.

This is, actually, the day of revolution and revolutions do not wait for those who cannot make up their minds to act or who cannot chart a course.

THE FIRST AND IMMEDIATE JOB IS TO ORGANIZE—NOT NEXT WEEK, BUT NOW! CAN TRADE UNIONISM DO THIS GREAT JOB IN TIME? IT MUST!

Where to Look Is Puzzle For Pecora's Staff

Deepest Meanings of Morgan Rule Likely to Remain Hidden Because Investigators Are Not Financial Experts.

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT

Washington, une 1.—In the earthquake disclosures of the Morgan investigation, the most vital facts may never come to light—and that is the most important thing about the great inquiry this week.

Morgan the Magnificent has undergone his grilling with the calm of Buddha or the Sphinx—and maybe the reason for it is that he has had a laugh up his sleeve all the time. Maybe it is because he knows the 18-inch shells will never be fired at him.

Tremendous as has been the exposure thus far, it is the common talk of a circle very close to the inquiry that the most significant facts never will be uncovered, for the simple reason that nobody on the investigating staff of Ferdinand Pecora, chief counsel for the senate stock market investigators, knows the financial game well enough to know how to dig out the most significant things. If they do come out it probably will be by accident.

Makes Nation Gasp.

The investigation will not fail. It already is a great success. But the chances are 75 to 25, or perhaps better, that the inquiry will not bring out the whole truth about the great empire of money and the extent and the ways of its rulership over mankind in America and elsewhere.

Shocking revelations thus far have made the nation gasp. That Morgan and his partners should pay no income tax for two years—yes, for three years—is an astounding thing. This revelation probably will change the tax laws. These men had income. They supported great estates and palatial yachts. But they paid no income tax. They let high government officials in on good things in the market, but the workers and other small taxpayers paid the money that met the payrolls of these high officials.

May Shatter Politics.

How far the thunders of the investigation may strike into the political life of the nation remains to be seen. The national treasurers of the two big political parties were offered stock bargains. Secretary of the Treasury Woodin was on five such lists of favored ones.

Names high in the galaxy of national political stars were on the Morgan lists for sure things. It is not to be considered that the House of Morgan considered any man on the Morgan lists as an enemy of the structure out of which the Morgan profits grew. The Morgan partners are human. They have their friends. Clearly the lists were made up of men suggested by the various partners. There seems to be an interesting mixture of names—men in high place, in or likely to be in public office. Charles Francis Adams knew he would be secretary of the navy when he accepted a Morgan bargain. On the other hand it is not likely that Colonel Lindbergh's name would have been on the list had it not been for Dwight Morrow and Dwight Morrow's daughter. The Morgan partners probably helped many men to make a profit because they genuinely liked those men. That was a natural thing. Was that the reason in all cases?

Vast Looting Scheme.

The thing that has not been dwelt upon by the senate committee or its lawyer is this:

Why should any banker or set of bankers have it in their power to skim millions in profits out of an industrial, commercial or financial enterprise before that enterprise has had a chance to turn a wheel or create a cent's worth of wealth?

Before there was any market value for Standard Brands stock Morgan friends were offered their allotments at a price sure to be below the opening market price. When Allegheny corporation stock was selling at $35 to $37 a share, it was offered to Morgan friends at $20. Somewhere, through the country, men working on railroads, in shops, in mines, in stores and in factories, were expected to work hard and produce goods on which profits could be made to pay dividends and justify the inflated values, to actually do the work and create the things upon the worth of which and the demand for which there must be to pay that profit. In a way it was an advance profit on expected labor and sales. It was pillaging through mortgages against the future work of men and women.

But amazing and shocking as have been the revelations already produced by Pecora, the astute prosecutor, they probably never will hit the main bullseye, because neither Pecora nor any of his aides know all of the real game of high finance.

Men on the committee know about such things—Couzens, for instance. But the committee members do not know the evidence. They have not done the investigating, or worked up the case. They are like jurors, waiting to hear.

Morgan the Magnificent, with the calm of the rock mountains—and a good deal of their ruggedness—has not been worried over the show thus far. Perhaps it is because he knows the big shells will never land on the roof of that famous structure at Broad and Wall streets, on which there is no sign to tell the world that it is the House of Morgan.

NEW WEEKLY HAS HARD TIME 'MAKING BOW'

Mr. McDonald Initiated In Publishing Business.

FIRST ISSUE LATE, CONTAINS ONE "AD"

Entry into the publishing field is apparently proving rather difficult for Mr. Roy McDonald, dairyman, baker, groceryman and self-styled "individualist", who believes wages should be cut 50 per cent and workers should toil until their tasks are finished, regardless of how many hours per day that end requires.

Announced to appear on Thursday, May 25, an uncertain number of copies were finally issued for the edification of the public some time Saturday. Although there were sixteen pages of tabloid, composed for the most part of miscellaneous plate, but one business institution, aside from McDonald's "Home Stores," was represented in the advertising columns. Efforts are being made by Chattanooga Typographical union to communicate with the merchant using the weekly's advertising columns and apprise him of McDonald's attitude toward Chattanooga printers.

It is understood that "mechanical troubles" were responsible for the failure of the weekly to appear on time, and local printers, recalling McDonald's views respecting compensation for skilled labor, were not surprised at the outcome. Efforts to secure a copy of the second issue failed, and up to press time it was presumed the publication is "still stuck."

Widespread disagreement with the antiquated ideas of McDonald respecting cheaper wages was encountered this week by members of Central Body and Chattanooga Typographical union, who have charge of the publicity campaign of No. 89, and business men generally were quick to point out the inconsistency of the merchant's views in the face of the fact that the nation has realized the futility of wage cuts as an aid to economic recovery.

Working people, organized and unorganized, are indicating keen resentment at McDonald's admitted belief that wages should be still further cut, and many who have heretofore spent a large share of their earnings in the so-called "Home Stores" are loud in their condemnation of a policy which not only approves low wages and long hours, but gives scant consideration for the claims of Chattanooga union craftsmen.

A Splendid Choice

Announcement this week that George Forbes, for many years an employe of the local postoffice, will be promoted to assistant postmaster, was received with what appeared to be just about unanimous approval. Citizens of all groups have swamped the "old timer" with congratulations, and Congressman McReynolds is being generally commended for his choice.

As a representative of organized labor, Mr. Forbes has a long and honorable record for intelligent service to his fellow workers. He has filled many responsible positions in his own organization, the Postal Clerks, and in the general labor movement throughout the state. He also enjoys a splendid record for civic service, being active in many movements for the betterment of Chattanooga. He has taken a prominent part in the Spanish-American war veterans and other fraternal organizations, and numbers his warm personal friends by the hundreds.

Thanks!

"Looking Backward," the supplement to the last issue of the Chattanooga Labor World, commemorating the thirtieth anniversary of the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, was a handsome affair, consisting of some twenty-eight pages, profusely illustrated and containing many interesting articles contributed by leaders in the organized labor movement, both in Tennessee and elsewhere.

The supplement is a credit to Editor Robert M. Cooke, and the Advocate extends congratulations.

Smuggling Aliens and Unemployment

There are over 13,000,000 unemployed workers in the United States.

Confronted with this grave emergency, Congress should adopt every reasonable measure to increase the number of jobs available for our citizens.

One prolific source of job destruction for American workers is the smuggling of aliens into our country under a provision of the seamen's law, which permits seamen who are not American citizens but who declare their purpose of again going to sea are given sixty days to do so before the immigration law applies.

Taking advantage of this provision and the regulations for its enforcement immigrants who would be otherwise excluded are hired as seamen in foreign ports to make up padded crews for American ships and then permitted to land in the United States. They mingle with the population and take jobs that rightfully belong to American workers.

Thousands of these alien seamen are not seamen at all. As a matter of fact, they are smuggled into our country. If they were not labeled seamen they would be barred from the United States under our immigration exclusion laws.

Andrew Furuseth, president of the International Seamen's Union of America, claims that more than 500,000 of these alien seamen immigrants have come across from Europe in violation of our laws. The number which has come from China is very large, but the actual figures are not known.

The Seamen's Bill, sponsored in the Senate by Senator King, of Utah, and in the House of Representatives by Congressman Dies, of Texas, would definitely put an end to the evasion of the immigration laws so pointedly described by Mr. Furuseth. It provides that all vessels entering ports of the United States the majority of whose crews have been engaged at foreign ports shall when leaving the United States carry crews at least equal in number to those brought in. The bill also tightens up the government inspection which determines whether or not the aliens are bona fide seamen.

The measure has been before Congress for a number of years. It has been favorably reported twice by the Immigration Committee of the House of Representatives and four times by the Senate Immigration Committee.

Despite these favorable reports, those who own and control the American shipping industry, in alliance with similar interests in foreign countries, have been strong enough to prevent its enactment.

With the improvement of wages and working conditions, smuggling aliens into the United States as bogus seamen to take the jobs that of right belong to Americans will largely increase.

The prompt enactment of the King-Dies bill would effectively restrict this nefarious practice. The bill is in the hands of the Senate and House Immigration Committees. As an immediate measure to attack unemployment, the immigration committees should report the bill without delay and use every effort to have it made the law of the land during the special session of Congress.

Wall Street's Army of the Potomac

Be this as it may, the age of lightning change and of Herculean attacks on big business, Big Business in capital letters is on the job in Washington, D. C., as every half-way informed person knows.

When the Industrial Recovery Act was being drafted Mr. Jim Emory, of the National Association of Manufacturers, could horn his way in to be heard.

Shoals of representatives of Big Business and Special Privilege are camping in the Capital, another Bonus Army, but not sleeping in army tents.

Bank lobbyists are trying to jam the Glass and Steagall bills so they will not pass in this session and they may succeed.

Meanwhile the question is whether these agents of Mr. Shylock will gain advantages in Washington or whether their nearness to the halls of legislation will merely make the trimming of their sails easier for the Government.

Plenty of people are unwilling to bet better than 50-50 either way.

Labor's Opportunity for Service

The national industrial recovery bill, scheduled for speedy enactment into law by Congress, gives substantial recognition to organized labor in determining wages, hours and working conditions in the vast planned production visioned by the measure.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, stressed this point in his address on "Modern Economic Planning" at the anniversary reunion of the Harvard Business School Club in New York City. After describing the tremendous import of the proposed legislation, he said:

> The workers must share in the social and economic benefits which will inevitably flow from the enactment and successful administration of such legislation. They can only do this through organization of a kind and character which corresponds with the organization of employers as provided for in the act. It must be obvious to all that labor can only secure its share of the benefits of such legislation through organization, collective bargaining and through the exercise of its economic influence.
> It is fortunate indeed that there exists at the present time a constructive organized labor movement embracing and comprehending all trades and crafts. Through such an organization labor is prepared to organize and unite its forces so that the workers of the nation may be protected in their rights under this legislation and the full benefits of the labor provisions of the act may be enjoyed by the masses of the people.

The bill includes broad provisions for securing higher wages, shorter hours, improved working conditions for all workers. But the strong voice of the workers will be necessary in order to secure these rights.

The bona fide trade union movement is the only organization that can make that voice effective. Now is the time to join the union!

PAY RAISE ANNOUNCEMENTS MISLEADING, GREEN SAYS

Washington, June 1. — Announcements of wage increases are not always what they are cracked up to be, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, pointed out in reviewing progress recently made in raising pay levels.

Some businesses and industries which have announced pay raises are still forcing their employes to accept starvation wages, Green declared. He stressed the fact that 10 per cent wage increases do not mean much when cuts of 40 and 50 per cent and more have previously been put into effect.

Green criticized pay standards of North Carolina textile mills, though he said other concerns have been just as unfair. North Carolina mills which have increased pay by 5 per cent are only paying their workers about $4 a week, he said. He added that some New England fabric mills are paying women workers from $10 to $12 a week, which he asserted is too low.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

New York's strict child labor laws have driven employers of children to open sweatshops in Connecticut and Pennsylvania, the children's bureau of the United States department of labor points out. Taking advantage of lax laws in Connecticut and Pennsylvania, the sweatshop bosses are seeking refuge in these two states and to a certain extent in other states, and are unmercifully exploiting boy and girl workers, to the scandal of the states unfortunate enough to harbor them.

The situation is another illustration of the need for uniform state laws. Lax labor laws give a state an unfair advantage over states with progressive labor and social legislation. The need for uniform legislation is particularly urgent at the present time, with the depression-born demand for very low priced products operating to break down all fair wage and working standards.

With the virtual elimination of Jewish business in Germany by the Hitler terrorism, prices are rising, bringing complaints from the German masses. The Nazi bosses are beginning to wonder if they have not gone too far in their anti-Jewish campaign and there are indications of more moderation in their talk and actions.

World wide protest against the wild course of the Hitler enthusiasts is having its effect, too, as predicted it would in these columns, and apparently it is beginning to dawn upon the Nazi leadership that perhaps they have bitten off more than they can chew. There seems to be less bombast in their talk and more intelligence. If sanity is really starting to reassert itself in Germany, the world has reason to be thankful.

When labor protested against the civilian corps bill on the ground that it would mean competition at low wages with men in private employment, it was assured that workers enrolled in the corps would only be employed on reforestation and other forestry work. Now the very thing that labor feared is coming to pass. In addition to working in the woods, apparently the $1-a-day men will also be put to work on roads, dams and other projects.

Louisiana's proposal to use several thousand of the conservation corps men on the building of a secondary road system back of the levees has been approved and other states are urging that the scope of the work be broadened. Unless the administration calls a halt, the conservation work threatens to lose its non-competitive character.

Paul Darrow, son of Clarence Darrow, famous attorney, has sued three New York banking institutions for $3,440 paid in 1927 for four Peruvian bonds. Darrow alleges in his complaint that the bonds were represented as good investments. They have turned out to be about on par in value with counterfeit money.

If Darrow wins his suit, a lot of other people will also sue and the bankers may have occasion to rue the day they "passed" Peruvian bonds and other worthless "securities" on a trusting public.

GREEN SEES GAINS TO LABOR FROM NATIONAL RECOVERY ACT

New York City, June 1.—Operation of the proposed national recovery act will bring higher wage levels because industry will be placed in a position to pay better wages, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, said in speaking at the anniversary reunion of the Harvard Business School club, at the Harvard club here.

"No one familiar with the legislative provisions of the industrial recovery act," Green said, "entertains any doubt whatever that, in operation, it will stabilize prices, eliminate vicious competition and wipe out unfair industrial trade practices.

"As a remedy for unemployment the hours of labor must be reduced. This is one of the primary purposes of the act. The government is accorded broad powers in the control which it will exercise over industry, and in order to apply a practical remedy for unemployment it must arrange for a reduction in the hours of labor necessary to create work opportunities for all.

"I am hopeful, almost confident, that through the operation of the industrial recovery act the five-day work week and the six-hour day will be a realized fact in most of the large and important industries of the nation."

Declaring that labor is prepared to accept the recovery act, Green said that its success will depend very largely upon its administration. "Better prices, higher wages, reduced unemployment, community and civic betterment, are some of the blessings which should follow operation of the act," he said. "If these results can be achieved through a wise and constructive administration of the act it is reasonable to conclude that the law will become a fixed and permanent part of the legislative policies of the United States toward industrial protection and industrial control."

What Next!

The old wood beer barrel now has a steel rival. A Detroit automobile body company is building a new steel barrel, developed after months of research. The new barrel looks, rolls and handles like a wood barrel. It is formed of rustproof steel, in two sections, a welded inner container and a strong outer shell which together provide insulation against heat and great strength at about half the weight of a wooden barrel.

St. Louis, Mo., June 1.—Contracts with the typographical and Photo-Engravers' unions have been renewed for a year by the St. Louis Newspaper Publishers' association. Wage scales which became effective a year ago are retained, with the right reserved by both parties to reopen the wage question in any month on thirty days' notice.

24 Per Cent Wage Boost Asked By Striking Textile Workers

Providence, R. I.—The 150 employes of the Orrell Mill, Inc., of Glendale, near here, struck when the management refused to give them a 24 per cent. increase in wages. The mill boss offered a 12½ per cent. increase, but the employes claimed the boost was just half of what they should have.

STRIKES . . .

Wave in Sight Unless Wagner Bill Works.

Washington, June 1.—Whether enactment of the Wagner industrial recovery bill will come soon enough to effect transformation of working conditions and wages ahead of militant protest remains to be seen.

Reports reaching here show a wave of militancy and protest that indicates workers finally have been driven to the point where they have no alternative except to say "No further."

Strikes are becoming more frequent.

Southern states have had a number of textile strikes. Mills in the Anniston, Ala., sector have been tied up by walk-outs of workers in resentment against wage cuts and installation of the Bedeaux speed-up system. South Carolina has had its strikes.

Western and mid-western states have reported a growing number of strikes.

The industrial recovery bill, it is believed, will make strikes impossible—if it is enacted and put into operation quickly. If that does not happen, there seems every prospect for a growing rate of strike action throughout every industrial section.

N. J. MAYOR TRIES TO END BIG SHIRT FACTORY STRIKE

Elizabethton, N. J.—Mayor Thomas Williams intervened in the strike of 1,600 shirt factory employes here in an attempt to settle the dispute. He asked that representatives of the employers and the workers meet at his office to see if a basis could not be found to adjust the grievances which caused the employes to leave their jobs.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

Morgan Empire's Hold on Industry And Government Revealed by Probe

Banking Officials and Men in Public Life Borrow Morgan Funds and Are "Let in" on Profitable Stock Deals— J. P. Paid No Income Tax in 1931 or 1932, He Says.

Washington, June 1.—An inkling of the wide flung ramifications of the great Morgan empire, which reach into virtually all American business and industry, was given in opening testimony of J. P. Morgan before the senate banking and currency committee.

Morgan, head of the powerful international banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co., with head offices in New York and branches in Philadelphia and European cities, provided sensations from the first. In all he said there was no thought for the masses—only consideration of dollars, directorates, loans, rates of interest—the making of money on a big scale.

"Insiders," Morgan showed, profited heavily through Morgan firm operations. Public men and officials were revealed as borrowers of Morgan funds and buyers of stock "bargains" offered by the firm—"bargains" from which many made fat profits.

The witness declared that he paid no income tax in 1931 or 1932, it being inferred but not explained that this was due to tremendous shrinkage in the value of securities. But he paid income taxes in England for the same two years, the banker said. His testimony resulted in an immediate move in the house to tighten up on the income tax laws.

Perhaps most sensational of Morgan's testimony was his list of favored customers who in 1929 obtained common stock of the Alleghany corporation, a Van Swearingen holding company, at $20 a share when it was selling for $31 to $35 in the market. The favored customers who obtained the stock were friends of directors of his firm, Morgan said.

The list of favored customers included William H. Woodin, now secretary of the treasury; William G. McAdoo, now senator and formerly secretary of the treasury; Charles Francis Adams, formerly secretary of the navy; Owen J. Roberts, now a member of the supreme court; Gen. John J. Pershing, Owen D. Young, Newton D. Baker, Charles A. Lindbergh, and many others prominent in business and public life.

Morgan gave to the committee a list of officers or directors in banks who received loans from his firm in the five years ending Dec. 31, 1931. Among the names were those of Charles G. Dawes, of the Central Trust company, of Illinois, and formerly vice-president and ambassador to England, and Charles E. Mitchell, formerly head of the National City bank.

Secrecy is the rule of the Morgan house, Morgan indicated, admitting the twenty directors kept no record of their meetings. They meet every weekday except Saturday, he said.

"Is there any written record or minutes?" asked Ferdinand Pecora, the committee counsel. "Only the names of those who attended," Morgan replied. "There is no record of the deliberations or conclusions?" he was asked. "None," he said.

The witness declared it was decided not to keep minutes when the partners began their daily meetings about "twenty years ago."

Price Boosting Without Wage Raises Condemned

Washington, May 18.—Several hundred thousand men have been put back to work during April, according to the monthly survey of business, compiled by the American Federation of Labor, which comments further:

"But after the spring season is over, it seems probable that business will continue downward unless government measures turn the tide. For deflation forces are still strong and the situation is still too uncertain to start credit flowing from the banks."

The survey presents illuminating graphs showing the course of currency depreciation and the effects the abandonment of the gold standard by England had on commodity prices and unemployment there and in the United States. Suspension of gold payments by the United States had, by the end of April, sent the dollar 14 per cent below par and sharply raised wheat and cotton prices, the survey finds.

On the question of price boosting inaugurated by congress and the President, and the purchasing power of the masses, the survey said:

"By whatever method prices are raised unless provision is made to raise wages proportionately purchasing power will be relatively reduced and the price increase will not establish a balanced upward movement of business.

"The danger of inflation is that it may create an unbalance of economic forces and get out of control.

"Assuring workers increases in pro portion to increases in prices and productivity would provide a strong balancing force."

Hosiery Workers Scrapped By New Knitting Machines

Philadelphia, Pa.—How new machinery is ousting hosiery, sweater and other knit goods workers from their jobs was vividly shown at the twenty-ninth annual knitting arts exhibition here.

Recent developments in single unit and single head full fashioned hosiery machines, of which several were on view, were called "revolutionary" by the rayon manufacturers for whose benefit they were demonstrated.

Another exhibit was a skein machine especially adapted for rayon dyeing.

Luxury Strikers Stand Pat For 20 Per Cent. Pay Boost

Fort Plain, N. Y.—Striking employes of the Luxury Silk Mills, Inc., rayon underwear concern, stood firm for a 20 per cent. wage increase and the return of David Thornton, deposed superintendent, who, they say, was discharged because he sided with them in their fight for higher wages.

Former Mayor H. V. Berry presided at a meeting called to consider the strike. Mrs. Leona Van Valkenburg, spokeswoman for the employes' seam department, said the employes would not return to work until their demands are met. Harry Rogosin is the owner of the low-wage concern.

Power Trust Says Consumers Should Pay Electric Tax

Washington.—Power companies and investors mobilized their forces before congress in an effort to avert the shifting of the federal 3 per cent. electric power tax from the consumers to the companies, as provided in the bill which passed the house of representatives.

The main argument was presented by William J. Hagenah, of Chicago, representing the Edison Electric institute, who declared that transferring the tax to the power companies is "vicious."

Many senators noted the fact that in the law passed last year the power companies were the only manufacturers who succeeded in having the sales tax levied directly on the consumers, all similar taxes being levied on the producer.

Senator Couzens, of Michigan, pointed out that the excitement of the power officials and the investors seemed to be unwarranted due to the fact that the state commissions were supposed to see that utilities earned a fair return.

Mr. Hagenah admitted that, but added that in addition to the trouble required in getting forty-eight state commissions to increase rates it was not always possible to pass the sales tax along to the masses.

60 Liquor Control Jobs Sought by 6,000 Persons

New York City.—Evidencing the fact that there still are left a few unemployed, despite the hullabaloo about currency inflation, the revival of stock gambling and other alleged evidences of returning prosperity, 6,000 hungry job hunters applied for the sixty jobs created under the state liquor board, and more piled in by mail, telephone, telegraph and in person.

Edward P. Mulrooney, chairman of the board, found his desk swamped with mail his clerks had not had time even to open when he took charge at quarters in the State office building here.

California Sheriff Arrests 16 Alleged Strike Agitators

Watsonville, Cal., May 25.—Sheriff A. T. Dresser arrested sixteen men here in what he described as a general round-up of agitators who, he said, had incited foreign workers in the lettuce fields to go on strike.

The men were held on vagrancy charges with bail set at $500 each.

Myers Says Thirty-Hour Week Would Crimp Textile Output

Gastonia, N. C.—A. G. Myers, president of Textiles, Inc., operating mills having 250,000 to 300,000 spindles, is opposed to the 30-hour work week.

His plants couldn's supply the demand for their output on such a schedule, he says, predicting a great increase in the call for his products during the next few weeks to result from inflationary measures the national administration is promoting.

In order to obtain full advantage from the expected profit opportunities, Mr. Myers believes he should be permitted to work his operatives at least 40 hours a week.

EMPLOYERS COMPEL WORKERS TO SIGN PETITIONS AGAINST 30-HOUR WEEK BILL OR LOSE THEIR JOBS

Washington, June 1.—The unscrupulous character of the opposition of certain employers to the Black-Connery six-hour day and five-day week bill, now before the house of representatives, was shown in a letter sent to Congressmen by John J. Egan, secretary of the Connecticut Federation of Labor.

The bill was originally introduced in the senate by Senator Black, of Alabama, and passed that body a number of weeks ago. Representative Connery, of Massachusetts, had also introduced a five-day week and six-hour day bill in the house of representatives.

The house labor committee, of which Representative Connery is chairman, drafted and favorably reported a measure with various amendments to both the Black bill and the Connery bill. In its amended form it is known as the Black-Connery 30-hour week bill.

Employers Use Big Stick.

"I have been informed," Mr. Egan's letter said, "that slips protesting against the 30-hour week have been made out and that employes are requested to have them signed by their friends and relatives and turn them in to the management. I presume they will be presented in Washington to show that even the employes of Connecticut are not for the 30-hour week.

"Only last Monday the opinion of employes was voiced when a man from New Haven said: 'What can we do other than get these slips signed or lose our jobs?'"

"I am writing you," Mr. Egan told the members of the house, "so that when these statements are filed or petitions presented showing the names of people who are protesting against the 30-hour week bill you will be fully aware of the circumstances under which the 'protest' is made."

There is some difference of opinion among Connecticut employers as to the virtues of a federal shorter work week, so the Manufacturers association did not appear officially in opposition, but a strong committee pursued the same tactics in Washington that they followed in opposing a bill before the Connecticut legislature to establish a maximum 48-hour week for women and minors in industry.

Coerced Testimony.

The Connecticut bill was supported by many employers, the state labor department and the governor. The desperation of the opposition was shown by a confidential letter sent by the committee to individual manufacturers throughout Connecticut. Mr. Egan included a copy of the letter in his communication to members of congress.

One excerpt from the manufacturers' letter read:

"a. You are asked to select from one to ten women workers from your organization and to prepare them to tell their opposition in their own simple words.

"b. You are asked to arrange for their transportation to the hearing chamber that day, but it will be better if you do not sit with them. Their testimony should have the air of spontaneity."

That the manufacturers' committee fully realized the invidious implications of this campaign they were undertaking, and that individuals who joined in did so with their eyes open, is proved by the further text of the committee letter, which said:

"We have never before had to resort to this method of combatting this legislation in Connecticut. This time we are convinced it is absolutely necessary. The danger of the bill's passage cannot be emphasized too strongly. Unless we use this method effectively, with your co-operation, the 48-hour law will be on our statute books before June."

Hand-Picked Delegates.

The manufacturers were urged to have their hand-picked delegations on hand early, so that proponents of the legislation would have no opportunity to "pack" the hearing rooms. But manufacturers were also urged to come still earlier to the "Association office," on the morning of the hearing, in order that their testimony might be "co-ordinated."

"We will agree among ourselves as to the phases of the testimony that each manufacturer will take. However, the women employes who will testify should not be brought here because that will destroy the spontaneity which we are trying to preserve."

In view of the revelations made by Mr. Egan regarding the character of the opposition to shorter hours conducted by the organized manufacturers of Connecticut, it is expected that members of congress will give little weight to alleged employe petitions against the Black-Connery 30-hour week bill. They will have in mind the plea of the Connecticut employe who said:

"What can we do other than to get these slips signed or lose our jobs."

Measure Expectel to Fail in House Because It Protects Jobs of Employes—Whitney Criticizes Plan.

Washington, June 1.—With a section providing for the six-hour working day eliminated, the administration's railroad bill was passed by the senate. The bill protects the jobs of railroad workers under proposed consolidations. This section is expected to cause opposition in the house, where leaders hold that "economies" could not be affected unless some railroad workers are dropped.

As passed by the senate after the six-hour day amendment had been withdrawn on announcement by Senator Dill that President Roosevelt was against it, the measure suspends the anti-trust laws for one year and authorizes a federal co-ordinator to effect economies in co-operation with three railroad regional committees by eliminating unnecessary duplication of services, arranging for joint use of terminals and trackage, taking steps to avoid waste, and promoting financial reorganizations to reduce fixed charges and improve carrier credit.

Labor Committees Set Up.

The co-ordinator would see to it that labor committees were set up for each regional group of carriers. These would be selected from the regular railway labor organizations and be consulted before any order affecting employes was handed down.

"Yellow dog" contracts and company unions would not be recognized.

Elimination of the six-hour day section from the measure was denounced by A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and chairman of the Railway Labor Executives' association.

"It appears we have a good many people in congress who do not understand that unemployment is due largely to the machine age," Whitney said. "We feel that unless something is done to reduce hours we will not even approach prosperity."

Denounces "Subterfuge."

He denounced as "subterfuge" the elimination of the six-hour day section from the railroad bill on the promise that it would be reintroduced in other form upon the reassembling of congress in the fall.

"There is no reason why this measure cannot be introduced and passed now," he said. "It is just another way of sidestepping the issue. If there is any virtue in the measure, why delay it? There are more men unemployed now than there were six months ago. If the people are convinced we should have shorter hours as a means of reducing unemployment, why procrastinate, why not start rebuilding now? Hasn't there been enough delay?"

Whitney charged that reorganization as contemplated by the bill would benefit largely the Morgan and other big banking interests controling the railroads.

Easy Way Moves To New Quarters

Easy Way Grocery No. 1 was moved Monday from the old quarters at 417 Market street to the corner of Second and Market streets. For some time, it was said, the problem of serving a steadily increasing trade has been a bothersome one, and the new and larger quarters became a necessity.

The new store is the "last word" in modern groceries, many features being included which were not practicable in the smaller space occupied at 417 Market street. A feature is the large space for parking, an extra lot having been leased to augment the regular spaces.

Jurisdictional Dispute Settled

Indianapolis, June 1.—The American Federation of Labor has settled a jurisdictional dispute between the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and the International Union of Brewery Workers, which involved the transportation of beer.

Both unions contended for the right of transporting beer and appealed to the A. F. of L. for settlement. Officials of the Central Labor union announced that President Green had decided that Teamsters' union had the jurisdiction but that the brewery workers had jurisdiction within the breweries. Both sides amicably accepted the settlement—and Indiana is in no danger of aridity.

bulwark against those forces of tyranny that would destroy our right to free speech, peaceful assembly and collective bargaining.

"The year 1923 marks the period of that greatest of all hypocritical movements, 'the open shop' or the so-called 'American Plan', wherein the worker was ordered to 'tear up his union card' in the interest of progress. The workers were too intelligent to fall for this trap, and the forces of reaction suffered another defeat."

In 1928 labor went "high hat", according to the program director, and a worker was shown dressed in latest style—plug hat, spats and everything, the chairman explaining this phenomenon as follows:

"Here we are, all dressed up and no place to go. This is the good year 1928. Organized labor goes "high hat"—we had no time to go to union meetings. The younger generation had the organization handed to them on a silver platter, good wages, shorter hours, pleasant working conditions. The conditions that the older men had fought for they inherited for a song. They thought they could go riding in a benzine buggy the night the local union met, they did not claim to be too good, but they surely were too busy doing nothing to attend the meetings. However, pride goeth before a fall."

The last picture showed labor with ragged overalls, a bloody bandage around his head, but standing erect and determined. "1933, and oh, what a time we had," Mr. Forbes read.

"We have gone through the worst depression the world has ever seen. We have seen our financial system crumble up. We have seen over half of our members out of work for over two years—some of us have lost our jobs, our homes, our ambitions, everything but our appetite and our union card, and our faith in America.

"We expect to go on and on, until every man who is willing to work can secure employment under favorable conditions at a wage on which it will be possible to feed, clothe and educate a family with security!

Secretary Cuthbert read congratulatory letters from T. W. Killough, county court clerk, and Wiley Couch, trustee, which accompanied two beautiful baskets of flowers sent by the officials named.

Addresses were delivered by Hays Clark, criminal court clerk; Neil J. Crowley, veteran member of Chattanoog Typographical union, and Stanton E. Smith, president of the Chattanooga-Hamilton County Federation of Teachers.

Among the guests of the evening were several who have given thirty years or more of service to the organized labor movement, and the chairman called on the following for a few remarks: Hosea Camp, Joe Pogue, T. J. Davie, Sam I. Whitman, W. C. Smith, W. E. Eckenrod, H. F. Brown, Tom F. Hall, Ed Bork, Paul J. Aymon, James O'Connor, Frank Pursley, Matt J. Robinson.

As an entertainment feature little Miss Peggy Cooke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond L. Cooke, did a song and dance number and an encore.

Although the attendance was hardly as large as the committee had hoped, the affair was regarded as highly successful, and many favorable comments were heard after the program was finished.

Lester Wallace New State Factory Chief

Announcement was made this week of the appointment of Lester E. Wallace, of Knoxville, to be chief of the factory inspection branch of the department of labor, state of Tennessee.

Mr. Wallace is a member of the International Association of Machinists, having been an employe of the Southern railway for many years. He has been a member of Lodge No. 58, at Knoxville, for forty years.

Mr. Wallace succeeds M. F. Nicholson, also a member of the Machinists, who has held the post for several years.

MORE ABOUT RECOVERY BILL

Free Labor Unions.

"If the workers are permitted to join a labor union it ought to be a free, independent labor union, and not a union, or a so-called 'union,' through which a corporation may exercise full and complete control, not only of its own industrial affairs, but of the economic life and social life of the workers.

"The organization we have in mind is the company union, and we should like that this section of the act be made clear in that respect.

"If the industrial recovery act is amended, as herein suggested, labor will extend to this proposed legislation its full, complete and hearty indorsement.

"I earnestly urge favorable action upon these proposed amendments. Each of them is regarded as of very great importance to labor."

MR. WORKING MAN:

Wages Cut 50%?

That's What ROY McDONALD, Owner of the HOME STORES, Wants

Can You Afford to Spend Your Money with a Man Who Wants YOUR Pay Cut in Half?

AN EXAMPLE OF MR. McDONALD'S POLICIES:

He took over the Bleacher Bill Sports Journal, which paid decent wages for reasonable hours, and is now publishing it under the name of "Chattanooga Free Press," paying low wages and working his men almost from "can till can't."

McDonald says his stores are "home-owned" and "home-operated"—yet he brought in a man from out of town to run his paper when there are many Chattanooga printers who have been out of work for months.

McDonald says: "President Hoover made a mistake in 1929 when he asked that wages be maintained. If he had cut wages 50% in 1929 the depression would now be over."

DO YOU BELIEVE THAT?

WHEN YOU SPEND A DOLLAR WITH ONE OF THE HOME STORES YOU INJURE YOURSELF

Be True to Yourself and Spend Your Money With People Who Believe in Living Wages.

Cheap-Labor Policy Proves Unpopular

PRINTERS GET FINE RESPONSE IN CAMPAIGN

Local Unions Condemn McDonald's Policies.

MOVIE OPERATORS TAKE STRONG STAND

Will Consider Ads in Throw-Sheet Unfriendly Act to Labor.

Resolved, That we here and now notify any local merchant who advertises in McDonald's throw-sheet that we will consider their ad in said sheet an act unfriendly to union labor.

The above, concluding a resolution unanimously adopted at the regular monthly meeting of Local 259, Movie Operators, last Saturday night, is typical of the fine response which Chattanooga Typographical union is receiving, through Central Body, in its appeal for support of all working people in disapproval of the cheap-labor, long-hour policies of Roy McDonald, owner of the so-called "Home Stores," dairyman, baker, publisher and self-styled "individualist," who is attempting to establish the first non-union publication to enter the local business field since the oldest Chattanooga printer can remember, and who imported an operator for his plant despite the fact that local printers have, like other craftsmen, suffered from unemployment during the depression.

In adopting the resolution referred to above, the Movie Operators also resolved to place a fine of $10 on any member "guilty of patronizing one of McDonald's stores," or who allows any member of his immediate family to do so. It is further provided that if such improbable act is committed, the secretary of Local 259 immediately mail to the secretary of the Typos a check for $10 and place this amount on the next card to be paid by the offender.

Other local unions have formally condemned the policies of McDonald, whose pronouncements on labor have been widely resented both by labor and business groups.

A circular issued by Chattanooga Typographical union, setting out the facts in the case, has been widely read throughout the county, and expressions of approval concerning the attitude of the Typos are heard on every hand.

As The Labor World goes to press the third issue of the chain store publication has not appeared, although members of No. 89 had little doubt but that eventually another issue of the sheet will be printed and scattered about the city.

Officials of No. 89 asked The Labor World to express their heartfelt thanks to the working people of Chattanoogn for the fine sympathy shown, and particularly to the Chattanooga business public for its apparent refusal to approve the antiquated labor policies of the grocer-baker-dairyman-publisher.

Whereas, during the recent controversy with the theaters, Chattanooga Typographical union rendered whole-hearted and effective support, unanimously passing a resolution placing a fine of ten dollars on any member of that union who might be guilty of patronizing a theater where the controversy was in effect; and

Whereas, our printer brothers have now been forced into battle with one McDonald, operator of a chain of grocery stores known as the "Home Stores;" and

Whereas, this McDonald has expressed his belief in low wages and long hours and has imported non-union labor to print a weekly "throw-sheet," and is appealing to local merchants for support of his cheap labor weekly, and to the public for patronage

JOHNSON TIRE NOT 'BOTHERED' BY UNION CLAIM

Central Body Committee Gets Cold Reception.

FOWLER STORES RUN TRUE TO FORM

Use Liberal Space in Non-Union Throw-Sheet—Mascot Days Recalled.

It matters not at all to Mr. Johnson, of the Johnson Tire company, Eleventh and Broad streets, whether Roy McDonald's throw-sheet is operated with or without union labor, according to report of a committee from the Central Body which called on Johnson to protest against the Johnson Tire company advertising in the "Home Stores" owner's newly organized weekly.

Mr. Johnson told the committee the Home Stores owner was a customer of the tire concern, and when reminded that perhaps a number of working people also traded with him, he expressed doubt as to whether organized labor members bought as much of his product as did the merchant-dairyman-baker-newspaper publisher.

Net result of a brief and suddenly ended conference was the conclusion of the committee that the Johnson Tire company, which sells United States tires as well as gas, oil and other automobile accessories, does not care whether members of organized labor and their friends patronize his business or not.

Last week's issue of the "Home Stores" weekly contained advertisements for Fowler stores, the Johnson Tire company and one large department store. The Fowler concern, of course, was not approached, the attitude of this firm toward organized labor being a matter of common knowledge through the long struggle of Chattanooga workers to maintain conditions at the recently-bankrupt Mascot Stove company, in which Fowler was alleged to be heavily interested.

Organized labor has also had some trouble with the Johnson Tire company heretofore, but friendly relations have been maintained with the firm for some time.

Despite the attitude of the tire concern, however, and support of the Fowler interests, local working people are confident that McDonald's policies will not be approved by local advertisers, and the two first issues of the throw-sheet indicate that little or no encouragement has been received by the publisher-grocer-baker-dairyman in his efforts to establish a non-union publication in Chattanooga.

As the publicity campaign of organized labor with reference to McDonald's policies progresses, more and more sympathy is expressed with local Typos in their objections to a weekly publication which is handled by non-unionists and imported workmen.

McDonald's announced policy of low wages and long hours is being widely resented by all groups of local citizens, and it is pointed out that even some of the textile-mill owners have surrendered their time-worn ideas that long hours and low wages will bring a return to prosperity.

The grocer-baker-dairyman-publisher, it will be remembered, told a committee from the local Typographical union that President Hoover made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a promise from leading industrialists that wages would be maintained as a foundation for a return to prosperity.

"Had wages been cut in half at that time," Mr. McDonald was quoted as saying, "the depression would now be over." And, "We will never have good times until wages are cut further and further."

The committee was also informed, in effect, that anyone on the payrolls of the "Home Stores," which was assumed to include the bakery, dairy, grocery stores and newspaper, would be required to report for duty at such hour as the boss should name, and quit when he was told to. Also, the committee gathered, said employe would be expected to perform such duties as were prescribed at the whim of the paymaster, regardless of whether the employe was a skilled craftsman by reason of many years' training at his life's work.

Deserve better working conditions by aiding other workers to secure them. Demand the UNION LABEL and SHOP CARD.

Shoeless Days Are Near Again; R.F.C. Pay Cut

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins is being criticised fore and aft by southern newspapers for an alleged public statement to the effect that folks this side of the Mason and Dixon line do not wear shoes. Ridicule is the order of the day as our newspaper editors comment on the supposed statement of the labor secretary.

But if orders of the state highway department are carried out, the lady at Washington may soon amplify her statement and point out that Tennesseans also have discarded their shirts and other garments.

For, not satisfied with the miserable $1.25 per day paid workers on the R. F. C. pay rolls, it is now announced that officials have decreed a cut of 25 cents more, making the compensation for ten hours an even "bone."

Chattanooga Trades and Labor council has for some time been attempting to have the pay scale of these unfortunates raised, and the latest decree is being bitterly denounced by labor men and citizens generally.

A local printer remarked cynically that possibly some of the R. F. C. workers could be loaned to Roy McDonald for use in the furtherance of his various and sundry business enterprises, now that the wage scale has been trimmed about as low as possible.

Lowry Heads Local 259 When Belcher Resigns

J. Burson Lowry was last Saturday night named president of Local 259, Movie Operators, vice W. C. Belcher, resigned. Mr. Belcher was only recently named head of the operators, but preferred not to continue the duties. Mr. Lowry was elevated from the financial secretaryship, and George Overend was selected to succeed him in that post.

Operation Fatal To T. F. Flaherty

Washington, June 8.—Thomas F. Flaherty, for twenty years secretary-treasurer and legislative representative of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, died at his home in Washington on June 3 at the age of 52. He underwent an abdominal operation on March 20 and seemed to be recovering until about two weeks before his death.

Brief funeral services, attended by American Federation of Labor executives and representatives of many labor organizations, were held here before the body was sent to San Francisco for burial.

Mr. Flaherty was one of the best-known trade unionists in the nation. Born in Napa, Cal., Aug. 15, 1880, he entered the postal service at San Francisco and became active in the organization of the postoffice clerks. He was a member of the Pacific Parlor, Native Sons of the Golden West and the San Francisco lodge of the Knights of Columbus. He was a graduate of the Washington College of Law. He was admitted to practice before the supreme court May 11, 1925.

He participated in the formation of the Union Labor Life Insurance company and was one of the board directors of that company.

Mr. Flaherty is survived by his widow, his mother, two brothers and six sisters.

WM. TURNBLAZER SEES NEW DEAL FOR COAL MINER

District President Calls Big Meeting.

GREAT GATHERING SET FOR PINEVILLE

Thousands Expected to Enroll Under Banner of United Mine Workers.

Promises New Deal

WILLIAM TURNBLAZER

"A new deal for the miner" is the slogan of the organization campaign of the United Mine Workers of America in District 19, to be launched at Pineville, Ky., with a great mass meeting Sunday afternoon.

William Turnblazer, of Jellico, president of the district organization, is in charge of the campaign, and according to advices received from the headquarters this week Sunday is expected to be the "biggest day for the miners of this territory since 1917."

The new organization movement is undertaken under authority to be granted through the industrial recovery bill, according to Mr. Turnblazer, and the Tennessee-Kentucky drive is but a part of a nation-wide activity which is expected to accomplish the thorough unionization of the coal mining industry of America, in order that these long-suffering and oppressed workers may be placed in position where they can live once more as real American citizens and may enjoy the comforts which are the right of all genuine Americans.

The industrial recovery bill, Mr. Turnblazer holds, gives, first, to the coal operators the right to organize selling agencies, pay decent wages and sell coal at a profit, eliminating cut-throat competition and the law of the jungle; second, miners shall have the right to organize into the United Mine Workers of American without interference, coercion or intimidation on the part of the coal operators.

"The president's industrial recovery bill," Mr. Turnblazer said, "with this right of the miners to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, is the 'Declaration of Independence' of the coal miners and their families and means a new day for all engaged and dependent upon the coal industry as a livelihood. The time is here for every miner working in and around the mines in District 19 to immediately become a member of the United Mine Workers of America. We must be thoroughly prepared for the new deal which will take place with the enactment of the industry recovery law by congress. Mass meetings will be held throughout the entire district, and I advise the coal miners of southeastern Kentucky and Tennessee to get busy and join the United Mine Workers of America today. Any information desired can be obtained by writing the office of District 19, Jellico, Tenn.

"The United Mine Workers of America have been urging our government for the past five years to come to the rescue of the coal mining industry. This legislation has been largely secured through the agitation of our union, and the coal miners of this district now have a wonderful opportunity. It is the policy of the international union to not only organize District 19, but every coal miner working in and around the mines in this country."

The meeting at Pineville Sunday afternoon, which will initiate the campaign in District 19, will be held at the courthouse in that town, and will be addressed by several well-known trades unionists and other citizens of the district. At least 5,000 miners are expected to be in attendance, it was said.

"All desiring to join the organization at this time will be admitted free," a circular signed by President Turnblazer advises. "The enactment into law of the recovery bill means a new day and a square deal for the coal miner and his wife and children of the coal fields of our country. Able speakers will be present, and we urge every coal miner in Bell and Harlan counties to attend."

Movie Operators Pay Poll Taxes For All Members

Local 259, Moving Picture Operators, Saturday night responded to the slogan of Central Body's committee on qualifying the labor vote when that organization voted to instruct the secretary to advance payment for 1932 poll taxes to each and every member and place the amount on the member's card.

Central Body committee, recently appointed, promised to continue its efforts until all local trades unionists were qualified to vote and adopted the slogan, "Every Member Qualified."

Action of Local 259 will probably be followed by other locals during the next thirty or sixty days.

JAMES OGLETREE GOES TO REWARD

James Ogletree, veteran member of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, died in Tampa, Fla., Wednesday, according to advices received by J. L. Carpenter, of Chattanooga.

Mr. Ogletree was the Brotherhood's executive board member assigned to the southeastern district, where he had served for the past twenty-three years. He was 73 years old, and had been active in the Carpenter's organization perhaps a half-century.

Mr. Ogletree was a native of Atlanta, and was well known throughout the south. Possessed of a fine personality, a sincerity of purpose and unusual ability, he had made hundreds of friends in Tennessee and in Chattanooga, and his appearance on the speaking program at conventions of the Tennessee Federation of Labor had for years been a feature at these gatherings.

Funeral services for the deceased trades unionist will be held Saturday in the Florida city.

No Settlement With Henderson - Coleman

Efforts to adjust the differences between organized labor and Henderson & Coleman, men's clothiers at 1000 Market street, continue to bring no results, according to officials of Central Body, and that firm will remain on labor's "unfair list," it was said.

Break with the clothing firm was the result of committee reports which repeatedly recalled inability of organized labor to induce the members of the firm to employ union members in various building projects.

Railroads to Demand 20 Per Cent Wage Cut

Chicago, June 8.—As a result of a meeting here of a management committee headed by W. R. Thiehoff, general manager of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad, it is expected the railroad unions will soon be served with a demand for a 20 per cent cut in pay. Under an agreement between the railroads and the unions, the notice may be served on June 15, but new railroad legislation may cause a change in the date.

A 10 per cent reduction in railroad workers' wages has been in effect since Feb. 1, 1932, having been extended last December to next November 1. The proposed 20 per cent reduction, which the railroad workers have announced they will oppose with every means at their command, would apply to basic rates.

Recovery Act Brings Fight for Advantage

LABOR GIRDS TO PLAY PART IN NEW ORDER

Capital Meeting Calls for Organization.

URGES QUICK ACTION ON ALL "FRONTS"

Conference Devotes Most of Time to Plans for Protection of Workers.

Washington, June 8.—Organized labor gathered here to meet the challenge of organized privilege and sent forth to America a call to organize unions so that every American worker may be within a union and so that American labor can play its proper part in the new industrial order created by the industrial recovery act as soon as it has the president's signature.

The new legislation calls for action in every American community and the great labor conference of officers of national and international unions summoned by President Green devoted most of its time to consideration of plans of action.

Reports were brought to the conference of the plans laid down by a number of trade associations, some of which are planning genuine co-operation with labor, some of which are planning campaigns to subjugate labor in permanent company unions.

Changes Close at Hand.

At this hour it is not known whether many of the teeth of the recovery bill may not be drawn before its final enactment, but labor proceeded on the assumption that final action would undo much of the damage done by the senate finance committee. Some of the damage already has been undone.

As labor's representatives met here they were confronted not only by a working world subject to the changes of the recovery bill, but already definitely looking to changes to be brought at once by legislation enacted.

The railroad bill will change the railroad situation, under an official to be known as a co-ordinator. There are reports that at an early date the roads will appeal for a wage reduction of as much as 20 per cent. But there will be a long road ahead of any such effort. Meanwhile the unions have safeguarded their employment.

The securities law has changed the rule from caveat emptor to "let the seller beware."

Privilege Still Defiant.

The Glass-Stegall bill, due to be enacted within the week, will upset the Wall Street world by separating banking and securities houses.

But the blows already struck at entrenched wealth surely have not shamed the agents of privilege into silence. The echoes of the Morgan disclosures, shocking as they were, still rang through the capitol when James Emery, the ace pleader for union-hating manufacturers, delivered his challenge to labor and when former Secretary of Commerce Lamont, speaking for the steel interests, dominated by Morgan, declared to the senate finance committee that steel would not give up its union-hating policies.

The atmosphere of Washington is tense as the Roosevelt legislative cap sheaf nears its hour of decision. The Morgan disclosures, showing as never before the workings of the government within government, the super-power of wealth, the money trust, coincided almost to the hour with a stiffening of legislative lines against the Roosevelt legislative program to put industry into operation.

The capital is flooded with lobbyists who speak for the whole range of interests on the famous Morgan preferred lists. And friends of Senator McAdoo are somewhat surprised that, immediately after his name had been shown to have been on Morgan preferred lists, he should have voted in the senate finance committee to strike out the licensing provision from the recovery bill. That section contains more of the "teeth" of the administrative section. Big business lined up against this section and against the labor section, pounding away with amendment after amendment to kill the effect of both.

Labor Action Planned.

Into this atmosphere, charged with all of the drama and tenseness of a mortal struggle between the people and the money masters, the trade union spokesmen came to plan their campaign of action under the new legislation.

The control bill went to the senate with provisions differing from those in the bill as adopted by the house. This will throw the bill into conference. A Roosevelt drive forced the finance committee to restore the licensing provision and to make some other restorations, after the American Federation of Labor had declared that if the bill were emasculated by wrecking of the labor section and the licensing section labor would oppose its enactment.

SELF-SEEKERS WOULD NULLIFY LABOR SECTIONS

Small But Powerful Interest Would Control.

OPERATION TO BRING FIRST CRUCIAL TEST

Manufacturers Lead Fight to "Pack" Board to Administer Act.

Washington, June 8.—President Roosevelt's administration will face a major show-down and probably its first crucial test with industrial and business interests of the country as soon as the national industrial recovery act is put into operation, according to multiplying signs as the stage is set for the new experiment.

Small but powerful groups in the trade association set-up have massed solidly in opposition to the labor and licensing provisions of the new measure, and are seeking through exertion of their influence, and the naming of their friends to positions in the board organization, to control the administration of the law.

These groups, covering almost the whole range of trade association and chamber of commerce influence are reaching out for all possible benefits to themselves from the operation of the law, but steadfastly opposing the advantages that would accrue under it to workers and wage-earners. They want the matter of relations with employes left entirely with themselves.

Bosses Learn Nothing.

It is the old and time-worn story of entrenched industrial bossism—which has learned nothing with succeeding generations—standing for adequate wages, decent working conditions and reasonable standards of living for everyone except their own employes.

They recognize that the workers of the nation compose the collective buying and consuming power, but they want industries other than their own to adhere to adequate wages and fair working conditions, which they admit are essential to good markets and prosperous conditions.

The dangerously stagnant condition of the country, the menacing unemployment situation, and the possibility of another winter as critical and heart-breaking for idle men and women as have been the last two winters, mean nothing to them in their effort to control the operation of the new law.

Public Opinion Defied.

Such revival in business as has taken place in the last eight weeks has merely inspired them to re-enter the old fortified trenches and bomb-proof dug-outs, and from these strongholds to defy an equitable recovery program as well as the aroused and enraged temper of the country.

"Ancient or Modern"

Editor The Labor World:

I want to congratulate you on your Spring Number, "Looking Backward," and at the same time to call attention to one of the most remarkable feats possibly ever accomplished in the history of journalism.

George Forbes, the future assistant postmaster, covered more ground in the shortest time of any writer I have ever read after, and I believe you should have allowed him at least half a dozen pages.

Writing a history of Chattanooga Central Body for the past thirty years, that old-timer "slipped back" an extra three thousand, and squeezed the important happenings of three thousand and thirty years into one page.

Ancient or modern, the boy is "there."

Helped By Cardui

"I was sick and rather discouraged. I was so weak and thin, I was not able to do my work as it should be done. This made me fret a good deal, and did not help my condition.

"I had pains across my back and lower part of my body. My nights were spent in rolling from one side of the bed to the other, hoping I would soon go to sleep. Then when morning would come, I would be just as tired as when I went to bed. A neighbor, seeing how badly I felt, told me to try Cardui. After I had taken one bottle, I was much better. I kept on taking Cardui, and I was stronger and slept much better at night."

Mr. Emery's Wrath

The bitterest opponent of President Roosevelt's National Recovery act is James A. Emery, general counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers of the United States of America.

The act provides for the establishment of "codes of fair competition" in each industry, with provision for voluntary agreements and licenses in certain cases.

Section 7, called the labor section, prescribes certain rules for setting up these codes, agreements and licenses.

Mr. Emery's animosity was mainly centered on the two paragraphs in Section 7, which declare that every code of fair competition, agreement and license shall contain the following conditions:

1. That employees shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from the interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor, or their agents, in the designation of such representatives or in self-organizations or in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection;

2. That no employee and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining a labor organization of his own choosing.

These two paragraphs accord working men and women no more rights than every patriotic citizen certainly believes they should have.

The second paragraph prohibits employers from compelling employees to join the notorious company union as the price of a job.

But despite these modest provisions to insure the right of the workers to join bona fide unions and freely use them for their own benefit, Mr. Emery told the senate finance committee that the paragraphs would establish a union labor dictatorship over employers and gravely menace the already tottering existence of his favorite employer-controlled company unions.

He was reminded by Senator Wagner, the major author of the measure, that the paragraphs merely reassert the public policy of the United States outlawing the yellow dog contract declared in the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction law which congress enacted by an overwhelming majority. Nevertheless he continued to rave about the labor dictatorship which he alleged Section 7 would develop into with the consent of President Roosevelt, who must approve every code established under the act.

Mr. Emery's opposition, which was to be expected, is positive proof that the Industrial Recovery act with its labor section should be promptly enacted into law.

For nearly a quarter of a century every measure having for its object the improvement of the conditions of the masses, every piece of forward looking legislation, from adequate child labor laws to the abolition of the injunction in labor disputes and the yellow dog contract, have all received his malignant opposition.

In opposing the president's National Industrial Recovery act he is merely running true to form.

Certain local manufacturers, posing as "big frogs from a little pond," have endeavored to make a big splash in the national pool of labor-haters' opposition to the act, but their entry, of course, will not cause a ripple on the waters. Seeing their names in the headlines of the local papers has been and will be their only reward for their loquaciousness.

If labor shall take advantage of this its golden opportunity for effectiveness, the end of the loud-mouthed, hyprocritical labor-hater is near, and America will be a better place to live when this type of arrogance is relegated to the discard.

Again, We MUST Organize!

All details of the Industrial Recovery bill are not certain at this hour. But this IS certain:

Whatever may be the final details found in the bill when it reaches the president, the future of the trade union movement depends upon ORGANIZATION.

In these last few days the National Association of Manufacturers and allies have shown the desperate lengths to which they are prepared to go to forever smash organized labor.

Of course labor cannot be forever smashed—not by a thousand Jim Emerys—but its progress can be checked, its fate for perhaps a generation can be sealed.

A national conference of representative trade union officials has just been held in Washington. It has pointed out the prime need of organization EVERYWHERE.

No call for action can be too stirring. No statement of the case can be too strong.

Labor organizes NOW, and EFFECTIVELY, or labor as we know it goes down.

The essence of the National Recovery bill is ORGANIZATION.

This does not mean the issuance of statements and calls by national officers, by boards or executive councils. It means the active, eager, effective and immediate co-operation of every trade unionist in America. It means the vigorous participation of every labor newspaper.

From this point we go UP or DOWN!

Nobody else is going to make labor's fight.

We have heard from the bankers—a sad, sordid, greedy story of hauling in the money in millions.

We have heard from the industrial employers through Emery and Lund.

These gentlemen of privilege have the idea even today that they can chain labor and drain off the blood of the "common" people.

Only the trade unions stand for the rights of labor, AND IN THIS NEW DISPENSATION NOW UPON US THERE WILL BE NO RIGHTS RECOGNIZED UNLESS THERE ARE STRONG ORGANIZATIONS TO DEMAND THEM AND GET THEM.

The whole aim and purpose of the Industrial Recovery bill is to organize American industry to make it work. Government will not organize the workers. Surely the employers will not, except in company unions.

There MUST be organization. IT IS UP TO TRADE UNIONISM AS NEVER BEFORE IN THE MEMORY OF THOSE NOW LIVING—YES, AS NEVER BEFORE IN AMERICAN HISTORY.

Every member, every local union and every central body has its part to play.

EVERY WORKER IN A UNION, IS THE SLOGAN NOW. LET THIS COMMUNITY GO INTO ACTION. LET ALL AMERICAN LABOR GO INTO ACTION!

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What did Samuel Gompers say about the principle of voluntary action?

A.—At the last American Federation of Labor convention at which he presided, at El Paso, in 1924, Gompers said: "I want to urge devotion to the fundamentals of human liberty—the principles of voluntarism. No lasting good has ever come from compulsion. If we seek to force, we but tear apart that which, united, is invincible."

Q. — Will the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers hold a convention this year?

A.—No. The union recently voted 8 to 1 to postpone the convention until 1935. The vote for postponing the convention was taken on the recommendation of the union's executive council.

Q.—Did Ed Wynn take a leading part in forming the Actors' Equity Association?

A.—Wynn was one of the original Actors' Equity members, leading in the fight to establish the organization, and was blacklisted by the theatrical managers for his activity.

Willie: How old is your little brother?

Tommy: He's a year old.

Willie: Huh! I've got a dog a year old, and he can walk twice as well as your brother.

Tommy: No wonder. Your dog has twice as many legs.

Public Plants Oust Tax Collector

Eighty-Four Towns and Cities Maintained by Profits of Utilities; Big Dividends Despite Low Rates.

Eighty-four cities and towns in the United States levy no taxes—and yet are perfectly solvent. They pay the costs of public housekeeping out of the profits of publicly-owned utilities.

Louis Bartlett tells the story in the last issue of the "Nation," and it is a tale which needs to be repeated far and wide.

One of the most astonishing things about these tax-free communities is their distribution. Fifty-five out of the eighty-four are in Oklahoma — something better worth bragging about than even that state's oil fields. The other twenty-nine are distributed through fifteen other states. Kansas has seven, Indiana three, Michigan, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska and Wisconsin two each; Georgia, Texas, Vermont, Idaho, New York, New Jersey, Washington and Wyoming, one each.

All these tax-free communities are small, the largest city thus blessed having less than 30,000 inhabitants, but that only shows that the small town is not the back number which it is commonly supposed to be.

Mr. Bartlett gives some interesting figures on the electric light rates of public and private plants in California. For a dollar a month, the Pacific Gas and Electric company gives the consumer 13 kilowatt hours of current, which is not so bad—for "private enterprise." But the publicly-owned plants of Los Angeles, Burbank and Glendale give 21 kilowatt hours for the same price.

For $2 a month, the P. G. & E. sells 37 kilowatt hours. Public ownership in Palo Alto sells 46; in Los Angeles, 48; in Healdsburg, 60.

But for the best results and the cheapest rate Mr. Bartlett has to leave California. Ottawa, Ontario, sells 128 kilowatt hours for $2 a month, and Tacoma tops the record by accepting a two-dollar bill as receipt in full for 130 kilowatt hours.

At these rates, public ownership plants are making money. This is obvious in the tax-free towns, but Mr. Bartlett does not stop there. Los Angeles, he tells us, made 28 per cent net profits out of its power plant last year. Riverside made 35 per cent, and Pasadena claims a clear profit of 47 per cent. After deducting a sum equal to the average taxes paid by private-owned plants, the public ownership towns of California are averaging above 20 per cent net profits, and none of them is dropping below 8 per cent.

IT'S A BUSTED SYSTEM . . .

But It Continues to Gouge Labor As Price Levels Rise

Washington, June 8.—The economic system has broken down—

Government measures have primed the pump, but have not brought cure—

Prices are rising, wages lagging, the workers again getting it in the neck—

And labor has on its hands the job of fighting hard enough to make wages keep pace.

There are hot points in the latest A. F. of L. survey of business, in which labor pulls together the month's statistics and points the lesson.

Hope from pump-priming operations isn't very great—but the federation does look toward the industrial recovery legislation as stuff of permanent character, providing it emerges from the battle with the house labor section intact and isn't too much damaged in other respects.

"Increased buying power" is pointed out as the only force that can "keep business moving steadily forward on an even keel."

Today the whole price level is being lifted up by governmental stimulation, while the much-advertised wage raises are trifles, putting little patches of hope on the vast expanse of misery caused by the long chain of murderous wage-cuts.

The federation again points out that the only way wages can catch up to prices and loom up ahead is through shorter hours and higher wages. That means a real struggle, for the whole world of reactionary finance and business is girding its loins to follow its ancient ways, trimming the workers for all the traffic will bear.

1,000 Poe Mill Workers Strike for Pay Increase

John Peel, southern organizer of the United Textile Workers of America, declared that the operatives would not return to work until wages have been raised, hours shortened and working conditions improved.

He said many employes had not received any wages in money for more than a year, every cent being taken up at the company store for groceries, rent, coal and other necessities.

N. C. Poe, Jr., president of the company, said he would be glad to meet the operatives, but that they seemed indisposed to confer with him.

The indications are that the strike will continue indefinitely.

Threat of Eviction Is Used To Coerce Textile Strikers

Mobile, Ala. — The manager of the Prichard Cotton Mill gave the striking operatives the alternative of going to work on a lowered wage scale or vacating the houses in the company's mill village. Seven hundred and fifty persons would be affected by the order to vacate.

Yellow Dog Contract Bill Made Law in Pennsylvania

Harrisburg, Pa.—The senate passed the anti-yellow dog contract bill just before adjournment. The only vote against it was cast by Senator Buckman. The bill had already been passed by the house of representatives, and becomes the law of the state with the signature of Gov. Pinchot.

Ryan Gets Post on New York Emergency Relief Board

Albany, N. Y.—Gov. Lehman appointed Joseph P. Ryan, president of the Central Trades and Labor council of Greater New York and vicinity, as a member of the temporary emergency relief administration to succeed John Sullivan, who resigned because of his recent appointment as a member of the New York state alcoholic beverage control commission.

WHY THE UNION or CENTRAL BODY

(By TOM HALL)

Because in union there is strength. This is as true of the individual as it is of the states that make up his government.

Because they educate as to public questions. The lodge room is the lodge members' congress.

Because they make thinkers. Men require discussion to broaden their conception of matters of mutual concern.

Because they enlarge acquaintance and this again extends the vision.

Because they teach co-operation; men need to co-operate to obtain the maximum good.

Because they discourage selfishness. It is an important lesson to learn respect for the rights of others.

And, lastly, because association with one's fellowman is the most healthy and profitable investment of your time.

Walkout of Georgia Textile Employes Brings Higher Pay

Lafayette, Ga.—A ten-day strike by employes of the Consolidated Textile corporation here ended in a labor victory when the management conceded a ten per cent wage increase to the 350 operatives involved. The company is a Delaware corporation with headquarters in New York city.

The strike originated among the weavers, but quickly spread to all departments, causing a complete shutdown. The mill now is operating full-time day and night shifts.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

COULD YOU LEND ME A DIME?

NO ONE would think of running across to a neighbor several times a day to ask, "Could you lend me a dime, please?"

Of course, borrowing the use of a neighbor's telephone is not exactly like borrowing money, because it doesn't cost your neighbor anything extra for your call except the interruption or possible inconvenience.

Neighbors may borrow freely from each other and remain friendly, so long as each is careful to return the loan in full measure. When you borrow the use of a telephone you are getting something you can't return.

When you have to borrow your neighbor's telephone it shows you really ought to have one of your own.

When you consider the convenience, comfort and satisfaction that a telephone provides, you will probably agree that in trying to do without a telephone you are sacrificing too much for the few pennies saved. Why wait longer? Order your telephone today.

ALLEGED "WAGE INCREASE" BRINGS TEXTILE WALKOUT

Greenville, S. C., June 8.—One thousand textile workers employed by the F. W. Poe Manufacturing company, here, whose pay had been drastically slashed in past months, walked out on strike when given a ten per cent "wage increase."

Nelson C. Poe, president of the mills, reduced wages 25 per cent last summer, this reduction being followed by other cuts. He told his employes that he would restore the 25 per cent cut as soon as business conditions improved. The workers have been watching the market and recent improvements led them to believe the time was ripe for restoration of wages. But instead of restoring the cut, the management announced an increase of ten per cent and immediately sought to offset it by a further "stretch out" of the workers. As a matter of fact, the "increase" was only a blind by which the management intended putting 100 of the Poe employes out on the street to be cared for by the welfare organizations.

The strike was effective, the management agreeing to a 15 per cent restoration of wages instead of 10 per cent after June 8, and an additional restoration of 10 per cent later. Employes who were laid off at the time of the 10 per cent "increase" will be put back to work.

NEGOTIATIONS FOR STUDIO PACT STILL IN PROGRESS

New York, June 8.—The general offices of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes and Moving Picture Operators says that long-drawn-out conferences for drawing up of the West Coast studio agreement between the producers and International President William C. Elliott, as well as officials representing local unions involved, and the Carpenters, Electricians and Musicians, have thus far availed nothing. These meetings, which had originally started on the west coast, were then resumed in New York, and it now seems inevitable that they will be again shifted back to the west coast in an endeavor to definitely and conclusively terminate them.

At the outset, in an effort to enforce a 50 per cent cut, the producers had discontinued operations in all the studios for a brief period, which subsequently resulted in temporary adjustment being reached by President Elliott for the return of all men employed in the studios, with the further provision there would be no reduction in wages pending resumption and termination of the negotiations.

JOHNSTON WINS VICTORY AS ENGINEERS CONVENE

Cleveland, O., June 8.—"Progressives" opposing Alvanley Johnston, grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, lost the first round of their battle at the opening session of the Brotherhood's triennial convention here, when a motion to unseat Johnston as presiding officer and elect a temporary chairman until new officers are chosen was beaten by a decisive majority.

The "progressives" are fighting Johnston because of the Brotherhood's outside financial ventures. Johnston, head of the Brotherhood since 1928, maintains that he inherited the outside financial ventures from previous administrations and that he has done everything in his power to reduce them.

The 1933 financial report showed that since May, 1930, the Brotherhood has cut its external obligations from $5,265,923 to $3,740,966. It also showed, officials said, gradual retirement from what once was a string of more than two-score outside financial interests.

Morgan Inquiry Reveals Empire Of Vested Wealth

Appalling Power of Money Shocks Nation, While Details of Tactics in "Greasing" Friends Shows That All Gangs Are Alike.

Washington, June 8.—Morgan and Capone laid down much the same principles in the matter of keeping the fences well repaired, it seems.

Morgan greased the right people, passing out five and six-figure favors to such men as national political party treasurers, secretaries of the treasury, past and future, judges, a former presidential candidate, an ambassador-at-large and so on.

The point has been made that these men didn't need greasing to hold them in line, because they were "Morgan minded" naturally—and there is something to that point of view.

There also is something to the point of view that a good commander keeps his lieutenants happy through largesse of one sort or another. It is the Tammany principle. It was the old army idea. Generals used to give their lieutenants a chance at looting every now and then. Morgan follows a sound principle.

But the important thing thus far coming out of the Morgan inquiry is not so much that a string of men every now and then got a roll of money as that one firm had the power over American industry and finance to tap the nation for millions by what amounted to the waving of a wand and that there were so many of these millions that a few could be distributed to "friends" with scarcely a dent being made in the main pile. It is the sheer bulk of power in the Morgan firm's hands that is shocking.

The Morgan power has been no secret, but the amazing extent of it has been unknown to the people. That there was "invisible government" and a "money trust" was declared by the Purjo committee twenty years ago, after the father of the present Morgan had wriggled through the same sort of testimony. But the Morgan rulership is today more powerful; the domain is infinitely larger.

It is doubtful if the full range of Morgan influence and power will be brought out in the present hearings. There has been no intimation yet from the witness stand that Morgan has power in the publishing world, yet it is known that the great financial monarch does have such power. Thus far we see power stretching out mainly into utilities, railroads, foods. There are many other lines of Morgan power, revealed, in fact more fully in the famous testimony of John P. Frey and the noted senate speech of Senator George W. Norris.

There is something of indication that the "invisible government" is now face to face with the political government to see which shall dominate, with the odds long on the political government.

The present investigation is not in any sense a prosecution. It is an inquiry for the securing of facts upon which to base legislation. Indictments can follow only if testimony is procured showing an offense and only if such testimony is subsequently laid before a grand jury. Thus far the nation has had a great showing of the extent to which wealth can rule the nation while remaining within the statute law of the country. The weakness of the social order has been portrayed. It is conceded to be astounding. The prediction is there will be change, even in addition to the banking and currency legislation now on the way to the White House.

Rail Men Hold All Jobs Under New Law

Washington, June 8.—Railroad men came here and battled their way through every kind of opposition to procure agreement finally on a provision preventing the discharge of railroad workers under the railroad co-ordination bill. The victory is regarded as one of the most striking of the year. Rail executives and financial powers generally sought a provision for reduction of working forces.

Railway union executives, in Washington constantly since the legislation took shape, have conducted a brilliant campaign and, on the eve of enactment of the legislation have procured agreement, including that of President Roosevelt, that co-ordination shall not result in firing of men. Decrease of working forces shall come only through death and resignation.

51-Hour-Week Bill Killed By New Hampshire Senate

Concord, N. H.—The reactionary New Hampshire senate killed the 51-hour workweek bill for women and minors recently passed by the lower house of the legislature.

The senate committee on labor reported the bill unfavorably and its report was approved by a vote of 17 to 7.

Paterson Hosiery Workers Strike Against Wage Cut

Paterson, N. J.—The American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers called a strike of the employes of the Le Mar Hosiery company's plant here. Alfons Adler, business agent of the union, charged the firm with running a sweatshop. He said that the concern, formerly known as the Felsan Hosiery company, was operated as a union shop, but closed because of the depression. A new firm bought the plant and told the men they were to work twelve hours a day and longer if they desired. Female employes are earning $3 and boy helpers $5 weekly.

Employes operate two knitting machines instead of one and are paid 40 per cent. below the union price.

FACTORY CONDITIONS CALLED ABOMINABLE

New York City.—A survey of the Methodist Episcopal church charges that industrial standards have collapsed and that "abominable conditions prevail among women employed in eastern factories." The Rev. Frank Kingdon branded Connecticut as "one of the blackest spots in the nation." He said that Massachusetts and New Jersey were only slightly better.

Resolved, by Local 259, in regular session assembled this June 8, 1933, that we condemn the cheap imported labor policy of this McDonald, and hereby place an automatic fine of $10 on any member of this local found patronizing or allowing any member of his immediate family to patronize one of the so-called "Home Stores" until Chattanooga Typographical union and Chattanooga Trades and Labor council removes said stores from the "unfair list;" be it further

Resolved, that the executive board of this union be instructed to immediately mail a check to the secretary-treasurer of the Chattanooga Typographical union, in the amount of $10 for each and every offense of the above paragraph; this amount being charged to the offending member and collected out of his salary for that week. And be it further

Resolved, that we here and now notify any local merchant who advertises in this McDonald's "throw-sheet" that we will consider their ad in said sheet an act unfriendly to union labor; and be it further

Resolved, that a copy of this resolution be spread on our minutes, a copy be sent to The Labor World for publication, a copy be sent to the Chattanooga Typographical union, and a copy sent to McDonald, the operator of the so-called "Home Stores," who is trying to use the money of local workers (his customers) to beat down the wages of local workers (his and other employes).

SELF-SEEKERS

Commodity prices are going up and costs of living are rising—faster and much more than wage scales. Under the program of these reactionary groups the gap would be widened to intolerable proportions, with high prices and huge profits to themselves, but with constantly narrowing living conditions for the producers of their wealth.

Higher prices are "priming the industrial machine," they insist, but they are bending their utmost effort to destroying the purchasing power upon which the machine must depend.

Manufacturers Lead Fight.

Out in the front line trenches and leading in the fight is the National Association of Manufacturers, seeking to safeguard rich profits for themselves, but to annihilate the provision of the law which would protect the wages and working conditions of their employes.

Closely joined with them is the National Coal association — a mere weakened remnant and fragment of the powerful organization of twelve years ago, when John D. A. Morrow directed its destinies. Palpably lacking in leadership and representing only a small segment of the coal industry, it is giving its pitiful meed of encouragement to the reactionary interests in other industries to weaken or destroy the safeguards for employes.

Standing in the offing, and trying hard not to join openly in the wrecking movement, is the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which did valiant lip service in the early stages of the depression to the effort to maintain the status quo in wages and employment, and stealthily encouraged wage slashing under the cloak of "economic readjustment." This "economic readjustment" gave unemployment one of its downhill shoves that changed a mild depression into a major economic cataclysm.

"Packing" of Board Planned.

In furtherance of the efforts of the bosses of industry to control the government's economic policy is the concerted design to "pack" the personnel of the federal control board with appointees sympathetic to their purposes. Manufacturing interests have already selected their "representatives" for places on the board's staff, and through a process of trading in support, are mobilizing the backing for their appointment.

In the forefront of candidates for such jobs is Gen. Brice P. Disque, president of the Anthracite institute, and seeking to head the coal division. As a brigadier general during the World war, Gen. Disque had direction of the largely futile effort in the northwest to get out fir timber for airplane construction, and is now head of one of the largest organizations of coal operators.

Gen. Disque has recently been in Washington actively campaigning for himself, and urging his competency upon the spokesmen of other industrial interests. He has been looked upon as a warm republican partisan

Chamber Seeks "Pie."

The United States Chamber of Commerce is angling for a large slice of political pie, with well-known ballyhooists and propagandists pushed into outstanding positions where they can smite the tom-tom and swat the hew-gog, and otherwise shout the praises of palaver over such malodorous conditions as may arise.

However well the Roosevelt administration may meet and resist the concerted onslaught of selfish interests to both shape policies and to control the operation of the new act remains to be seen. Administrative spokesmen are actively alive to the condition, and fully realize that the president's experiment in industrial recovery, and its consequences to the political fortunes of his party, are closely tied to the outcome, and will probably be the pivot on which the congressional elections next year will hinge.

DIZZINESS

relieved by Black-Draught

"I decided to take Thedford's Black-Draught, as I had been having bilious spells," writes Mr. Charles E. Stevens, of Columbus, Ind. "When I get bilious, I feel sleepy and tired and do not feel like doing my work. It is hard to tell how I feel, but I do not feel good. I get awfully dizzy. I know then that I had better take something. After I found how good Black-Draught is, that is what I have used. I guess it rids me of the bile, for I feel better — don't feel like I am dropping off to sleep every time I sit down. That, to me, is a very bad feeling."

NOTICE, TAXPAYERS!

NATION PLUNGING INTO CHANGE; "RUSH FOR JOBS" IS FORECAST

"Big Business" Stages Vigorous Battle Against Recovery Bill, But Is Destined to Lose—Employment Agencies to Be Set Up—Cost of Living Due to Skyrocket—McGrady May Be Named.

Washington, June 8.—America is plunging into change—a new order is in the making and each day sees evidence piled up.

As the Wagner bill, officially known as the industrial recovery bill, moves toward enactment by the senate, employers are waking up to its import.

James Emory, for years the leading lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers and a long string of other employer outfits, has sung what may be his swan song. Before the senate committee on finance he attacked the industrial recovery bill bitterly. If the bill becomes law, as it is practically sure to, Emory will fit no place.

The new legislation will compel and command co-operation. Emory and many others, useful only to fight, will be misfits.

Typical of the employer blasts against the bill is a circular issued by the Illinois Manufacturers' association. It has been coming into Washington in quantities. Its caption is this: "Do you want your industry unionized almost over night?" That is intended to scare the tripe out of employers and will, in many cases.

Meanwhile the Wagner employment agency bill has become law. Secretary of Labor Perkins, obviously speaking for the administration, says it is vital that these free employment offices be set up when the recovery bill goes into operation.

Perhaps unconsciously the secretary of labor let slip a hope of the administration. She said these agencies are necessary "to take care of the rush for jobs." Thus she indicated an expectation of a rush for jobs that will be ready when the new law starts in action. It was the first definite expression of administration expectation. Good news, if it happens that way.

Meanwhile, cost of living figures indicate that workers are going to have to dig deeper for supplies. Retail costs have gone down for the year, went down last month. But wholesale costs have gone up nearly 5 per cent in six weeks. This is sure evidence of jumps in retail prices just ahead. Cost of living is going up, to hit those who have fixed incomes and those who have none. Farm prices went up 17 per cent in thirty days, most sensational jump in years.

Meanwhile, considering the industrial recovery bill, its future is so certain that the president has put Brig.-Gen. Johnson on the job and the general, veteran of the war industries board, is creating his staff. Donald Richberg, railroad union lawyer, has been chosen counsel. Rumor is that Edward F. McGrady, slated to have been assistant secretary of labor, will go in as Johnson's staff man representing labor. McGrady is A. F. of L. legislative representative, member of the Pressmen's union and President Green's star "trouble shooter." Asked if McGrady were coming to her department, Secretary of Labor Perkins said, "I don't know." If he goes to the Johnson organization McGrady will have a much more important job, be busier and perhaps a bigger power.

There are quite a number of units working now and with the prospects looking brighter for fall. There is no doubt but what beer has helped quite a bit. Lofton's, for instance, is employing quite a number of our members, and from the comment I have heard on the street, I think you would enjoy an evening there at a minimum cost. Mr. Lofton has always employed organized labor not only in his restaurant but in his plant as well, the Columbian Iron Works, so if we can give him a break, it would be to our interest. The orchestra consists of the following members: Joe Leland, pianist and leader; Bill Krug, sax and fiddle; Dorothy Phillips, cello, and Albert Quirk, xlyophones. This unit may be heard nightly, including Sunday. Any favorable comment passed on to the management will be appreciated.

The S & W cafeteria also employs five of our members on Thursday night, which is family night. In the way of inducement they offer movies for the kids and a 20-cent plate. Some of you members might give the old lady and the kids a break and mosey down there some Thursday night, and you can take it from me that you will spend a pleasant evening at a minimum of cost. Our personnel there consists of the following members: Lester Cohn, violin and leader; Desse Keese, piano; Harold Cadek, cello; Earl Van Arsdale, string bass, and George Rodgers, vocal and guitar.

The labor department's bureau of statistics, women's bureau and children's bureau will conduct the investigation.

Laborers' Pay Should Be Cut 50%

That's What ROY McDONALD, Owner of the HOME STORES, Wants

Can You Afford to Spend Your Money with a Man Who Wants YOUR Pay Cut in Half?

McDonald is now publishing a weekly "throw-sheet," and employed an out-of-town operator in preference to a Chattanoogan.

McDonald says: "President Hoover made a mistake in 1929 when he asked that wages be maintained. If he had cut wages 50% in 1929 the depression would now be over."

Volume XVIII — CHATTANOOGA, TENNESSEE, JUNE 16, 1933 — Number 8

MR. ROOSEVELT, MR. M'DONALD AT VARIANCE

Economic Ideas of Two Men Widely Different.

POLICY OF LOCAL MERCHANT RECALLED

Johnson Tire Company Objects to News Item in Labor World.

Mr. Franklin Roosevelt, president of the United States, and Mr. Roy McDonald, grocer - baker - dairyman - publisher and self-styled "individualist," hold widely different opinions on how to cure the present economic ills of America, an official of Chattanooga Typographical union pointed out this week, but despite this variance of judgment each is proceeding in his own way.

Mr. Roosevelt has succeeded in convincing the congress and a great majority of the American people that higher wages and shorter hours are necessary to recovery, the Typo further pointed out, and practically absolute power has been granted him to carry out such a program.

Mr. McDonald, on the other hand, is obviously bent upon his individualistic policy, and continues to operate his business independent of forces which have tended to make sovereign citizens of working people, and himself sets the hours and compensation for his employes.

"McDonald said," the Typo official recalled, "that President Hoover made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a promise from the nation's industrial leaders that wages would be maintained as an aid to nattional recovery. Had wages been cut 50 per cent. at that time, McDonald averred, we would now be out of the depression, and we will never have good times again until wages are further and further cut.

"McDonald," he continued, "operates a chain of grocery stores, a bakery, a dairy and now a weekly throw-sheet, and if all his various interests are operated on the plan which he announced for his publication, his long-hours, low-wages philosophy is being put to the test generally.

"Local printers, latest victims of McDonald's antiquated ideas, are wondering how the grocer-baker-dairyman-publisher can expect working people to continue to patronize his chain businesses when he is so open in his advocacy of further reductions of living standards. Many of us, also, are curious to know how many employes of his so-called 'Home Stores' were imported as was the operator in his publication plant, and whether competent, deserving Chattanoogans have an even break in competition with outsiders for employment in connection with his 'Home-Owned, Home-Operated' stores."

TYPOS PLEASED WITH CO-OPERATION.

Officials of Chattanooga Typographical union Thursday asked The Labor World to again express their sincere appreciation to the public in general and to their brother trades unionists in particular for the undivided and effective support in the present campaign. At Central Body meeting Monday night delegates from practically every local union represented reported action taken by their respective organizations in support of the Typos' position and in condemnation of McDonald's low-wage, long-hours policies.

"This is the first time in many moons when we have sought the moral support of our brother and sister unionists in a controversy," an officer of the union said, "and we are more than delighted with the splendid co-operation which we are receiving. Business men of Chattanooga, too, are outspoken in their opposition to the policies of McDonald, and we have no fear that such policies will be allowed to gain a foothold in local business practices."

JOHNSON TIRE SEEKS "RETRACTION."

Johnson Tire company, through a member of the firm, Mr. Gould, last Saturday demanded that The Labor World "retract" a news item which recounted the experiences of a committee from Central Body which

Sharp protest against further reductions in pay of R. F. C. workers was voiced this week by Commissioner Zach Taylor in a letter to Gov. McAlister and to Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor at Washington.

Lowering of wages at this time, the commissioner pointed out, is not only in direct opposition to the president's program, but "One dollar per day is entirely too little, and it encourages private interests to establish the same rate for private projects."

Mr. Taylor's letter was written prior to announcement this week that the pay of these workers would be further cut to 75 cents per day. Mayor Bass was quoted by the Times as stating that if such a scale is set the city will use no more R. F. C workers.

June 12, 1933.

Hon. Hill McAlister, Governor,
Nashville, Tenn.

Dear Gov. McAlister:

This department of the city of Chattanooga is using some work relief funds from the Reconstruction Finance corporation, furnished us through the highway department of the state of Tennessee. The rate of pay was originally $1.80 per day, based on nine (9) hours work. About sixty (60) days ago the day rate was reduced to $1.25, and now we have been notified by the highway department of this state that effective Monday, June 12, the rate will be reduced to $1.00 per day.

In view of the fact that the maximum number of days under the present system a man can work is three (3) days per week, or sixteen days per month, we wish to respectively enter a protest on this reduction of pay for the following reasons:

One dollar per day is entirely too little for a day's compensation. It also encourages private interests to establish the same rate for private projects. President Roosevelt is now urging that wages be increased, and the Reconstruction Finance corporation should not take a position in direct opposition to his suggestion. As you know, commodity prices are going up and if wages are decreased with these advanced prices the men working on these projects cannot buy the necessities of life.

We would appreciate it if you would try to work out some plan whereby this reduction of wages can be avoided, and at an early date.

Thanking you in advance for any assistance you may lend, we are,

Yours very truly,
ZACH TAYLOR,

Painters to Plan Annual Picnic

Twelfth annual picnic-outing of Local 226, Painters, Paperhangers and Signwriters, will be planned by a special committee appointed at the regular meeting of the union Thursday night.

The Painters' outings have for the past twelve years been looked forward to with pleasure by a large number of citizens, both union members and their families and the general public.

J. J. Smith was named chairman of the committee, with the following to assist in the preparations: James Ely, P. P. Thurston, W. D. Canada, Z. T. Allman, Charles Milford, Paul Sanders, E. G. Gamble, J. G. Burkes, Horton Morrison, C. F. Weidner, A. L. Surrett and F. S. Thurston.

Time and place for the affair will be decided probably next week, Mr. Smith said.

Ten new members were initiated by Local 226 Thursday night.

Minimum Pay Bill Is Approved.

Hartford, Conn.—By a vote of 26 to 9, the Connecticut senate passed a minimum pay bill for women and minors in industry and sent the bill to the house. Passage of the bill was advocated to prevent invasion of Connecticut by sweatshop operators.

National Recovery Program Includes Many and Varied Changes in Economic Plan

International Labor News Service Prepares Brief But Comprehensive Summary of Administration's Efforts to Rout Unemployment and Restore Prosperity to Nation.

International Labor News Service has compiled for the readers of The Labor World a comprehensive, though brief, summary of the recovery program of the national administration. The purpose, method and status of each feature is given, with a clear and understandable explanation in each case.

The Labor World is pleased to present the resume of proposals and accomplishments, as follows:

INDUSTRIAL CONTROL

PURPOSE: To increase employment and wages and hasten recovery through prevention of destructive competition in business.

METHOD: By giving president or his agents emergency authority for two years to: (1) approve codes of fair competition submitted by industries agreeing on wages, hours of labor, production quotas, etc.; (2) impose such codes on non-agreeing industries; (3) enforce codes under a licensing system where necessary; (4) set aside anti-trust laws so far as they conflict with approved codes.

STATUS: National industrial recovery bill passed house and senate.

PUBLIC WORKS

PURPOSE: To create employment, increase public purchasing power.

METHOD: By expending $3,300,000,000 through an administrator of public works on developing a wide range of federal projects left to president's choice, on paying up to 30 per cent of labor and material costs on state and municipal projects, and on building state-aid highways, with service cost on this debt to be met by special taxes as determined by congress and canceled on repeal of prohibition amendment releasing liquor tax receipts. By setting up "Tennessee Valley Authority" to conserve resources, improve flood control, carry on forestation, develop power in Tennessee valley area. By special forestation projects employing 250,000 jobless.

STATUS: Public works included in industrial recovery bill passed by house and senate. Tennessee valley bill signed by president May 18. "Forest army" law signed March 31, numerous camps established.

MONEY

METHOD: By credit and currency expansion through authorizing president at his choice to (1) direct federal reserve to buy three billions of government bonds in open market operations; (2) order treasury to issue three billions in notes (redeemable at 4 per cent a year) to replace government bonds; (3) reduce gold content of the dollar by as much as 50 per cent; (4) undertake free coinage of silver in a fixed ratio to gold; (5) accept 200 millions in silver in payment of foreign debts. By embargoing gold exports.

STATUS: Embargo on gold exports ordered April 19. Farm relief bill permitting credit and currency expansion signed by president May 12, open market operations begun by reserve system May 23.

BANKS (Emergency)

PURPOSE: To halt nation-wide run on banks and international run on gold.

METHOD: By declaring a "bank holiday," at the close of which the treasury was empowered to license sound nattional banks, to reopen some with restrictions, to keep unsound ones closed for reorganization or liquidation.

STATUS: Emergency banking law signed by president March 9. Bank holiday ended March 13. Bank reorganization and liquidation now in progress.

BANK REFORM

PURPOSE: To strengthen the banking system and modernize it to meet the country's needs.

METHOD: By insuring fixed proportions of bank deposits (100 per cent of first $10,000, 75 per cent of next $40,000, 50 per cent of total above $50,000) at end of one year or after completion of preliminary examination, with possible temporary provision for 100 per cent insurance on deposits up to $2,500, through Federal Bank Deposit Insurance corporation financed by assessment on subscribing state and national banks ten million dollar appropriation from treasury. By ordering divorce of commercial banks and their security affiliates at end of one or two years. By forcing private banks to give up either deposit or investment business. By authorizing statewide branch banking.

PROTECTION OF INVESTORS

PURPOSE: To outlaw worthless securities, control speculation.

METHOD: By requiring sellers of securities to register all issues with federal trade commission subject to stop order in case of fraud and to supply that body—and also investors—with full information on assets back of the securities, conditions of issue, etc., with issues liable to damages for fraud.

STATUS: Securities bill signed by the president May 27.

DIRECT RELIEF

PURPOSE: To prevent suffering through depletion of state treasuries by providing direct relief funds to states to co-ordinate direct federal relief activities.

METHOD: By providing 500 million dollars for this purpose through the sale of R. F. C. debentures.

STATUS: Wagner relief bill signed by the president May 12.

FARM RELIEF

PURPOSE: To balance agricultural production and consumption so as to place farm products prices on a pre-war parity with industrial prices; to increase farmer's purchasing power.

METHOD: By giving secretary of agriculture free hand to limit acreage and raise crop prices by any one or more of several methods—leasing land out of production, applying the domestic allotment plan, taxing processors, trading surplus cotton for cotton acreage reduction, entering into trade agreements with producers and processors, etc.

STATUS: Farm relief bill signed by president May 12, methods of application now being worked out, farm credit set-up now being reorganized.

MORTGAGE RELIEF (Farm)

METHOD: By setting up a farm mortgage corporation to exchange liquid, interest-guaranteed bonds for frozen mortgages where mortgagees agree to write down principal. By cutting mortgage interest rates. By giving farmer a moratorium on payment.

MORTGAGE RELIEF (Homes)

PURPOSE: To lighten the mortgage burden on small home owners, prevent foreclosures, liquidate frozen assets of mortgage holder.

STATUS: Home mortgage bill passed by the house April 28.

ECONOMY

PURPOSE: To help balance current budget by cutting government costs.

METHOD: By slashing departmental budgets 25 per cent. By cutting government salaries 15 per cent. By reducing veterans' benefits 500 million dollars. By consolidating government services (to improve efficiency as well as make savings).

RAILROADS

PURPOSE: To prevent railroad bankruptcies, protect investors in rail securities, reorganize the roads on a more efficient and economical basis; to co-ordinate regulation of highways, water and air transport with that of the railroads and to control competition among these services.

METHOD: By setting up a federal co-ordinator of transportation with power to promote or direct agreements on economies in railroad competition and services and to develop rail consolidation plans, aided by five-member co-ordination committees presiding over each of three regional railroad groups.

STATUS: Rail co-ordination bill passed by senate and house June 9.

FOREIGN TRADE

PURPOSE: To hasten recovery by removing obstacles to internationnl trade.

METHODS: By reciprocal agreements to lower tariffs. By international co-operation to stabilize currencies, remove exchange restrictions. By settlement of international differences. By common action through world economic conference in London.

STATUS: President has persuaded eight nations to agree to a "tariff truce" pending further negotiations at London conference.

Department of Labor May Lose Under New Law

Recovery Act Seems Likely to Cut Functions as Industries Come Under Scope of Sweeping Measure.

Washington, June 15.—That the department of labor will lose some of its important functions when the national recovery act takes effect seems certain.

As industries come under control of the administration and are licensed, all of their problems, including their labor problems, come under the authority of the administration to be headed by Brig.-Gen. Hugh Johnson.

It is held by authorities that even conciliation in such industries will come under the new set-up—if there is any conciliation to be done.

The new law may even affect the women's bureau, though to a lesser degree, it is held, though this bureau will find a full load of work in industries that lag at the end of the procession coming under the new act.

There is a good deal of belief that the labor department will become more or less what might be termed a welfare department, under the new conditions.

The immigration inspection service already has been practically abolished.

One large new function will be added, however. The employment service created by the Wagner act will be administered under Secretary Perkins.

But the scope and nature of the department of labor will be in all probability vastly changed when the recovery bill is signed.

Confer With Knox Labor Officials

Representatives of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and of various building trades crafts went to Knoxville Friday for a conference with officials of the Central Body there concerning prospective work on the Cove Creek and other projects connected with the Tennessee valley program.

The conference follows plans laid by Central Body at Monday night's session to insure fair conditions on the river improvement project, and is the first step in a proposed program with that end in view.

Among those attending from Chattanooga were T. R. Cuthbert, J. L. Carpenter, Z. B. Bender, F. H. Palmer and others.

Thurston Improves After Long Illness

Friends of C. H. Thurston, well-known official of Local 226, Painters, are glad to see the "old-timer" walking about town again and enjoying the sunshine. Mr. Thurston has had a succession of ailments which were something like those which tried the patience of Job, but he is still able to "travel" and is optimistic.

Mr. Thurston has been recording secretary of Local 226 for the past seven years, and expects to fill that position many more. He has also served his organization in practically every official position, always with credit.

Mayor Promises Investigation Of Local Light Rate

Central Body Resolution Brings Reply That Reductions Are Being Sought.

"Prior to receipt of your letter I was already preparing to take steps to investigate the propriety of further reduction in our light and power rates," Mayor E. D. Bass declared in a letter to T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, in reply to a letter from Mr. Cuthbert transmitting a resolution adopted by Central Body Monday night.

The resolution called recent action of the state utilities commission a "playful gesture," and stated that reductions ordered in light and power rates were "so negligible it would appear that the Tennessee Electric Power company actually wrote the decision in order to insure the protection of its own interests."

Mayor Bass was called upon to protest the order and demand that a real and beneficial reduction be ordered.

Mr. Cuthbert's letter to the mayor follows:

In its regular meeting held Monday, June 12, the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council expressed its belief that the recent reductions ordered by the public utilities commission in light and power were so negligible that it would appear that the Tennessee Electric Power company actually wrote the decision in order to insure the protection of its own interests.

We, therefore, ask of you, our mayor and civic leader, to protest to the utilities commission concerning its playful gesture of relief to the customers of the Tennessee Electric Power company, and that you call upon the commission to give us a real and beneficial reduction.

Mayor Bass' reply:

Permit me to acknowledge receipt of your communication referring to action of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council regarding recent reduction ordered by the public utilities commission in light and power rates for Chattanooga and vicinity.

Prior to receipt of your letter I was already preparing to take steps to investigate the propriety of further reduction in our light and power rates.

I assure you your request shall receive my active interest.

Begin Plans For Labor Day Program

Plans for the annual celebration of Labor Day will be set on foot at a meeting Sunday morning, when the executive board and entertainment committee of Central Body will hold a joint meeting at the office of The Labor World, at 10 a.m.

At Monday night's regular meeting these committees were instructed to meet at their earliest convenience and begin plans for another great day.

Although one of the largest crowds ever assembled in Chattanooga enjoyed last year's festivities at Warner park, sentiment appears to be general for a different character of observance this year, and already suggestions have been made which will insure one of the most enjoyable programs given by local labor in many years.

President Kamin, of Central Body, asked The Labor World to stress the importance of every member of each committee being present at the first meeting.

Col. Luke Lea Council Speaker

(Nashville Labor Advocate)

Col. Luke Lea, former publisher of the Tennessean papers, addressed the meeting of the Nashville Trades and Labor council last Thursday evening in the interest of the Free Press papers, a new organization to be conducted under his management.

Throughout his entire newspaper career Col. Lea operated his papers under union conditions, and his remarks to the council were warmly received.

Col. Lea assured his listeners that the Free Press would be strictly union, and also outlined the policies that he will advocate when publication begins.

The council gave its indorsement to the new enterprise.

RECOVERY ACT PUTS AMERICA UNDER NEW RULE

Employers Lose Fight; Labor Is Victorious.

CONTROL FUNCTIONS AHEAD OF ENACTMENT

Right to Organize Guaranteed, Company Union Definitely Put to Sleep.

By CHESTER M. WRIGHT

Washington, June 15.—With powerful employers fighting like fury to insert damaging provisions even after the house had voted its acceptance, the national recovery bill finally became law with the senate's affirmative vote on the conference report.

The United States now is operating under the national industrial recovery act.

Company unionism is outlawed and while there may be some doubt as to whether, according to the strict letter of the law, the company union provision applies before a code of practice has been adopted and approved in an industry, it is understood unofficially that the recovery act administration regards that prohibition in force now and will act with full force to compel its observance by all employers. Thus the company union is dead and employers have no further power to compel employes to join or to remain members of company unions. United States Steel will probably be hardest hit of all corporations in its treating of the industrial slaves.

Pre-Determined Wage Beaten.

Much of the intrigue against the bill at the eleventh hour centered around the senate amendment providing for a pre-determined wage on government construction. The building trades went into a hurricane of action. The conference struck out the provision and it was out when the house adopted the conference report. A campaign was begun to have the senate restore the provision. The secretary of labor backed the predetermination proposal and made a strenuous effort to win out for it.

Inclusion of a pre-determined wage provision in the recovery act would have nullified the Bacon-Davis prevailing wage law, for which labor fought. The effort failed and the recovery act does not contain a predetermined wage provision.

The machinery for operations under the new law is largely in motion, because personnel had been gathered in advance. Brig.-Gen. Hugh L. Johnson had been in action as unofficial administrator until enactment of the legislation made possible his designation officially.

Law Is Elastic.

Aims of the law are to raise wages and shorten hours and to do these things through a governmental control of industry that can be made as hard-boiled and iron-clad as the administration believes necessary. The law is full of elastic—and teeth. It can be stretched, or it can be clamped down.

Best news of all is that members are flocking into unions throughout the nation. Before the measure even became law nearly 100,000 men had joined unions in the belief that deliverance from company unionism was near enough at hand to warrant the risk.

Some striking illustrations of the possible workings of the new law already have come to light. At least eight codes of practice submitted by trade associations have been rejected and sent back for change. If changes are not made to conform to administration policy, then the administration has full power to impose a code over the objections of the industry.

Work Week to Be Short.

And there is a striking possibility in reserve—not yet brought into action. But there is reason to believe that if a union agrees to a schedule of hours longer than is held proper by the administration, the union will be summarily ordered to withdraw its agreement and line up for shorter hours.

It is believed likely that no schedule of hours of more than thirty-six per week will be ap-

What Next!

A new tractor-welder for the repair of worn railroad tracks and other railroad property was recently demonstrated. The new machine is a long, low and narrow tractor, equipped with electric arc-welding apparatus. A gasoline engine drives a generator which supplies current for welding and for driving the tractor from place to place. Six of the new tractors have been ordered by the Lehigh Valley railroad.

Labor Men on Missions.

Washington, June 8.—Three labor men are on missions. Hugh Frayne, eastern representative of the A. F. of L., has sailed for Geneva as one of the official American observers at the International Labor organization sessions at Geneva. He was appointed by Secretary of Labor Perkins with approval of President Roosevelt.

James Wilson, A. F. of L. vice-president, has sailed as labor adviser to the American delegation to the world economic conference at London. He was appointed by President Roosevelt. Mary Anderson, children's bureau chief, sailed for the Geneva sessions.

TEMPORARY pain relief remedies may save you much suffering at the moment, but putting a mask over a warning signal does not clear up the condition it was telling you to avoid.

Company Unions Are Dead

(An International Labor News Service Editorial)

The National Industrial Recovery act has killed company unions. Specifically, by name, in detailed description, they are dead.

The moment an industry files a code of practice with the Administration, the whole force and might of the United States says to employers: You cannot maintain a company union; you cannot discharge a worker for declining to belong to a company union or for getting out of one. Even before that—RIGHT NOW—the company union is dead.

Employers fought tooth and nail to kill that provision in the new law. They wanted their company unions. And HOW they wanted them. But congress said: YOU CANNOT LONGER ENSLAVE WORKERS.

We have a 1933 emancipation proclamation! The company union is dead in America!

There are big company unions. Steel has its big company unions—its big slave organizations. The electrical industry has them. Western Union has one.

Well, there can be a lot of funerals for these company unions, which nobody will attend except the bosses and a few of their poor dupes who have been on payrolls to keep them going.

It's a great day for America. Company unions are dead.

But let us remember this: The new law does not forbid independent and dual unions. The law does not require that workers join unions in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. That is up to labor.

Organization is necessary. Such an organization campaign as America has never seen is necessary.

The National Industrial Recovery act is of tremendous importance. It is, without any exaggeration, REVOLUTIONARY.

This new law is so important that the non-union rubber industry has hired Newton D. Baker to advise in drafting its code of practice. Now the non-union rubber industry, in which the Akron was built by piece work, isn't engaging a high power lawyer like Baker unless it KNOWS that it is important to get the right kind of steer at the start. And the rubber industry isn't steering toward unionism!

Let the employers teach us how important to labor this new law is going to be—right now.

The National Association of Manufacturers spent thousands of dollars to defeat the law. The United States Chamber of Commerce risked its standing with the White House, such as it is, in an effort to beat the new law.

Codes of practice are being filed every day. Many of them are being sent right back for revision. If the terms do not suit when revised, THEN THE DICTATORSHIP WILL GET BUSY and these gentlemen of big business will be told what they have to do. And they will do as they are told, perhaps for the first time in American history.

Something new is on the cards—make no mistake about that. And labor cannot sit back and say, "everything is as it was and we can quietly wait and see."

Labor never got anything on a silver platter. Delegates to the recent national labor conference pounded home the warning: Labor will get what it is strong enough to take and hold what it is wise enough to take and to hold.

The company union is dead. Monumental achievement. But that will not of itself build true unions. MEN will have to do that. ON WITH THE CAMPAIGN!

Moving Toward a New Era

Each day sees America nearer the day of dictatorship in industry. Labor's record will be good when the results are counted up. Labor understands that this dictatorship is American made, is necessary in this hour, and brings safeguards that perhaps could be obtained in no other way.

The record of employers will not be so good. It is rotten already. The National Association of Manufacturers and the United States Chamber of Commerce have sought to play ducks and drakes with American well-being. These organizations have put a narrow and mistaken self-interest ahead of national welfare. They have tried to get everything for themselves, giving the people nothing. They think America was made for Big Business—Big Business, like the Morgans, who can find ways to pay no income tax to support the government that protects them in their racket.

It is perhaps fortunate that the Morgan investigation and the Harriman case and the Mitchell trial came along just when the Recovery bill came to an issue in congress. The nation was able to see in bold and tragic contrast the fate of the rich on the one hand and the fate of the thirteen millions of unemployed on the other.

The Morgan influence has not yet been probed to its bottom, but one thing seems mighty sure: It will be a lot less under the terms of the coming dictatorship, which can compel industry to operate with regard to human needs and human welfare and under guarantees of the rights of workers.

Privacy Disappears from Business

Even the New York Times concedes that the day of secrets in the conduct of big business and high finance has gone. Increasing "socialization" is forecast in the same newspaper, not with glee. Actually, the day of privacy in high places seems over. It is not easy to grasp the bigness of the changes now in the making.

The president of the United States has been given or within a few days will be given complete power over agriculture, finance, industry, railroads. Every law granting power is written in terms made to stretch, like good elastic.

Under the new securities law we have the doctrine, "let the seller beware." Finis for caveat emptor. Securities issues must lie in cold storage for twenty days now, while the federal trade commission looks them over, scans the set-up, probes the values underneath. That's vast power for government, brought on by vast abuse.

That law hits the big financiers harder than the Morgan inquiry, through which J. P. Morgan continues to sit like an emperor amused at the caprice of court attendants.

The railroad law and the industrial recovery act, now almost ready for signing, throw vast properties under government sway. All over the nation men and women try to figure out what it all means. Not even the president knows in full.

But pretty soon men will be stopped from doing the things they have been doing. Private orders will have no effect. Uncle Sam will countermand and demand.

Here is speculation, but not baseless. Government will have the power to command, to fix prices, to determine wages, to order a plant to do this and that—to stop or to run.

Comes then the question of finances—credits, money, cash in bank, rates of interest and so on.

Price is the last thing fixed in the long line of production. It is the last word. The power that can control the last word can also exercise that power in preliminary steps. Financing is preliminary.

It begins to look as if government might control credit. THAT is something to knock the kinks out of the Morgans and Rockefellers.

Just about every step in the present tremendous program of change was thought out by organized labor years ago. Labor even laid down a program of social control of credit. It will yet dawn on America that trade unionism has had statesmanship, diplomacy, understanding and a sound philosophy.

Labor's prime duty now, to make its dreams come true, is to organize with all of the fervor and zeal and determination of a crusading army. That won't suit those that like easy times, but these are new times and the future of the wage earners depends upon the vigor and wisdom of those who lead and fight today to lay a sound flooring upon which to rear the new walls and upon which to superimpose a new roof.

Green Denounces Manufacturers' Association for Opposing Labor Sections of the Recovery Act

A. F. of L. President Declares Notorious Anti-Union Employers' Group, Closely Organized, Wants to Hog the Benefits of the Bill for Themselves and Then Victimize the Workers by Preventing Them from Organizing Into Effective Trade Unions.

Washington.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, administered a stinging rebuke to the National Association of Manufacturers for their malignant opposition to the labor sections of the national recovery act as adopted by the house of representatives.

The provisions which drew the attack of the anti-union manufacturers' association provide the codes developed under the act shall guarantee the right of the employes to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, without interference from employers, and that no employe shall be required to join a company union or refrain from joining a labor organization as the price of a job.

"The opposition of the manufacturers' association to the labor sections of the industrial recovery act," Mr. Green said, "places it in a most selfish as well as a most inconsistent position.

Glaringly Inconsistent.

"They are consistent only in their traditional opposition to the exercise of the right of the workers to organize into bona fide trade unions. Their position is glaringly inconsistent because while they are willing to accept the provisions of the industrial recovery act, which confer upon them the right to organize, to fix prices and to compel any employer who refuses to conform to their price-fixing arrangement to do so or forfeit his right to engage in industrial production, they seek to deny their own workers the right to organize and bargain collectively.

"The manufacturers' association is willing that its members shall exercise the right to organize, to establish a closed shop, so far as employers are concerned, under the protection of the government, but they are unwilling to accord to labor the right to organize and to be represented by representatives of their own choosing. Such a position is indefensible.

"It is inconceivable that congress would grant to employers the right to fix prices, through a closed organization of employers, and deny their workers the right to organize and be represented by representatives of their own choosing.

"They loudly proclaim devotion to the so-called open shop principle. The facts are they favor a shop closed to union labor.

Company Union Failure.

"The failure of the 'company union' which they profess to favor and protect has been clearly proven over and over again.

"In practice the 'company union' is a creature of a corporation or of the owners of industry. In dealing with a so-called 'company union' the company simply deals with itself. Such a form of organization is unrepresentative and can in no sense be regarded as a bona fide organization of workers capable of engaging in collective bargaining.

"The people of the nation and particularly the masses of the people have an opportunity to understand the attitude of the manufacturers' association, through its opposition to the labor sections of the industrial recovery act, toward organization of working people, collective bargaining and trade agreements.

Keep Workers Unorganized.

"They are willing that congress shall confer upon them full authority to organize and to compel their fellow manufacturers to join their organization and observe its price fixing set-up, to reap all the benefits that come from such a closed organization and such a price-fixing arrangement, but they advise congress and the nation that they insist upon enjoying a further advantage by keeping their workers unorganized, helpless and unable to cope with the organized strength which they plan to build up, under the provisions of the industrial recovery act."

One of the neatest dance spots I have ever had the pleasure of playing is none other than the Gypsy Inn on the main highway to Signal mountain. The color scheme throughout has been carried out in the gypsy effect—you know—red, yellow, green, etc. The floor has been resanded and is of nice size. The ballroom is completely exposed all the way round and believe you me, the cool mountain breezes won't do you a bit of harm on these hot nights.

F. E. Funk is the manager and is giving nine members of our local employment on Wednesday and Saturday nights. He also knows how to throw a mean sandwich together, having had wide experience in the catering line in some of the largest hotels and clubs in the south and west. If you care to dance, come up some Wednesday or Saturday night and I know you will be well entertained. Get a load of this for a band and draw your own conclusions: Hubert Pless, piano, doubling, interior decorating, sandwich making, drink serving, or what have you, I think he owns an interest in the place—anyhow, he's a great guy, as he does the paying off; Earl Van Arsdale, string bass; Cooper Null, drums and hi-de-hi-de-hi; J. T. Holdam, trumpet, and how; Neale Peaks, trombone; Jimmy Cox, first sax and ladies' delight; J. C. Buchanan, second sax, when he thinks of it; Mom O'Neal, third sax, and yours truly, banjo. A pretty fair unit, if I do say it myself.

If you can't come Saturday, see you Wednesday.

POT SHOTS

The biggest hits of the season to my knowledge are "Stormy Weather," "Blue Prelude" and "Smoke Rings." . . . It is rumored that Jimmy Walker, remember him, the ex-mayor, will be made czar of Tin-Pan Alley, if he can keep those guys from stealing each other's stuff. What a job. . . Have you ever heard Frank Worthy play the Louie Armstrong chorus in the Jimmy Dale arrangement of "Some of These Days?" Neither did I. . . There is the Dodd method of tenor-banjo tacked up in the secretary's office for advanced students only. If for any reason some of you banjo players want to get modern, take a look. . . Personal nomination for one of the greatest 'cello players I ever had the pleasure of playing with, Harold Cadek. . . Incidentally, a great fellow. . . How about the musicians, stage employes and movie ops getting together and putting on a show together. . . It should be a knockout with a little work and that set-up. . . Signal Mountain hotel took it on the chin Saturday night with a non-union band. It isn't always price that enters into it. . . Welcome to the fold, Alvin Blumberg and Neal Peak, may you always get the scale. . . See you next week.

Roosevelt Signs Wagner Bill for New Job Service

System, Providing for Co-Operation of State and Federal Governments, to Be Put in Operation at Once.

Washington, June 15.—President Roosevelt has signed the Wagner bill creating a new United States employment service, to be conducted by the co-operative action of the state and federal governments.

The president signed the bill in the presence of Senator Wagner, of New York, who introduced the measure in two sessions of congress; Secretary of Labor Perkins and Representative Peyser, of New York.

The new service, which supplements a similar service which has been maintained by the department of labor for fifteen years, will be put into operation at once. Headquarters will be established in the department of labor under the control of a director.

The Wagner act authorizes an appropriation of $1,500,000 for the next fiscal year and $4,000,000 annually for each year thereafter. Federal agencies will be established in each state to co-operate with state agencies. The funds are to be allotted to the states on the basis of population, but each state must match the federal appropriation to reap any benefit. Seventy-five per cent of the funds will go to the states.

Organization Is Keynote As Labor Plans to Function Under New Economic Recovery Act

Washington Conference Declares United Action of Workers Everywhere Paramount Need—Object of New Law Is to Create Jobs, Raise Wages and Shorten Hours—Edward F. McGrady to Assist Colonel Johnson in Direction of Revolutionary Economic Plans.

Washington, June 15.—Organized labor has made its plans for procedure under the national industrial recovery act, which soon may come to be known by its initial letters—NIRA.

Labor's intense interest was shown by the numbers in attendance at the meeting of union representatives here last week. No previous national conference has ever brought together so many union leaders.

In session nearly two full days, the conference analyzed the measure, as passed by the house and as pending before the senate, finally voting unanimously to support the house bill.

Edward F. McGrady, long member of the A. F. of L. legislative committee, has established his office next door to the office of Brig.-Gen. Hugh Johnson, who will be administrator of the act. McGrady will be Johnson's assistant for labor. An assistant for management will be named. Then for each industry there will be a representative of labor and a representative of management.

Discussion in the labor conference here revealed the extent to which industry may be brought rigidly under control within the machinery to be set up under the new legislation. Whereas the original idea seemed to be that interstate commerce only would be affected, it became apparent that intrastate commerce also may be affected, clamping NIRA down on every cross roads factory in the entire United States, bringing every employer and every worker within the scope of the new measure, fixing the terms under which each plant may operate and under which each worker shall toil.

It is equally plain that the law will not be put into blanket operation at once. Industry by industry will be brought within its scope but this may be done with terrific speed.

Gen. Johnson has been at work for some weeks, getting things ready to go. He is an ex-cavalry officer, with a background of economics and of practical industrial operation. He is accustomed to seeing things move at command, but under the tendency to demand and get action there is a decidedly human glint about the eyes. He indicates "a fair deal, but no monkey business."

It can be officially said that with Gen. Johnson labor will have its day in court, but the terms of the law, whatever they finally may be, will be enforced by him.

A probable outline of the method of procedure can be set forth with a good deal of assurance of accuracy. Where the representative of labor and the representative of management in an industry can agree upon a code of labor relations, that code will be routed to the legal department, which will be in charge of Donald Richberg, and then to the administrator. Where the two cannot agree the administration's research department will investigate, formulate a code, forward it to the legal department, which will pass upon it and transmit it to the administrator. Labor and management can agree, or they can have terms thrust upon them. Those trades or industries that say "But this will not affect my trade" may find themselves gravely mistaken. It may affect even the corner grocery before the year passes.

It violates no secret to say that the feeling back of the new measure is that "It is this or chaos from which the nation might never recover." That is why "teeth" for enforcement were demanded.

The labor conference approved a code of general principles, subject to modification, but in addition to this "master code," as it may be termed, there must be a code for each industry. These codes will have to be worked out industry by industry, by the representatives of both sides in each industry.

One fact of paramount importance must be emphasized: The moment the law takes effect it will be unlawful for any employer to demand membership in a company union.

The company union becomes definitely and specifically outlawed by the terms of the new legislation.

Purposes of the new law as officially stated are to shorten workhours and to raise wages, so as to create a balance of production and consumption, restore industry to operation. It is expected to put five million men at work by fall and to create a trend toward employment that will end the depression.

A $3,300,000,000 public works program is part of the law. This is of tremendous importance, but in what specific directions the money is to be spent cannot be known until administrative plans have been made.

Meanwhile, the labor conference emphasized to all labor everywhere the tremendous necessity for organization work everywhere. Upon the speed and spread of organization depends labor's successful participation in industry under the terms of the national industrial recovery act. President Green laid all possible emphasis upon the necessity for vigorous and widespread organizing work.

Hosiery Union Names Special Committee on Work Conditions

Philadelphia. — Anticipating the passage of President Roosevelt's industrial control bill, the national executive committee of the American Federation of Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers has appointed President Rieve and a board of five members from Pennsylvania, New York and New Jersey as an emergency committee with full authority to negotiate as may be necessary under the terms of the act to assure fair wage and work conditions in their industry.

Realizing that the government will not deal in this matter with the full-fashioned trade alone, the seamless division of the United Textile Workers of America has been merged with the Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers' union, which has extended its jurisdiction to include the entire hosiery industry, seamless as well as full-fashioned.

called on Mr. Johnson to attempt to prevail upon him to consider the position of local labor when asked to support the policies of McDonald's throw-sheet.

Although The Labor World article only quoted the committee which called on Mr. Johnson, Mr. Gould contended this paper "did not have the facts, and did not try to get them." He demanded a "retraction," and threatened certain reprisals unless same was forthcoming.

The Labor World article to which the tire man objected was as follows:

It matters not at all to Mr. Johnson, of the Johnson Tire company, Eleventh and Broad streets, whether Roy McDonald's throw-sheet is operated with or without union labor, according to report of a committee from the Central Body which called on Johnson to protest against the Johnson Tire company advertising in the "Home Stores" owner's newly organized weekly.

Mr. Johnson told the committee the Home Stores owner was a customer of the tire concern, and when reminded that perhaps a number of working people also traded with him, he expressed doubt as to whether organized labor members bought as much of his product as did the merchant-dairyman-baker-newspaper publisher.

Net result of a brief and suddenly ended conference was the conclusion of the committee that the Johnson Tire company, which sells United States tires as well as gas, oil and other automobile accessories, does not care whether members of organized labor and their friends patronize his business or not. * * *

Organized labor has had some trouble with the Johnson Tire company heretofore, but friendly relations have been maintained with the firm for some time.

President A. C. Kamin and Secretary Cuthbert, of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, told The Labor World this week there was no misstatement of facts in the article as printed.

RECOVERY ACT

proved and thirty is believed nearer the figure to be maintained in the absence of unusual conditions.

Unions have gone into action, like the government, not waiting for final adoption of the measure. Before the final vote in congress the mails were loaded with trade union literature, speeding the word in advance to millions that the road to unionism was opened to those who have held aloof because of company unionism and the fears imposed thereby. Unions also were taking steps to bring about an understanding of the law on the part of employers, some of them going so far as to point out to the employers that they, too, must improve and strengthen their organizations under the new law.

Old Order at End.

The sober fact is that today America is operating under a new theory of government, facing a new and revolutionary situation, with the old wags generally "all washed up." The administration, under the national industrial recovery act, has the last word in every industrial policy, in the fixing of prices and of wages, in regard to the hours of work and when and where production is to proceed.

EMPLOYES PAY PRO RATA COST 'THROW-SHEET'?

Store Manager Quoted in Novel Plaint.

JOHNSON TIRE CO. CONTINUES SUPPORT

Other Advertisers, However, Shy at Low-Wage, Long-Hours Publication.

Mr. Roy McDonald's apparent determination to play with an expensive toy, revenue or no revenue, may be partially explained by a well-founded report this week to the effect that the "managers" of his stores are assessed to make up the deficit incurred in the preparation of his "throw-sheet," which he continues to print each week and scatter about the city.

The story is told by a local trades unionist that one of these "managers" confided in a close friend that each one was taxed a certain amount each week to make up the shortage in revenue, "just as we were compelled to pay our part in the establishment of the bakery and dairy which the boss established" in connection with his chain of grocery stores.

A local printer remarked this week that if McDonald's store managers are paid at the same rate which he offered a craftsman who applied for a position on his "throw-sheet," the burden must be quite heavy on those gentlemen. However, the manager quoted is said to have added the consolation that none of the grocery store employes expected the "throw-sheet" to last long.

McDonald's publication continues to operate, practically without revenue from an advertising standpoint. Local merchants almost with exception have turned a cold shoulder to the scheme, and it is a matter of common conjecture just how much longer the grocer-baker-dairyman-publisher "individualist" will continue to gratify his whim.

Johnson Tire company, however, remains true to the choice of that concern, and this week's issue of the "throw-sheet" contains the usual space given by that institution. The tire concern was appealed to, through Mr. Johnson, to support organized labor in its efforts to circumvent McDonald's long-hours, low-wages policy, but the committee which called on the management reported little consolation was given them.

Mr. Johnson indicated, the committee reported, that the "Home Stores" owner was a customer of the tire company, and a reminder that members of organized labor had also been customers of the tire concern is said to have failed to register with the tire and accessories merchant.

Local newsdealers advertised to handle the "throw-sheet," when apprised of the policies behind the publication, advised local trades unionists this week that they would refuse to distribute it so long as such a condition exists, and members of Chattanooga Typographical union expressed their appreciation of the fair attitude of the dealers.

Campaign of the Typos was marked this week by the issuance of another circular for distribution throughout the county, again calling attention to McDonald's philosophy as expressed to a committee which called upon the grocer-baker-dairyman-publisher and self-styled "individualist" in an effort to prevail upon him to operate his "throw-sheet" upon a fair-wage, reasonable-hours basis, such as all other local publications maintain, and such as has been the case with every local publication for lo these many years.

McDonald, however, the circular recalls, averred that Mr. Hoover made a mistake in 1929 when he pledged industrial leaders to maintain wages as an aid to economic recovery. "Had wages been cut 50 per cent at that time," the grocer-baker-dairyman-publisher averred, "we would now be out of the depression." He maintained further that economic recovery would never come until wages were further cut.

"President Roosevelt," the circular reads, "says the way to prosperity is increased pay. Roy McDonald, owner of the Home Stores, says the way to restore prosperity is to cut wages in half. Which do you believe?"

The difference of opinion between these two gentlemen—Mr. McDonald and Mr. Roosevelt—has been a matter of widespread comment locally for the past few weeks, and Chattanooga working people, as well as citizens of all other groups, are apparently in almost unanimous agreement with Mr. Roosevelt.

McDonald imported an operator for his plant, presumably at low wages, over the protest of Chattanooga printers, who immediately set about to inform the general public of the attitude of the merchant.

The campaign, from the standpoint of enlisting sympathetic interest, has been unusually successful, assurances of support being constantly received by officers and members of Central Body and of Chattanooga Typographical union.

McDonald's antiquated ideas of low wages and long hours are being pointed out as having long been discredited, and there is general agreement with the proclamation of the merchant-baker-dairyman-publisher that he is an "individualist," at least respecting his economic views.

Cuthbert Urges Co-Operation In Organizing Work

Appeals to All Trades Unionists to "Show the Way" to Those Who Seek Union.

The duty of every union man and woman in Chattanooga to point out the possibilities of organization to workers in every line is stressed by T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and volunteer organizer for the American Federation of Labor in the Chattanooga district.

Co-operation in the drive for unionizing all crafts in order for them to take full advantage of the national recovery act is solicited by the labor official, who offers his own services "day or night" in the great task.

Mr. Cuthbert Friday morning gave The Labor World the following statement:

The possibilities for organized labor to obtain all that it has been striving for is at hand. It will not be handed us merely without effort on our part.

Let every union man devote himself toward talking organization to his neighbor. That laundry man that visits your door every week is most likely not organized simply because you have not shown him the way. No doubt the baker would grasp an opportunity to join our ranks if you would advise with him as to how to go about it. Even the bus driver that takes you to work may organize now without being fired—ask him to—encourage him—tell him what the national recovery act is—what it means to him and his family.

Look to your own craft. Until you are 100 per cent organized you must not be content. That non-union man in your trade is a human—treat him as one and he will come with you. Better to shake hands with him than to fight him.

There is an A. F. of L. organizer in Chattanooga. He is ready at all hours of the day or night to confer with those who desire it. He cannot make all contacts unassisted—you must help. Look about you and do your duty as a union man.

Call The Labor World, ask for the organizer, and tell him how you may help him.

COAL MINERS GET CHANCE TO JOIN UNION

Mass Meeting Arranged for Sunday Afternoon.

TURNBLAZER AND OTHERS TO SPEAK

Sequatchie Valley Workers Will Hear Story of "Emancipation Proclamation."

Coal miners of Whitwell, Palmer and other camps in the Sequatchie valley will be given the opportunity Sunday of aligning themselves with the United Mine Workers of America in order to secure the benefits offered by the national recovery act, according to announcement Thursday by William Turnblazer, president of District 19, United Mine Workers.

Mr. Turnblazer is scheduled to deliver an address, together with other mine union officials and a representative of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council. Exact location of the meeting had not been announced locally at press time, but it is presumed due publicity has been given the matter in the valley.

"A great president, a great congress and a great union" have given the coal miners of this territory a glorious opportunity to become free men and live as God intended for them to live, a statement issued by President Turnblazer this week declares. "It costs nothing," the statement says, "to become a member of the United Mine Workers of America and gain the life we have prayed for and dreamed of."

The statement, addressed to the mine workers of District 19, is headed, "President Roosevelt's Proclamation of Emancipation for the Miners," and is as follows:

The national industrial recovery act, sent to congress by President Roosevelt May 17, has been passed by the congress of the United States and now is the law of the land.

The law provides—

1. That coal operators may organize selling agencies, where they can sell coal at a profit, pay decent wages and destroy cut-throat competition.

2. The miners shall have the right to organize into the United Mine Workers of America without interference, coercion or intimidation on the part of the coal operators or their agents.

The national industrial recovery law is the proclomation of emancipation for the coal miners and their dependents.

This opportunity to join the United Mine Workers of America without fear of being discharged or evicted from your homes is here. It is the first time in the history of our government that you have had this opportunity to join the United Mine Workers of America without fear of losing your job or being discriminated against in any way. The miners must act quickly. The sooner we complete the organization of these coal fields, under the jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers of America, the sooner we will have joint wage conferences with the coal operators and negotiate wage agreements that will advance the wages of the miners, raise their living standards, shorten the work day and relieve the distress and woe of unemployment among our people.

This is a new day and a new deal for the miners. Protect yourselves, your wives and little children by immediately becoming members of the United Mine Workers of America.

A great president, a great congress, and a great Union have given the coal miners this glorious opportunity to become free men and live as God intended you should live in this wonderful country of ours. Organize! Carry the gospel of the United Mine Workers of America to every miner in southeastern Kentucky and Tennessee! We cannot delay. We must have action. It costs nothing to become a member of the United Mine Workers of America and gain the life we have prayed for and dreamed of.

Thank God it is our day. The day of freedom for the miners of southeastern Kentucky and Tennessee.

A number of local trades unionists will drive over the mountain Sunday to attend the meeting and assist in spreading the gospel to the long-suffering "coal diggers."

Brewery Workers Put Schlitz Dealer On "Unfair List"

Practically All Other Local Dealers Signed, Union Officers Reported Friday.

Sig Samuels & Co., local distributors for Schlitz beer, was declared "unfair" by Local 79, Brewery and Soft Drink Workers, at a special meeting of that organization Thursday night, and at the same time it was announced that all other dealers, with the exception of one or two, are already signed, and these are expected to come into the fold within the next few days.

Samuels has flatly refused to deal with the union, according to Roy Lee, secretary, and action was taken after every effort had been made to convince the Schlitz distributor that members of Local 79 should be employed in the distribution of his product.

In a display advertisement elsewhere in this issue the Brewery Workers list three reasons why the Schlitz distributor is regarded as "unfair" to Local 79, as follows:

"First—He refused to pay his employes the prevailing wage;

"Second—Sig Samuels contributed nothing to modification of the Volstead act in Tennessee;

"Third—He refused to sign a contract with the union in Chattanooga which the other agents had signed."

Display advertisements have also been placed in the daily papers, and Mr. Lee stated a campaign of publicity will be continued until every person in Chattanooga is acquainted with the attitude of the Schlitz distributor.

Weather Man Hurts Home Store Trade?

Editor The Labor World:

Has the weather man joined forces against the low-wages, long-hours policy of Roy McDonald? Here's why I ask:

Meeting an old friend on the street today, I asked him what he was doing. "Nothing, now," he replied. "I was employed at a Home Store, but the hot weather made business bad, and they laid me off."

On the other hand, I know personally that at least one of the Home Stores' competitors employed an extra clerk two weeks ago last Saturday, and he is still busy helping to care for the increased trade of this merchant, who is located next door to a "Home Store."

Your publicity campaign is going over fine. Keep it up.

Low-wagers are out of date. Hurrah for Roosevelt!

TEACHERS UNION TO HOLD SESSION IN MILWAUKEE

Chicago, June 22.—The American Federation of Teachers will hold its seventeenth annual convention at the Hotel Shorecrest, Milwaukee, Wis., June 26-30. The theme of the meeting is "The Control of the Schools."

It has been the custom of the American Federation of Teachers to hold its annual meetings in Chicago where its national office is located, but because the teachers of Chicago are unpaid for six months and because of the hundreds of resolutions of protest received by the federation urging teachers and their friends not to patronize the Century of Progress exposition until the teachers are paid, the convention this year is taken elsewhere.

LABOR BEGINS NATION-WIDE UNION DRIVE

Workers Everywhere Flock to Organizations.

YELLOW-DOG DEAD; BETTER DAY DAWNS

Washington, June 22.—National organizing work is under way, the American Federation of Labor is steaming into action, metal and building trades departments are networking the nation and things are doing!

The national recovery act, signed and in operation, carries a charter of freedom for workers, and workers are flocking into unions. Even The Business Week, organ of business, reports an unprecedented swing toward unionism.

The United Mine Workers lead the procession at this hour, in point of new members. The miners have gone fearlessly into states and districts hitherto closed to unions by yellow dog contracts.

Yellow Dog Defunct.

The yellow dog is dead and labor marches in to free the wage-earners who have been bound by these fiendish agreements.

From American Federation of Labor headquarters men have gone into the great mass-production automobile industry to organize.

The plan once before approved for automobile workers has been revived, given a new fire and vitality, and is the map that is guiding the organizers who are already on the job. Detroit, of course, is the big target, but the organizers will go wherever automobile workers are to be found, whether in main plants or far-flung assembly plants around the country.

The attack to organize steel workers is under preparation.

American Federation of Labor headquarters has become labor G. H. Q. in a sense that has not been possible since the days of war.

McGrady Assistant for Labor.

Edward F. McGrady, legislative committeeman of the American Federation of Labor, has been appointed assistant for labor in the national recovery act administration, headed by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the act. Other key appointments announced are:

Assistant for Industry — Dudley Gates, of Chicago, vice-president of Marsh & McLennan, insurance. During the war Gates was secretary of the capital issues committee at Washington.

Labor and industrial advisory boards have been named, with a consumers' advisory board, to represent the public, yet to be announced.

Green on Labor Board.

Dr. Leo Wolman, economist, of Columbia university, chairman.

J. A. Franklin, president, International Boilermakers' union.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Sidney Hillman, president, Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Father Francis Haas, Catholic Welfare council.

Rose Schneiderman, secretary, Woman's Trade Union league.

Industrial Advisory Board.

The industrial advisory board, appointed by Secretary Roper, includes:

Austin Finch, of Thomasville, N. C., president, Thomasville Chair company and chairman of a committee of the Southern Manufacturers' association appointed in connection with the national industrial recovery act.

Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., of New York, president, General Motors corporation.

Gerard Swope, of New York, president, General Electric company.

First Code Hearing Set.

The first code for which a hearing has been set under the national industrial recovery act has been filed by the cotton textile industry. The code was filed by three organizations authorized to speak for mills representing over two-thirds of the cotton spindles and looms in the country.

The proposed code would fix hours of labor at a maximum of forty hours a week, which has drawn bitter labor protest and will be opposed by labor representatives. The code would fix minimum wages at $10 weekly in the south and $11 weekly in northern mills. Apprentices, cleaners and outside employes would be exempted from the wage and hour provisions.

It is said the proposed new scales would represent an increase of about 30 per cent in wages and a reduction of about 20 per cent in weekly working hours.

Painters' Outing Set for July 27 At Winnepesaukah

Local 226 Plans for Twelfth Annual Picnic—New Officers to Be Named.

Twelfth annual picnic-barbecue of Local 226, Painters, Decorators, Paperhangers and Signwriters, will be held at Lake Winnepesaukah on Thursday, July 27, according to announcement Friday morning by J. J. Smith, chairman of a committee named last week to arrange for the event. Mr. Smith said that every effort will be made, as usual, to arrange an enjoyable program for the great throngs which will unquestionably come out to spend the day with the unionists. W. A. Witt and C. H. Thurston, Mr. Smith said, have been added to the general committee, and the membership of Local 226 is looking forward to one of the most successful outings ever staged by the union.

Nominations for offices were made at the regular meeting Thursday night, and the annual election will be held on next Thursday evening. Following names were submitted for the members to consider as their various choices for the offices to be filled:

Financial Secretary—C. F. Weidner.

Recording Secretary—C. H. Thurston.

Conductor—A. T. Jones.

Warden—H. M. Ottman.

Treasurer—J. G. Schrock.

Trustees—J. J. Smith, Paul Sanders, Joe Farmer, Charles Melford and George Durham.

Delegates to Central Body—Charles Melford, J. J. Smith, W. D. Canada, F. H. Thurston and J. G. Burkes.

"Local 226 has weathered the depression in fine shape," Mr. Smith told The Labor World Friday morning, "and we are 'going strong.' During the past thirty days our membership has been increased 30 per cent., and we are confident that the increase in membership will be continued. Five new members were initiated last night, and a number of applications are being considered."

Building, Metal Trades to Confer

Plans for a conference of representatives of building trades and metal trades, to be held in Chattanooga, resulted from a session held in Knoxville last Friday, when a delegation of Chattanooga unionists conferred with officers of the Knoxville Central Body with reference to matters concerning the Tennessee river improvement program.

The conference will probably be held on Sunday, July 2, if that date is satisfactory to all concerned, it is announced, and representatives of these workers from Knoxville to Sheffield are expected to attend.

In the meantime, Central Body officials asked that local unions of these crafts name delegates to attend whenever the meeting is definitely set.

RECOVERY ACT WILL WALLOP BIG BUSINESS

Selfish Interests Due for Severe Jolt.

UNAWARE OF REAL PURPOSE OF LAW

Vain Efforts Being Made to Use Legislation as Cover for Further Exploitation.

By B. C. CLARKE

Washington, June 22.—Prospective codes of ethics or rules of business conduct which have been submitted by various industries so far to Gen. Hugh Johnson, administrator of the new national industrial recovery act, for approval give indication of a general feeling on the part of manufacturers and men in industry that all the act does is to repeal the anti-trust laws and give them a wide open opportunity to launch an era of unrestrained exploitation of the common people through price-fixing and price-maintenance conspiracies among themselves.

Apparently some of them have been advised by their lawyers that such is the intent of the law—the sudden scrapping of safeguards of sixty years of duration. Nothing seems more certain in Washington than that those who attempt to follow such advice are headed straight for the jails of the land. In fact, under the public work section of the law, it is possible to have bigger and better jails.

All of the artifices of the slick and oily type of lawyers are apparent in the codes of rules of business conduct which have been presented to Gen. Johnson so far. Ambiguous phrases that leave the gate wide open to arbitrarily cut wages and put employes at a disadvantage, or give guarantees for high profits, freedom from competition and downright price fixing by conspiracy are found in these documents.

Fat Profits Aimed At.

They are loaded down with petty detail and trivial provisions that seem to have no other particular relation to an industry than to conceal and camouflage channels of price fixing and high profits. Industrial greed, clad in silks and satins, ruffles and periwigs, rather than the stark nakedness of a half century ago, is parading across the stage in Washington.

These codes of ethics as they are submitted contain small provision for the protection of employes in their wages, hours of labor, and working conditions. Employes would fare no better under them if they were adopted than would the consuming public.

Gen. Johnson's administration is showing no haste to approve these codes. They are being scrutinized with care. Particular attention is being given to provisions that cover minimum rates of pay, maximum hours of work, and the effect that higher wages and shorter hours will have on production costs and the prices at which commodities are sold to the general public.

Work Hours Bone of Contention.

The matter of maximum hours of work promises to become the main issue in the highly competitive industries, like coal production, where rugged and ruthless individualism, and the law of the jungle, has been the code of business conduct heretofore.

In many cases the sponsors of these codes are basing their hope upon attaching a friendly and artful advisor for their industries to Gen. Johnson's staff, and through wily manipulations of official promulgations, finding opportunity to conduct price fixing, control of production, and the maintenance of high profits.

Retail prices have been rising sharply in recent weeks, and retail groups are already taking an interest in the processes through which manufacturers are quoting higher prices. While retailers have welcomed an upward movement in prices, they are still interested in the fact that millions of people have not been re-employed, and a still larger number are working on short hours and low wages.

What Next!

A new combination thermostat and air-valve on the ordinary steam radiator makes it possible to govern the temperature of individual rooms by the touch of a finger. Once the device is set, the room temperature controls the operation. It can be attached to the ordinary one-pipe steam system, and can provide a separate temperature for every room in the house.

FISHERMEN END STRIKE

Astoria, Ore.—The strike that tied up the Columbia river fishing industry for several weeks was ended when the strikers' committee and delegates accepted an offer made by the Columbia River Packers' association. The settlement gives fishermen 8 cents per pound for chinook and blue-black salmon until Aug. 1 and 4 cents a pound from Aug. 1 to Aug. 20.

Relieves Women's Pains

"I was very thin and pale," writes Mrs. F. H. Scott, of Roanoke, Va. "I suffered from weakness and a severe pain in my back. This pain unnerved me, and I did not feel like doing my work. I did not care to go places, and felt worn, tired, day after day.

"My mother had taken Cardui, and on seeing my condition she advised me to try it. I have never regretted doing so. I took three bottles and it built me up. I gained in weight, my color was better and the pain left my back. I am stronger than I had been in some time."

Cardui, the purely vegetable medicine which so many women take and recommend, is sold by local druggists.

Labor's Victory

The three original paragraphs of Section 7 of the National Industrial Recovery act as passed by the House of Representatives and perfected by the senate finance committee provided that every code of fair competition, agreement, and license, set up under the act shall contain the following conditions:

1. That employees shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from the interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor, or their agents, in the designation of such representatives or in self-organization or in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection.

2. That no employee and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining, organizing, or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing.

3. That employers shall comply with maximum hours of labor, minimum rates of pay, and other conditions of employment approved or prescribed by the president.

With the intention of preserving the company union as a club against bona fide organized labor, the notorious anti-union National Association of Manufacturers persuaded the senate finance committee to add the following amendment to Section 7:

Provided, That nothing in this title shall be construed to compel a change in existing satisfactory relationships between the employees and employers of any particular plant, firm, or corporation, except that the employees of any particular plant, firm, or corporation shall have the right to organize for the purpose of collective bargaining with their employer as to wages, hours of labor, and other conditions of employment.

Organized labor saw at once that this amendment would nullify the company union prohibition in paragraph 2, and immediately waged a fight against it.

The battle on the senate floor was led by Senator Norris of Nebraska and Senator Wheeler of Montana, with the result that the finance committee's amendment was stricken from the bill by a good majority.

The senate is to be congratulated for its action in tossing the anti-union brain storm of the National Association of Manufacturers into the garbage can of legislative rejects.

Our Golden Opportunity

Weeks ago these editorials began to hammer out the warning and the advice: ORGANIZE! Already prediction is becoming fact. Men are pouring into unions.

The United Mine Workers lead the parade, with some 150,000 new members. Trenton, N. J., claims the prize for cities, with the best organizing record to date. Trenton claims a record of constant gains THROUGHOUT THE DEPRESSION and a complete program mapped out and in action for the RECOVERY ERA.

The American Federation of Labor has called for the most strenuous kind of organizing work. The Metal Trades and Building Trades Department have started great campaigns.

REMEMBER: If unions organize the workers, unions will have the right to represent workers. Company unions are dead, but DUAL unions are the threat of the hour. Remember that. It is important.

Every Central Body in America ought to be well along in its campaign by now. Those that haven't started yet, ought to start TODAY. The national industrial recovery administration is GOING FAST. This is not a matter that can wait. Many will wait and they will wonder afterward what hit them. It will be too late then.

There's a story in history about British troops having a celebration, while Continentals moved up, surrounded them and turned the tide ofw ar. The Continentals didn't wait and they didn't waste time celebrating until they had won their own cause for celebration.

It will do small good to hold sessions to celebrate section 7A in the recovery act if employers and dualism are allowed to win the victory.

The situation today is more tense than war. Governmental control is more sweeping and absolute. The long arm of government can reach farther and hit harder.

The next six weeks will see tremendous events. Whole unions can be made or unmade. See that yours is MADE.

The vital thing today is to organize. Organize unions of all kinds. Don't be hard and fast about conditions, except as to skill. The important thing is to ORGANIZE UNIONS.

Make this great question a first order of business. Every union in America ought to be in session every night and on the job every minute, ORGANIZING, ORGANIZING, ORGANIZING. This is no time for sleeping at the switch. All future labor history in America depend upon what unions do today.

UP AND AT 'EM!

Do We Face a Building Boom?

The National Industrial Recovery Act allocates three BILLION three hundred million dollars for public works. A great deal of this money will go to the financing of enterprises that have little to do with construction, as the term is generally used. There will be rivers and harbors—which are always with us—and there will be sewage systems and many such things.

But there will be a lot of real construction. Perhaps the construction industry, which employs so many men that it keeps more than a million workers busy "behind the lines," is in for what will look a great deal like a boom, in contrast to the past three years. This will be good news in every section of America. It is reported that a great deal of building is ready for the starter's gun. Plans are ready, everything is ready except the money, and that is now nearly ready.

Here let us halt to ask some questions. It is said it will cost two hundred million dollars to float this big financing. Then, in interest, compounded, it will cost some six billion dollars for ultimate repayment, so that, finally, we shall pay for this job three times its initial cost. That is a mighty heavy cost.

All will rejoice that the money is to be available. But many will ask why such a terrific toll should have to be paid to those who lend Uncle Sam the money which congress has voted. For congress hasn't voted actual money that is in the treasury; it has voted the right to borrow that much. The line of lenders is ready to do the lending, as always, and a new war debt burden looms for the future.

Someone has asked why the government should not start its fine printing presses and just print that money. Those who tell us they are finance experts, learned in the science of finance, which does not exist, warn of awful penalties for such a procedure. But could it be any more awful than the burden of interest that will have to be paid to those who have got the money, largely through such means as those described in the Morgan investigation?

The last great boom robbed the people right and left. Now, in order to recover from the depression, penalty for the boom, we must pay tribute to those who looted during that marvelous and almost fatal boom. Maybe the wizards of finance are right, but there are many who will say that they are overly involved in their own theories about money. There will be many—and the number grows—who will say that penalty enough has been paid. They will say, issue the money and see what happens; that it cannot be worse than what will happen if the old methods are used.

The Passing Show

Nots and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

There are more than enough mines and miners to supply all the coal the world will use in these days of oil burning and of electricity supplied by water power. Everything points to the desirability of shortening the hours of coal miners. But producers in every nation claim they dare not cut hours for fear they will get out less coal for the wages they pay, and so cannot offer their coal cheaply enough to sell abroad in competition with the producers of other countries.

To meet this difficulty the International Labor organization at Geneva has proposed an international agreement to make seven and three-quarters hours the maximum working day for coal miners in all the 58 countries belonging to the organization. The Spanish government has already accepted the terms of the agreement, and the governments of France, Luxembourg and Yugo-Slavia have declared their intention of accepting it. The government of Holland has taken the first steps toward joining them, and Poland has declared it will join as soon as Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Great Britain and Holland agree to be bound by the pact.

Col. Louis McHenry Howe, presidential secretary, has been having his troubles.

There was—and is—the camp kit episode, which at first seemed to involve "Bob" Fechner more than the colonel, but which now seems to be much more a question of the colonel's judgment.

But, the camp kit muddle wasn't even cool before the radio issue bobbed up to cause waves of worry around presidential G. H. Q.

It seems that the colonel did a radio talk or two and then signed a 10-weeks contract with N. B. C. and the RCA-Victor organization for ten successive 15-minute talks.

Senator Vandenberg brought out on the floor of the senate the price of these contracts. It appears that Col. Howe gets $900 out of a total expenditure of $1,500 for each broadcast. The broadcasts costs at the rate of $100 a minute.

What got under the senatorial skins was the fact that Col. Howe used one of his talks to lambast the senate, in an effort to induce public opinion in favor of certain provisions of the recovery act to which powerful senators were opposed.

Those who favored the administration's draft of the recovery act surely wished Col. Howe success in his campaign.

But the senators questioned, and probably rightly, the propriety of an officer of the executive branch using the air and getting paid to contest the will of the legislative branch.

Perhaps this is not the end of the difficulty. A number of the administration luminosities are writing regularly for pay. There has been question already of the propriety of government officials or employes taking pay from private institutions while on the government payroll. There have been some adverse decisions in cases somewhat like that.

Among these regular writers are Brain trust members, Moley, Berle and Tugwell. Reason says, "Let 'em write;" it may be that statutes will say something else. Anyway, an interesting issue is in the making.

Washington—and this is not exactly an exceptional time in this respect—is filled with rumblings and curious doings.

There is, for example, a growing furore about the private secretary of a certain highly placed official. The lady secretarial person is reputed to be more powerful than her chief and to wield almost the power of life and death by the simple nod or shake of her fair head.

All of these things constitute perhaps the trivia that humanizes a situation in which world-shaking revolutionary events are taking place. The nation is in the remaking. Its greatest institutions are being modified and remolded. And in the midst of an earthquake we learn of these minor things and get a laugh out of life, or find some substance upon which to nourish a minor grouch. Thinking only of mountainous things begets, quite possibly, a dullness of mind which is not advantageous or healthy in these times.

"The Cowards Never Started" is the title of a little book just written by Roy Dickinson, the energetic and hard-thinking associate editor of Printers' Ink.

There aren't many who know the characteristics of the well-known human race better than Dickinson, who has had a large and varied experience, running all the way from army life to writing for one of the best trade or professional publications in America.

This little book, which can be read in a short hour, shows that all through history the cowards have stayed at home, while adventuresome folks have gone places and have done things.

It wasn't the cowards who came to the United States in the days of discovery and colonizing. It wasn't the cowards who plodded over the Oregon trail. It wasn't the cowards who peopled California in the days of the forty-niners.

The cowards have always stayed safely at home where a great many of them have died in bed, although now and then one falls off a kitchen chair or down the back steps to break a cautious neck.

Funny thing is that men are buying this little book by the dozen and even by the hundreds to give away. In these days when courage is as necessary as ever it was in all the long story of human struggle, it is just the right spice.

One thing nice about this book is that it isn't Babbitty, it isn't smug or preachy. It doesn't stick to your fingers or make you mad at those who point lessons. Nice little book to read.

Every field, including the vast labor field, is open today to those who have nerve, initiative, the ability to think, the will to do—in short, courage.

Never was a time when peace-days called for and made room for courage in quite the same proportion.

The whole works known as civilization stands at a cross roads, from whence it will go where the strong spirits guide it. The weak won't have much to say—those who like to stick close to the old pastures and the old fireplace won't have much to say.

The cowards never started from where they were, but after the brave ones, the ones with imagination, got there and got things fixed up comfortably, then the folks from home came along and got an eyeful of the new scenery—generally liking it well enough to stay.

History is largely made up of accounts of breaking away from old bounds, doing new and daring things, people starting for places.

Starting for some place doesn't have to mean a physical moving away from old homes. It can mean moving away from old institutions, creating new conditions around the old homes.

That's what is going on today, on a tremendous scale. The cowards probably won't get started, but when the courageous ones have broken new sod, chained up all the bears and cleaned out the snakes, then the homefolks will amble along and take up residence.

Roy Rickinson's book ought to be popular reading and it ought to decorate the mantle in the new surroundings, for it will have helped fire men to break down the jungle and pave the new road.

"Sound Your A"

Which, Interpreted, Means Here's the Latest Dope on the Musicians

By GEORGE RODGERS

I have often wondered just what is the future of radio, insofar as music and musicians are concerned. It is true that possibly orchestras and entertainers the type of Lombardo, Waring and the Boswells will always work as long as there are commercial accounts that they get results for, but there is no doubt in my mind but what radio must make a change and a drastic one, but What? that is the question.

I was discussing that question with one of the officials of the local radio company some time ago, and he said that there was a million dollars in it for some one with an idea. If you have any thoughts along that line I would like to have you pass them along to me in care of The Labor World and I in turn will pass them along to the radio company. The main thing is, just what do you like to listen to, and what are you most interested in?

Bill Brennan, the umpire, said this, "Keep the stars like Cantor, Jack Pearl, Jolson and others off the air and on the stage, or vice versa." I expect that is a pretty good idea at that. What do you think?

UNFAIR

Sig Samuels & Co., of Atlanta, agent for Schlitz Beer in Chattanooga, is unfair for three reasons:

First: He refused to pay employes prevailing wages.

Third: He refuses to sign a contract with the Union in Chattanooga, which the other agents have signed.

Glass-Steagall Bill, Made Law, Curbs Wall Street Bankers' Rule

J. P. Morgan and Others Must Submit to Strict Government Supervision to Continue in Banking Business—Measure Provides Drastic Control, Ends Secrecy, Partially Insures Deposits.

Washington, June 22.—The rule of Wall Street bankers over American credit and industry is drastically curbed by the Glass-Steagall bank reform bill, passed by congress in its closing hours and signed by President Roosevelt, who declared the act the best banking law since the federal reserve system was established.

Even the controversy over the provision in the Glass-Steagall bill insuring bank deposits, the main provisions, which are expected to bring basic changes in American banking, were almost obscured. Designed to strengthen the banking system and eliminate methods leading to bank failures and to speculation with the people's money, the act is aimed to shear J. P. Morgan and other great private bankers of much of their power. Under it the private bankers will have to quit taking deposits or stop selling securities, as it forces private banks to give up either deposit or investment business.

Secrecy in private banking, held responsible for many abuses, is banned under the act. If private bankers elect to do a banking business, they must submit to strict government supervision.

Another curb on the power of private bankers is a provision forbidding directors or partners of these institutions to serve on the boards of commercial banks. This is a blow at the control of commercial banking by Morgan and others.

The act provides that all national banks must separate themselves completely from their securities affiliates. Hundreds of banks have such affiliates, including the National City bank and others, that figured prominently in the senate banking investigation.

To prevent speculation with the people's money, the federal reserve system, the greatest single channel for credit, is given the power to shut off this vast stream of credit from members lending it to assist Wall Street speculation. This will stop the banks from lending the public's money to brokers for financing speculation in a booming stock market.

The act gives the reserve board the power to remove from its member banks officials whose policies are illegal or regarded as "unsound." Reserve member banks are forbidden to make loans to their officers. National banks may operate branches in states which permit their own banks to do soo.

The deposit insurance provision will protect depositors of all banks held sound from Jan. 1, 1934, until 1936, though the president is authorized to put this provision in effect sooner if thought desirable. After 1936 only reserve member banks will have the privilege, a provision that is expected to bring state banks generally into the reserve system. The act guarantees deposits up to $2,500 beginning Jan. 1, up to $10,000 beginning July 1, 1934, with 75 per cent insurance for deposits between $10,000 and $50,000 and 50 per cent insurance for deposits larger than that.

Home Mortgage Bill Signed by Roosevelt

$2,000,000,000 Provided For Loans—President Asks Stay on Foreclosures.

Washington.—President Roosevelt signed the home owners' loan bill and at the same time issued a statement urging mortgage owners to withhold contemplated foreclosures until home owners might take advantage of the lending facilities provided by the law.

The act sets up a government corporation whose capital stock of $200,000,000 is subscribed by the United States treasury and authorizes the issuance of $2,000,000,000.

The law permits owners of mortgages on homes valued at $20,000 or less to exchange them for government bonds bearing 5 per cent interest. A loan of 80 per cent of the value of the homes, with $14,000 as the maximum, is provided. Loans will be advanced not only to meet mortgage obligations, but taxes. The borrower will pay interest at 5 per cent, and the government will issue bonds at 4 per cent to liquidate mortgages.

The Federal Home Loan bank board will administer the law through its headquarters in Washington and suitable branches in the various states.

Fur Workers Plan $250,000 Unemployment Insurance Fund

New York.—The Fur Workers' union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor announced that it had submitted a plan to establish a $250,000 unemployment insurance fund for the union's members to the employers represented by the Associated Fur Coat Manufacturers and Trimming association.

The union's proposal asks the employers to contribute 2 per cent of their weekly pay rolls to the unemployment fund. About 10,000 fur workers would be affected.

The union also asked that the present time limits for equal division of work be extended to include July and August as well as June, November and December, as now provided for, in order to equalize employment.

Organization Is Pushed in Every Soft Coal Field

Labor Department Reports Employment Gain and President Roosevelt Says Public Works Will Create Millions of Jobs.

Washington, June 22.—As the national industrial recovery act came before President Roosevelt for signature, the United Mine Workers of America announced that in anticipation of the passage of the bill, 135,000 new members had joined the union.

At the same time, the United States department of labor reported an increase in employment and payrolls for May and President Roosevelt said he expected the public works provision of the recovery act would provide several million jobs within a month or two.

In announcing the gain in membership by the United Mine Workers, President John L. Lewis hailed the recovery act as bringing "economic emancipation."

"The enactment by congress of the industrial recovery act creates for American industry an opportunity to rationalize its industrial relationships in accordance with modern concepts," Lewis said. "For the first time by statutory enactment, workers in industry are guaranteed the unrestricted right to join a union of their craft and to bargain collectively with their employers through representatives of their own choosing upon the question of wages, hours and conditions of employment. This right, although heretofore conceded in theory, has in actual practice been denied the workers in many industries.

"Millions of wage-earners are eager to enroll in their trade union organizations so that the machinery of collective bargaining can be immediately perfected. In the coal mining industry the passage of the act by congress has been anticipated by the workers. In the last three weeks 135,000 bituminous coal miners have been enrolled as new members of the United Mine Workers of America and organization work is proceeding in every field in the bituminous industry. These men who have so eagerly and enthusiastically joined the union have for long years been denied that right by the coal companies which employed them and as a result their economic condition has been degraded to a basis of mere animal subsistence.

"The industrial recovery act gives to coal miners and mine workers alike the opportunity to agree upon a uniform production cost and thus put an end to the destructive competition that found its opportunity in the spoliation of labor.

"The United Mine Workers, concurrently with the signing of the act by the president, is ready in every mining district in the nation to start the machinery of collective bargaining in harmony with the text and principle of the recovery act. Insofar as the coal industry is concerned, operators and mine workers alike can hail the law as an act of economic emancipation."

The labor department report showed an increase of 4.8 per cent in employment and 11.5 per cent in payrolls in manufacturing for May over April.

Secretary of Labor Perkins said the gains were "far in excess of the normal trend at this season of the year," but warned against overoptimism, saying that the figures "should not be interpreted as meaning that the course out of the industrial crisis of the past year is clear." She said that purchasing power is still considerably below that needed to take care of cumulative increase in production. She added that total wages paid in manufacturing industries in May were still only 40 per cent of the average wages paid in 1926.

President Roosevelt said that the industrial recovery act will be placed in operation as soon as it is humanly possible. Commenting on the estimate that 130,000 additional jobs will be provided in the cotton industry through the shortening of hours under the act, Roosevelt said:

"If all the major industries within a month or two do the same thing, it means we will have several million more people back at work."

Twelve States Fight Prison Goods Suit

Representatives Meet in Chicago to Plan Defense of Ban on Convict Labor Products.

Chicago.—Representatives of twelve states here laid plans for fighting a suit brought before the United States supreme court attacking the constitutionality of the Hawes-Cooper act and the laws of nineteen states restricting or prohibiting the sale of convict-made goods.

Alabama claims the Hawes-Cooper act, subjecting prison products in interstate commerce to the laws of the states where they are imported would deprive the commonwealth of an annual market for $347,000 worth of convict-made goods. Also it would force the scrapping of much machinery, more valuable in the eyes of Alabama officials, it appears, than free human labor.

The honor roll of states named in Alabama's suit are Arizona, California, Colorado, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kentucky, Michigan, Minnesota, Montana, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Washington and Wisconsin.

Textile Workers Charge Peonage; Senatorial Investigation Asked

Rock Hill, S. C., June 22.—South Carolina labor leaders, at a meeting here of trade union representatives and textile workers, charged that actual peonage, working of illegal hours and discounting of pay checks are rife in the textile industry.

Informed of unbelievably bad conditions, the meeting asked for a senatorial investigation of South Carolina textile mills. L. E. Brookshire, president of the State Federation of Labor, charged and offered evidence that in some mill communities workers are paid by check, which to get cashed they had to discount 20 per cent. In order to get full pay, the workers are forced to spend all their wages in company stores, he said.

Brookshire further charged that some plants are forcing their employes to work 100 hours per week, despite the South Carolina 55-hour law.

A stirring story of labor oppression was told by C. W. Bolick, representative of the United Textile Workers of America, who cited instances of discharge for affiliation with trade unions, starvation wages, the gouging of unreasonable rents from mill workers and the charging of workers for shrubbery planted in mill villages.

To Users of Residence Service for Lighting and Other Household Purposes

In accordance with an order issued by the Railroad and Public Utilities Commission of Tennessee, a new rate for residence electricity will become effective with bills rendered on and after July 1. Together with reductions ordered in commercial lighting rates, total savings to customers throughout our territory under the new schedules will approximate $400,000 a year. The new monthly residence rate is as follows:

7½¢ " " " " " next 20 "
4¢ " " " " " " 40 "
2½¢ " " " " " " 120 "
1½¢ " " " " all over 200 "

This new residence rate applies not only to lighting service, but also to lighting in combination with cooking, heating, refrigeration and other uses of electricity in the home. Savings to consumers of electricity for lighting only will vary in amounts as follows: 22 cents on a $2.00 bill, 42 cents on a $3.00 bill, 71 cents on a $4.00 bill, $1.26 on a $5.00 bill, $3.70 on a $10.00 bill.

Savings to consumers of electricity for lighting in combination with cooking, heating or refrigeration will vary in amounts as follows: 65 cents on a $3.00 bill, 92 cents on a $4.00 bill, $1.54 on a $10.00 bill.

Study this new rate schedule. It offers you an opportunity to increase your present use of electricity at little or no extra cost . . . to enjoy at new low prices the many comforts, conveniences and economies that a more extensive use of electrical appliances now makes possible in your home.

Note that after you have used 40 kilowatt-hours, the new rate falls to 4 cents per kilowatt-hour. After 80 kilowatt-hours the price drops to 2½ cents, and after 200 kilowatt-hours all you use is at the unusually low rate of 1½ cents per kilowatt-hour.

Electric lighting . . . cooking . . . refrigeration . . . water heating . . . air conditioning . . . now become cheaper than ever before. Many families that have long cherished a desire for these appliances can fully enjoy now their many conveniences and advantages at greatly reduced operating costs.

Stand on Recovery Bill Puts U. S. Commerce Chamber in Tight Corner

Big Business Organization Finds It Tough Job to Carry Water on Both Shoulders as It Seeks to Please Reactionary Industrial Bosses and at Same Time Support Roosevelt Economic Control Legislation.

Washington, June 22.—Efforts of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States to lend sympathy to efforts of reactionary industrial bosses to nullify or destroy the licensing and labor provisions of the new national economy act, and at the same time support the efforts of the Roosevelt administration to get the bill passed by congress and into operation, are producing all of the disagreeable effects of seasickness in a stormy sea.

The chamber, accustomed as it is to being the big bass drum at the rear of the parade, has sought to ease itself into the background of the embattled industrial bosses, and while giving a friendly ear to their war-whoops, yet keeping out of the foray of battle and maintaining a semblance of loyalty to the pledge that was given by its president, Henry I. Harriman, to President Roosevelt at Warm Springs, Ga., last February.

But the chamber has not escaped unscathed in the strenuous efforts of manufacturers and coal operators to cripple the national economy act by wiping out the control which it establishes over industry—and that is a far more vigorous control than industrial bosses appear to suspect and to remove the safeguards that are provided for employes in their wages, hours of labor and the right to belong to unions.

Chamber Membership Falls.

There has been plenty of criticism for the chamber from all over the country, and quite a few resignations from membership. In fact, the resignations came in so heavily for a few days that it became a question whether the $150,000 that was netted the organization last month in new memberships and paid-up dues as a result of President Roosevelt speaking at its annual dinner might not be entirely wiped out.

At the time President Harriman visited Warm Springs in February, and pledged unadulterated support to the economic recovery plans of the president-elect, there was every indication that the reactionary interests in the organization would defeat him for re-election at the May convention. He had urged the domestic farm allotment plan, a shorter working week, and other things that produced a discordant echo in the chamber membership.

There were no strings tied to the pledge; President Harriman climbed aloft the band wagon and took a front seat. But even this move appeared insufficient to save him from impending defeat. As a further stroke of strategy, President Roosevelt was induced to appear as a speaker at the annual dinner. So great was the pleasure at this almost unprecedented acceptance that arrangements were made to broadcast the Roosevelt speech over the country.

Harriman Retains Job.

But at that point the president himself called a halt; he did not mind coming to the trembling fortunes of the chamber's president, but he preferred that what he might say be confined to the chamber's ears. However, this stroke enthroned Mr. Harriman in the chamber's presidency for another year.

The pledge at Warm Springs was likewise followed almost immediately by a cessation of the ballyhoo that has been broadcast through the nation's radio stations for the last two or three years criticizing "government in business," and holding the administration of federal affairs up to the more or less general mirth of the country.

Criticism of the chamber has flourished in Washington for the last twelve months. It has been heard on every side—spontaneous and uninvited. A few months ago one of the most powerful leaders in the lower house of congress, who occupies a position today of a presidential possibility, said:

"We have learned to know the chamber over here, and, regardless of its pretentions, exactly what it represents. It does not reflect the business sentiment of the country, as every man in the house has come to know. We listen to its monologues before committees, and then do exactly what we believe to be for the best interests of the country."

Hoover Pay Policy Backed.

At the outset of the depression the chamber gave loud vocal approval to the efforts of the Hoover administration to prevent a precipitate decline in either wages or employment. Those were the days when Julius H. Barnes, close friend of Mr. Hoover, was chairman of the chamber's board, and the chamber was still engaged in its ten years of "back-scratching" with the department of commerce and the Hoover administration.

But those days did not last very much longer. Mr. Barnes was ousted from his chairmanship, and a virtual feud broke out between the chamber and the department of commerce—a breach that is not even yet healed.

Unemployment was on the increase and wage scales began to be cut. The chamber was the possessor of a reserve fund stored up from its prosperous years of well in excess of $1,000,000, which had been stored up for just such an emergency as the depression. This fund had been invested by the chamber's finance department in largely railroad bonds that were considered gilt-edge.

Decided to Cut Staff.

When the depression carried bond prices to lower levels, the chamber decided that it would not sacrifice any of its holdings, but instead, would cut down its staff and reduce its salaries and wages.

The actual task of firing people and cutting salaries was dodged by the directors, however, and one of the executives was called in and told to do the job, which he did as ruthlessly as an Oliver Cromwell.

Not one word was raised by the chamber to halt the epidemic of wage-slashing over the country, which was intensifying the depression and carrying it to its abysmal depths. The first protest within chamber circles against this trend came from President Roosevelt himself, speaking at the chamber's annual dinner in May.

This speech fell as a shock on chamber ears and thereafter the chamber was regarded as being on the band wagon for recovery of wages. Whether this policy will continue remains to be seen.

STRIKE REVEALS WRETCHED PAY OF CLOTHING FACTORY WORKERS

Boyertown, Pa., June 15.—Some of the most lurid sweatshop conditions yet brought to light in Pennsylvania were uncovered when 150 employes of the J. B. Maimon clothing factory went on strike here.

Herbert Payne and Charles Phelps, of the Hosiery Workers' union, who investigated the Boyertown situation, report that when an analysis of wages was made after the walkout, it was found that more than half of the strikers had been earning less than $5 per week. A number of strikers, Payne declared, had actually been averaging $5 for two weeks' wage or $2.50 per week. Among the workers drawing these wretched wages were heads of families.

One case reported was that of a woman with five children to support who was receiving less than $2.50 for a full fifty-four hours of labor in the Maimon plant. Most of the adult women in the plant were working because their husbands were unemployed. Relief grants were required to supplement starvation earnings.

Evidence is being gathered by local authorities regarding immoral conditions which the Maimon plant bosses were able to impose on the girls because of the low wage conditions. Foremen swore at the workers and abused them, the strikers charge.

Business people, including local chamber of commerce authorities, are backing the strikers.

RECOVERY ACT

Retailers Ask Questions.

There is a disposition on the part of retailers to ask the producers who are increasing their prices just what they have done to advance wages, and to otherwise define the factors that lead to higher quotations in prices. The retailers can see no gains for themselves from higher prices unless there is a vast reduction in unemployment and purchasing power is immediately restored to its normal levels.

Arbitrary fixing of extortionate prices designed to exploit the consuming public and pour great volumes of profits into the coffers and pockets of corporations and their stockholders, promises to be the first issue that will put to a test the provisions of the recovery act and the genius of Gen. Johnson as a boss coordinator.

Miami Theaters Scrap Agreement With Unions

Miami, Fla.—The management of Sparks theaters, operating seven picture houses here, ignored a contract having more than two months to run and served notice on its operators and stage employes that they were fired, to take effect June 20. Sparks management also broke a two-weeks notice clause in the contract.

The places of the operators, members of Motion Picture Projectionists' Union No. 316, and of stage employes, members of Stage Employes' Local No. 545, many of whom are home owners and taxpayers here, are to be taken by imported scabs.

According to B. R. Walker, business agent of Local No. 316, Sparks, who operates theaters in eight other Florida cities, peremptorily notified the employes of a 20 per cent pay cut, and when this was not accepted out-of-hand, the notice of dismissal followed.

The government is now trying to make the dollar worth less without making it worthless.

During his visit to a village school a minister put this question to a class of little girls: "If all the good people were white and all the bad people were black, what color would you be?"

Some answered "white" and others "black". But little Mabel replied: "I guess I would be streaky."

The pearly gates . . . a loud knock . . . "Who is there?" queried St. Peter . . . "It is I" comes the reply . . . And respondeth St. Peter: "Get away from there. We don't want any more school teachers."

One business plus one lawyer plus one receivership equals prosperity—for the lawyer and the receiver.

CHATTANOOGA TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

TENNESSEE LABOR LAWS "DON'T AMOUNT TO MUCH," DECLARES MANUFACTURER

Chief of Factory Inspection Department Declares More Violations in Chattanooga Than Anywhere in State. Several Violators Cited, With More to Follow, Says Wallace—Attorney-General's Office "Too Busy" to Assist in Prosecutions.

Labor laws of Tennessee "don't amount to much," according to the opinion of a local manufacturer, as expressed to Lester E. Wallace, chief of the factory inspection department, who, with Miss Mary Slate and Fred C. Mathis, deputies, is conducting a drive on local "sweatshops." The assertion was made in reply to notification that violation of labor laws found in this particular plant would have to cease. The employer was one of nine citations for violations which were scheduled to be heard Friday morning before Esquire Rice.

"We have found more labor law violations in Chattanooga in the past three days than we uncovered in any other section of the state throughout our present campaign," Mr. Wallace told The Labor World Thursday night.

"We have instructions to enforce the laws without fear or favor, and this is exactly what we mean to do. We have worked night and day since arriving in Chattanooga, but due to the conditions found but a small part of the territory has been covered. We have reports of many other specific violations, and these will all be investigated in the course of a general survey to determine the extent of 'sweatshop' operations in Chattanooga."

Citations had been issued Friday morning for the following: McAllester Hosiery Mills, Turner Manufacturing company, Nu-Way Lunch Room, Southern Hosiery Mills, with others to follow, Chief Wallace said.

The campaign against law violations is state-wide, and is being carried on under the supervision of Commissioner W. E. Jacobs. Chattanooga is one of the last cities visited, and it is expected that the investigations here will be continued through next week.

"It is not our purpose to prosecute anyone," Chief Wallace said. "Each and every one of the concerns cited for violation of the labor laws had been warned before, some of them repeatedly. Our instructions are, and our purpose is, to check up on all violations and to prosecute in every case where the laws are not being complied with."

Co-operation of the attorney-general's office has been freely given in other localities, Mr. Wallace declared, but efforts to secure assistance of Gen. Lively's office in the prosecutions scheduled for Friday morning were met with the statement that the force was "too busy." Mr. Wallace acted as prosecutor, and it was understood at presstime that two convictions had already been secured.

Schlitz Dealer Signs Agreement With Local Union

Dispute With Distributor for Milwaukee Product is Short-Lived.

Sig Samuels, local distributor for Schlitz beer, this week signed a contract with officials of Local 79, Brewery Workers, and members of that organization are now employed exclusively in the distribution of the Milwaukee product.

A statement issued by R. R. Lee, secretary of Local 79, declared the failure of Samuels to sign the agreement had been due to a "misunderstanding," and notified the friends of organized labor that the Schlitz dealer is now "on the fair list."

Statement signed by Mr. Lee and published in a display advertisement in Wednesday's daily papers, follows:

It is our pleasure to notify the public that, ending a previous misunderstanding which existed, Mr. Sig Samuels, agent for Schlitz Brewing company, has this day signed a contract with Local 79, Brewery Workers, and you are hereby notified that he is on the fair list of organized labor.

Mr. Lee expressed pleasure that the short-lived dispute with the distributor was ended, and asked The Labor World to thank members of organized labor for their fine support during the progress of the difficulty. At the same time he asked friends of labor to remember that products of the Graupner Brewery are all unfair—Silver Stock and Extra Fine, bottled and draft beer—distributed by the Textile Warehouse and Storage company, which has also been declared unfair.

PROSPECTIVE TRADE UNIONISTS INFORMED OF LOW-WAGE POLICIES OF "HOME STORES" MANAGEMENT

Organization Wave Aids Publicity Campaign—Workers Told McDonald Advocates Shorter Wages and Longer Hours—Johnson Tire Company Apparently Satisfied to Continue Support of Non-Union Weekly "Throw-Sheet."

Hundreds of prospective trades unionists, determined to take advantage of the government's recovery program and form legitimate labor organizations, have been informed, incidental to their instructions as to the proper procedure for organizing, of the low-wage, long-hours policies of Roy McDonald, "Home Stores" executive, baker, dairyman, grocer, publisher and self-styled individualist, as expressed by Mr. McDonald himself to a committee representing organized labor who called upon him in an effort to insure the printing of his newly-organized "throw-sheet" by Chattanooga union printers.

Mr. McDonald, it was recalled to the workers, stated to the committee that Mr. Hoover made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from leaders of industry that wages would be kept up as an aid to the return of prosperity.

Had wages been cut 50 per cent at that time, the grocer, dairyman, baker, publisher, individualist announced, we would now be out of the depression; and he added that prosperity will not return until wages are further and further slashed.

Any one employed by him, Mr. McDonald announced, would be expected to come to work when told to and quit by the same sign. Further, he averred, employes of his corporations would be required to perform such various and sundry duties as the "boss" outlined for them, regardless of technical training of the employe.

Chattanooga merchants have almost unanimously turned a cold shoulder to McDonald's advertising scheme, and his throw-sheet is almost sans ads. A report was circulated last week, however, and published in The Labor World, that managers of the so-called "Home Stores" have been assessed their pro rata share of the cost of the publication, and it is assumed that it will be continued for an indefinite period.

Outstanding among the few local merchants who have given aid and comfort to McDonald's low-wage policies by advertising in the weekly is the Johnson Tire company, which has consistently used large space in its columns. Efforts of Central Body officials to enlist the support of organized labor in convincing Mr. McDonald his policies are wrong met with no success whatever from the tire concern, and a conference with Mr. Johnson was regarded as very unsatisfactory.

The Johnson Tire company is agent for United States tires, and has enjoyed the patronage of many members of organized labor in its business, which includes gas, oil and automobile accessories, and trade unionists have expressed disappointment that the firm has not shown a more friendly interest in their collective welfare.

Chattanooga Typographical union, backed by Central Body and its thirty-odd affiliated craft unions, is continuing the campaign of publicity, and officials of No. 89 expressed satisfaction at the progress of the campaign.

Tennessee Valley Unionists Confer Sunday Morning

Representatives from building and metal trades unions in the Tennessee river valley will confer Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, at Central Labor hall, for the purpose of discussing problems which have arisen and will arise respecting the vast improvement program which will begin within the next few months in this territory.

Delegates from Nashville, Knoxville and Chattanooga, Tennessee, and Sheffield, Alabama, will take part in the conference, which is expected to adopt a definite program for the protection of these workers' interest in the vast program.

The meeting is the outcome of a movement started in Chattanooga some weeks ago, and which culminated in a visit of a committee of Chattanooga building and metal trades unionists to Knoxville last week for a conference with trade union officials in that city.

A permanent organization, it is stated, will probably be effected Sunday, and all matters arising which affect these crafts will be handled through the newly-formed body.

A. C. Kamin, president, and T. R. Cuthbert, secretary, of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, will attend the sessions, as well as representatives from a number of the unions who have a direct interest in the proceedings. Mr. Kamin will call the session to order.

Ed Carroll Heads Electricians, 175

Ed Carrol, veteran member of Local 175, Electrical Workers, was named president of that local at the annual election of that local, with the following "assistants":

Vice-President, John Kennedy.
Recording Secretary, R. H. Duncan.
Financial Secretary, "Jack" Frost.
Treasurer, W. L. Williams.
Business Manager, E. E. McDaniels.
Foreman, J. H. Lofty.
First Inspector, J. G. Stancell.
Second Inspector, J. H. Lofty.
Executive Board, Ed Carroll, E. E. McDaniels and Perry Howard.

Mr. McDaniels said Friday the Electrical Workers are planning an organization campaign with a goal of "100 per cent" membership for workers of that craft locally. He stated that shortly a call will be issued for a meeting, to which all electricians, union and non-union, and their "bosses" will be invited.

Can Supply Union Sheet Metal Men

Reports that there are no union sheet metal workers in Chattanooga were denied this week by A. J. Pfitzer, who stated that any one having such work to be done, and who desires that it be executed by members of organized labor, may get in touch with him and same will be furnished for any size job.

The complete list follows:

Financial Secretary and Treasurer—Z. B. Bender.

Carroll Youngster Goes Under Knife

Friends of Ed Carroll, well-known member of Local 175, Electrical Workers, recently named president of that organization, will be glad to learn that the oldest youngster of the Carrolls, aged 10, is doing splendidly after an operation for appendicitis at Erlanger hospital Thursday.

It was said the boy stood the shock like a veteran, and is in good physical condition to recover rapidly.

Painters Re-Elect Surrett President

A. L. Surrett, who has served Local 226, Painters, Decorators, Paperhangers and Signwriters, as president during the past year, was re-elected at the annual election of that local held Thursday night at Central Labor hall.

Elected to serve with Mr. Surrett were the following:

Vice-President, W. D. Canada.
Financial Secretary, C. F. Weidner.
Treasurer, J. G. Schrock.
Recording Secretary, C. H. Thurston.
Conductor, Albert Jones.
Warden, H. M. Ottman.
Trustees, Paul Sanders, Charles Milford.

The picnic committee reported progress, arrangements for the annual outing including an all-day picnic and barbecue at Lake Winnepesaukah on Thursday, July 27. J. J. Smith is chairman of the special committee which is arranging for the event.

Gov. Rolph Vetoes Wage Cut for State Employes

Sacramento, Cal.—Gov. Rolph vetoed the bill providing for a wage cut of $5,000,000 for state employes. In official circles it was felt that state wage reductions would react unfavorably against the principles of the national industrial recovery act, which seeks to increase rather than decrease the buying power of the masses.

Local Barber Gets First State License

Joe Burton, of the Arcade Barber shop, is the proud possessor of Certificate No. 1 issued by the state board of barber examiners. The license is a requirement of the state government under the law governing workers engaged in that trade, and must be displayed in a conspicuous place by any one doing barber work.

The license sent Mr. Burton was accompanied by a letter from S. O'Riley, chief clerk of the board, congratulating the local tonsorialist on the distinction of being No. 1 in Tennessee. It is good for one year beginning July 1.

Schrock Celebrates 50th Anniversary

J. G. Schrock, treasurer of Local 226, Painters, was a visitor at The Labor World office this week. Which is not news. But Mr. Schrock stated that he and Mrs. Schrock last week celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary. Which is news. And good news, when it is added that both enjoyed the event in the very best of health and spirits.

Many friends of the "young couple" congratulated them on this happy occasion, and Mr. Schrock's labor friends were reassured by his optimistic statement that the first fifty years are the hardest.

Pitiful Tales of Exploitation Come From All Sections.

Central Body Officials and Organizers Swamped With Appeals for Assistance and Information—False Propaganda Spread to Discourage Workers From Exercising Right Guaranteed by Recovery Act.

From Industrial Recovery Act

"Every code of fair competition, agreement and license approved, prescribed or issued under this title shall contain the following conditions:

"(1) That employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from the interference, restraint or coercion of employers of labor or their agents, in the designation of such representatives, or in self-organization or in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection;

"(2) That no employe and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining, organizing or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing; and,

"(3) That employers shall comply with the maximum hours of labor, minimum rates of pay, maximum machine-load of employes and other conditions of employment, approved or prescribed by the president."

Chattanooga is in the midst of an organizing campaign for labor. And what a campaign, my countrymen!

Never in the history of this city, or possibly of any other city, has a greater spontaneous wave gripped the workers of all classes of industry.

Fired by an innocent-enough advertisement placed in the daily papers last Saturday and Sunday, pointing out to unorganized workers provisions of the national recovery act which guarantees to all groups the right to organize into unions of their own choosing, and offering the haven of the American Federation to all who might apply, the office of The Labor World has been swamped from early morning until late at night with groups of workers appealing for immediate assistance and advice in their efforts to comply with the law by co-operating with employers in making codes for the various industries.

Pitiful tales were told in many cases of oppression and exploitation extending over long periods, and stories of low wages, long hours and un-American working conditions were related by the scores.

Despite the fact that the "yellow-dog" contract and the un-American "company union" are outlawed under the national recovery act, a number of the larger concerns are said to be attempting to force such pacts upon their employes, demanding their signatures upon implied threats of discharge. From one textile mill came a report that a straw boss had stated it would be "just too bad" for those workers who failed to fall into line with the bosses' scheme.

Another textile management spokesman is declared to have said "before God, we will close the plant and throw rocks in the windows before we will recognize an American Federation of Labor union."

Others have threatened to close down if their employes choose a legitimate union through which to speak. Trades unionists, however, recalled the days of 1918-19, when threats were made to move great textile mills to various and sundry places unless workers then on strike returned to their employment.

Workers on all classes of employment in the great manufacturing plants reported efforts of employers and superintendents to intimidate and prevent them from even talking organization. That these efforts will be unsuccessful in practically all cases, however, is amply indicated.

The great wave of organization sentiment has overwhelmed officials of Central Body and voluntary organizers for the American Federation of Labor, and every available trades unionist has been or will be drafted into the campaign to supply information and assist the unorganized to secure the protection of the legitimate trade union movement.

Charters have been applied for and received for some six or eight new local unions, and it is probable that this many more will be granted within the next few days. Meetings are being held morning, noon and night with the applicants for union membership, and the various groups are being properly taken care of as fast as is humanly possible.

Central Body officials Friday issued an appeal to the unorganized to be patient. "We are taking care of the situation as rapidly as possible," The Labor World is asked to state, "but the great rush has made it impossible to immediately care for all comers. We expect within the next few days, however, to arrange meetings for all who apply, and we are devoting and will continue devoting every minute of our time and every ounce of our energy in our efforts to assist those who apply."

Mr. J. Harvey Wilson Dissents

(Editorial)

Lest anyone should get him wrong, Mr. J. Harvey Wilson, vice-president of the Richmond Hosiery Mills, Chattanooga, Tenn., announces through the evening News that he is still opposed to the United States government's war on the depression, and decries the "misleading statements" of government agents, who are "poisoning the minds of employes and consumers against industry."

The Richmond mills, Mr. Wilson explains, "fought pay reductions for two years after the depression came on," and finally, in a sort of last desperate effort to prevent starvation of its employes, the Richmond concern called all its 1,800 workers together and magnanimously offered to give them employment at lower wages. Reports vary greatly as to just how low these wages were and are. But, in that period, says Mr. Wilson,

> "Our contribution in the form of wages has resulted in a sum eight times as great as the total fund provided for the Chattanooga community chest."

Says Workers Should Organize

Editor The Labor World:

Industrial democracy, through representative government, will bring industrial freedom and prosperity if the people co-operate with the government. If the people allow government failure, as was allowed during the world war with the railroads, then hope is gone. It is the duty of every American citizen to lay down political prejudice and go for industrial democracy in the name of God, righteousness, Christianity, humanity, civilization and generations unborn.

I appeal to the American people to organize, not for strikes but for representations, because President Roosevelt and congress have restored representative government and without representation it is impossible to be heard?

This is not a one-man government; the capitalist class has rights as well the workers, and they have organizations and must be heard also. Then if the workers have no organization and representation the government takes it for granted that you are satisfied with your condition.

The railroad corporations, through organization, after branding the government as a failure, borrowed $280,000,000 of the people's money while thousands of the world war veterans were sitting on benches hungry after making the world safe for democracy. The banks, through organization, borrowed money to thaw out their frozen assets, and at the same time they were dispossessing the home owners and tenants that had already paid more than the iceburg was worth. No wonder it has never thawed out!

The home owner is the backbone of the country; renters don't care who they pay their rent to and unfortunately most of us are renters. Here's hoping that all Americans will be home owners when President Roosevelt's industrial program is complete.

The old reliable,
E. G. McCARSON.

Railroads and Shorter Hours

Editor The Labor World:

We are frequently asked the question, "Will the National Recovery act shorten the workweek and mileage for railroad employes?"

The answer is that the railroad industry cannot shorten the workweek, but they can have a short workweek by letting a man work a fixed number of hours and then call some one else to work, as there are lots of railroad men out of employment.

ERNEST DYKE.

Soddy, Tenn., June 26.

A master-clock that will not gain or lose one second in five or six years was described recently before the Physics Club of New York by O. H. Caldwell, former federal radio commissioner. The clock has just been completed by engineers of the United States government and will be installed at the naval observatory in Washington to regulate all official clocks and correlate the time signals broadcast daily over government radio stations.

Build Up Health and Pains Go Away

WOMEN who suffer from weakness often have many aches and pains which a stronger state of health would prevent.

Women in this condition should take Cardui, a purely vegetable tonic that has been in use for over 50 years.

Take Cardui to improve the general tone of the system in cases of run-down health and "tired nerves." Women have found, in such cases, that Cardui helps them to overcome pains and make the monthly periods easier.

Only What We Fight For!

What does labor get out of the industrial recovery act?" That question is being asked on every hand.

The answer is simple: Only what we fight for! But that may be a great deal, because—today the law gives us a chance to stand up and fight. Men can organize. Yellow dog contracts can't touch them. The old injunctions are out. An organizer can ask a man to join a union and the man can join—and nothing is going to happen to him. The employer is forbidden to fire him for joining a union.

At last that is law, good and plenty, with teeth, with a bite—with jail waiting to teach lessons to those who try the old and dirty tricks.

Of course, if workers will not join unions, then that's too bad. Nothing much can be done for them or by them. The law compels no man to join a union. The government won't organize unions. The law does only what labor has always wanted. It clears the field of obstacles. It gives men the lawful chance to join unions. That being done, it's up to the workers of America. Labor will get only what it fights for and it can't fight for anything if it isn't organized!

General Johnson's Timely Warning

Reactionary employers' associations who believe they will be able to ignore the legal rights of labor in framing their codes of fair competition under the industrial recovery act received a severe jolt from Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, industrial recovery administrator, in a statement outlining what the codes must contain.

Section 7 of the act sets out the rights of employes to organize, crimps the employers' company unions, and provides for maximum hours and minimum pay rates. Representatives of certain employers' organizations, well known for their anti-labor policies, intimated that they would be able to evade these principles and even threatened to lock up their mills as an alternative to recognizing the right of their employes to join bona fide trade unions.

In his statement outlining code procedure, Gen. Johnson said:

The act requires that certain provisions found in Subsection (a) of Section 7 shall be included in every code and therefore no application for the approval of any basic code will be received which omits or modifies these mandatory provisions, which are as follows:

"Every code of fair competition, agreement and license approved, prescribed or issued under this title shall contain the following conditions:

"(1) That employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from the interference, restraint or coercion of employers of labor or their agents, in the designation of such representatives, or in self-organization or in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection;

"(2) That no employe and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any company union or to refrain from joining, organizing or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing; and,

"(3) That employers shall comply with the maximum hours of labor, minimum rates of pay, maximum machine-load of employes and other conditions of employment, approved or prescribed by the president."

Gen. Johnson's language is plain. The dumbest and blindest anti-union employer can understand it. The right of the workers to organize and bargain collectively is guaranteed. Company union coercion is prohibited. Wages and hours approved by the president must be complied with.

It is to be hoped that employers who see red when trade unions are mentioned will recognize the new conditions without extreme compulsion and remove the barriers they have hitherto erected to prevent their employes from exercising the right to organize in trade unions for the benefit of themselves and their families and for the good of our entire people of whom the workers form the major part.

Roosevelt's New Deal for Labor

When President Roosevelt signed the industrial recovery act he made a statement outlining his policy for its administration. On the question of wages the president said:

In my inaugural I laid down the simple proposition that nobody is going to starve in this country.

It seems to me to be equally plain that no business which depends for existence on paying less than living wages to its workers has any right to continue in this country.

By "business" I mean the whole of commerce as well as the whole of industry; by workers I mean all workers—the white-collar class as well as the man in overalls; and by living wages I mean more than a bare subsistence level—I mean the wages of decent living.

Throughout industry the change from starvation wages and starvation employment to living wages and sustained employment can, in large part, be made by an industrial covenant to which all employers shall subscribe.

A persistent fight for decent wages has characterized the struggle of the labor movement from its inception. The labor movement has always held that employers who refuse to pay living wages should be regarded as industrial outlaws unworthy of the respect of any patriotic citizen. By means of trade unions the wage standards for millions of working men and women have been held above the starvation pay imposed upon the unorganized workers by the anti-union industrial and commercial pirates who have reduced the pay of their employes far below the decent living standards sanctioned by the unions.

Labor is more than glad to have its underlying principle of decent living wages upheld by the President and backed by the industrial recovery act.

A Deserved Rebuke

The underlying purpose of the industrial recovery law and the Roosevelt administration is to increase wages, reduce hours of labor, provide work and pay envelopes for millions of the jobless, and thus improve business conditions.

Coincident with the enactment of the law the railway executives, headed by W. F. Thiehoff, of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, demanded an additional cut of 12½ per cent in basic rates of pay for railroad employes. Plus the 10 per cent cut accepted by the employes eighteen months ago, this would have brought the slash up to 22½ per cent.

The railway executives figured that the additional wage slash would net millions of dollars a year for the coupon clippers and dividend receivers whose maximum unearned income has become a bit shaky because of the near bankruptcy of the railroads brought about mainly by the inefficiency of the very executives who sought to pilfer the pockets of the railway employes so that the owners of capital may profit thereby.

The wage-cutting policy inaugurated by the railway executives was emphatically against the industrial recovery program sponsored by President Roosevelt and given legal status by the industrial recovery law. Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, told the executives this in plain language at a meeting with them in Washington. The executives thereupon agreed to withdraw the demand for the 12½ per cent reduction and let the railway pay question alone for eight months.

Wage cutting is entirely out of place in the present economic plans, tuned to price inflation. With immediate prospects of increased transportation and earnings incident to the larger purchasing power of the masses and the consequent expanding business, the action of the railway executives in their original attempt to sabotage the president's broad industrial recovery plan is incomprehensible. The rebuke administered to them by Mr. Eastman was well deserved.

"Sound Your A"

Which, Interpreted, Means Here's the Latest Dope on the Musicians

By GEORGE RODGERS

The tuba, grandfather grunt of all brass instruments, weighs about 40 pounds. It has over six yards of tubing. It has to ride in baggage cars. Its master has to have the heart and lungs of an athlete. Yet he is considered a very ordinary fellow compared with the long-haired violinist who sits up front in the orchestra, runs a bow over a set of strings without much physical exertion.

Cincinnati seems to be the seat of tuba experiments. J. A. Houston, who plays in radio station WLW, has a bellows contraption called an aerophor attached to his instrument. He pumps it with his foot to shoot auxiliary air up through a hose into his mouth where, by a special facial technique, he shoots it back into the instrument. Tubaman Houston is puny. His aerophor is purely a lung-saving device. William Bell's invention is not for weak tubamen. It does the work of two tubas—a double bass and a baritone. It has two mouthpieces, two sets of tubing, together more than 16 yards long, weighs 50 pounds. It goes deeper than any tuba has ever gone before, deeper than any music has ever been written.

Tubaman Bell deftly shifts his instrument about, blows first on one mouthpiece and then the other, getting a four octave range as against two and a half octaves possible on a normal tuba. Two tubamen can play Bell's instrument at the same time, but they would have to be ambidextrous to avoid interference on the single set of valves.

leader continues, as quoted by the News, "we have passed a law and are going about the enforcement of this law which will put this country under conditions similar to those existing in Russia, the result of which, no doubt, will be just as fatal."

Chattanoogans doubtless will appreciate this major contribution of the Richmond concern to the well-being of our citizens and to the advancement of civilization. Many with vivid imaginations and tender hearts will vision, no doubt, the great distress and grief of the whole-souled officials, heads bowed in sorrow over the predicament of the poor workers threatened with starvation and want; some given to unbridled sentiment will picture the corporation chiefs in the sanctity of their own modest homes, waking in the dead of night to wipe away, unashamed, a sympathetic tear in token of their deep interest in the sufferings and privations of their dearly-loved employes.

What a contribution! How fortunate are the workers in this industry to have the heartfelt interest of their employers!

Government agents, Mr. Wilson is quoted as declaring, "are poisoning the minds of the workers against industry." Government agents and agencies it truly is who have developed and turned the white light of publicity on most gigantic steals of industrial and financial leaders in high places; some of the latter are now languishing in penitentiaries; some are in practical exile; some are yet to be convicted, and many doubtless have not as yet been caught. Mr. Wilson, of course, could not have referred to this expose of wholesale crookedness. Perhaps, however, he considers notification to industry's workers that the United States government will protect them in their right to organize as "poisoning their minds." Perhaps it is bad for industry if working men and women are informed that the United States government has made it possible for them to take their places in the scheme of things as sovereign American citizens, free at last to express their desires for conditions guaranteed by the constitution for lo, these many years.

It is indeed unfortunate that industrial leaders like Mr. Wilson refuse to join whole-heartedly in the United States government's war on the depression. During the great world war, the success of which was no less vital to our institutions than the present conflict, working people who disagreed with the nation's policies were branded as unpatriotic, and industrial leaders were not slow to demand summary punishment. Which was proper. But what of the business executive or industrial captain who proclaims himself, in the very heat of the battle, as "still opposed" to the government's program?

It is not known whether Mr. Wilson's proclamation has been communicated to President Roosevelt, or, of course, what position Mr. Roosevelt will take if and when such news is conveyed to him, but latest advices from Washington indicate that the policies of the nation have not as yet been changed with respect to restoring prosperity to our people.

Mr. Wilson predicts that the present war will "put this country under conditions similar to those existing in Russia, the result of which, no doubt, will be just as fatal."

Working people, however, we believe will have no fear of chaos as a result of the present program. America has undergone a transition, quite true, but thanks to an outstanding statesman, Mr. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, and the fundamental patriotism of the American people, the revolution was, is and will be bloodless.

They shot tyrants when Russia revolted.

We repeat, it is indeed unfortunate that all American citizens cannot join in the war to save civilization, but if such cannot be the case, those who prefer to stand by their government in its greatest emergency will be forced to battle along as best they can with whatever support they may have.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

CHICAGO MEANS WAR TO FINISH TO OUST BANDITS FROM UNIONS

Chicago, June 15.—Labor means declaration of war on racketeers. The fight is on; when it stops racketeers will have not even a toe hold in the ranks of labor.

So said Edward N. Nockels, veteran secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

"The American Federation of Labor and the Chicago Federation of Labor have joined in this campaign," said Nockels. "President Green is with us. Victor Olander is in the fight. So is President John Fitzpatrick and so am I.

"The Teamsters have cleaned out the racketeers. President Dan Tobin is in dead earnest.

"I know there may be casualties. Some labor men may be lost to us, but we are going through. Gangdom is savage and desperate. Labor is determined."

Jobs of 400,000 Saved By Railroad Relief Law

Organized Labor Wins Fight That Economies Shall Not Be Made at Expense of Employes.

Washington.—The jobs of 400,000 railroad workers, slated by those who own and control the railroads to go into the ditch in order that interest and dividend payments might be resumed without imposing too much of a burden of thought and attention on the financial managements, are protected by the labor clause of the railroad relief bill as finally signed by President Roosevelt.

Despite fierce assaults by railroad bankers and executives, and the disapproval of Joseph B. Eastman, interstate commerce commission member selected for rail co-ordinator by President Roosevelt, the law provides that a committee named by railway labor unions must be consulted on all wage changes, and that payrolls, except for 5 per cent annually due by deaths or other natural cause, must not be reduced below the May, 1932, level. Even in case of mergers the combined personnel must be maintained.

Mr. Eastman, in taking over the job, admitted that large economies in rail management, financing and service are possible without further penalizing labor, with whose objective he sympathized, he says, though opposing a protective clause in the bill. This was retained as the result of a sustained battle by railway unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and by the Railroad Brotherhoods and their friends in congress.

Besides the general clause relating to maintenance of personnel cited above, the bill provides as to individuals as follows:

"No employe shall be deprived of employment such as he had during said month of May or be in a worse position with respect to compensation for such employment by reason of any action taken pursuant to the authority conferred by this article."

The bill stipulates that labor committees shall be organized in each of the three sections, eastern, southern and western, where co-ordinating committees are provided, and that these labor committees must be consulted on any proposed changes affecting personnel in their respective districts.

Wall Street Due For Earthquake; Jolt for Bankers

Separation of Private Banking Kings from One Branch or Other of Ancient Power to Change Whole Financial Picture.

New York City, June 28.—Wall Street is due for a smashing earthquake, under provisions of the Glass-Steagall act and other legislation passed and pending.

The sure thing faced by the financial kings is separation of banking and the investment business. And this separation will tear apart such famed houses as J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Brown Bros., and a list of fifteen or twenty great private banking institutions which have combined private banking with the flotation of those bits of pretty paper called "securities."

To cap the whole situation, secrecy will have to go out of banking.

These great financial monarchs must choose between being bankers and operating securities houses. If they elect to deal in securities they cannot be bankers—they cannot accept deposits. They cannot play with the money of other people.

If they elect to be bankers they will have to submit to government supervision, and that means the end of secrecy upon which the House of Morgan has prided itself.

Certain of the commercial banks "took it on the lam" when they saw the new legislation shaping up. They divorced their securities affiliates. Chase National was one of the leaders in this move to beat the gun and get in the clear, dissolving its securities affiliate. With the commercial banks it is just a case of dissolving their affiliate securities companies. With the private banks it will be a case of cutting away one whole side of their business—breaking the combination that has given them their strength and vast power.

What will be the effect on the wage earning masses remains to be seen. For one thing it remains to be seen whether these great private banks will be able to devise new machinery to meet the new situation. If they cannot do this it seems likely to mean considerable in regard to the placing of private bank directors on the boards of industrial corporations, with a consequent effect on industrial corporation policies.

It may be that the new legislation will go far toward breaking the corporate grip on industrial America. Coupled with other legislation in the making, a complete alteration of the industrial and financial scheme is in immediate prospect. Observers look for a hard fight before the great bankers give up. Perhaps there will be extensive litigation, but the laws, made and being made, contemplate changes that are intended to rock Wall Street and its money masters to the very foundation stones.

Always demanding the UNION LABEL and SHOP CARD is evidence that you are a real live member of organized labor.

Senators Bachman and McKellar and Congressman Byrns will be guests of the postoffice employes, and will speak at a banquet which will feature the sessions Monday night at the Andrew Jackson.

Sam Matlock, of Knoxville, is president of the state body, and E. R. Hatcher, of Nashville, is secretary.

Business sessions of the convention will discuss matters of interest to the members, outstanding among which are listed the thirty-year retirement law, reductions in wages and enforced furloughs.

A delegate from the state body to the national gathering at Chicago, September 4-9, will be elected, and it is expected quite a "scramble" will mark the balloting for this honor.

The ladies' auxiliary of the state organization will hold its annual sessions at the same time.

Among those who will probably attend the state meeting as representatives of Branch 162 are W. J. Porter, James H. Daugherty, George Forbes, Gus Grigsby, Eugene Melvin and possibly others.

A splendid entertainment program has been arranged by the Nashville committee, which has invited all postal employes and their families.

R. F. C. "Wages" Bring Protests On Wide Front

Federation News Letter Notes Action Taken by Commissioner Taylor.

Following from the weekly news letter of the American Federation of Labor will be of interest to readers of the Labor World.

Commissioner Taylor told the Labor World Thursday that, although the governor's secretary had stated nothing could be done about reducing the paltry wage of the R. F. C. workers, the proposed cut was restored before further action could be taken.

It is recalled that the recovery act provides funds for similar work, replacing the R. F. C. activities, and that the government itself will set a minimum wage and maximum number of hours for those employed on such work.

The news letter article follows:

"Complaints against the low-wage policy of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation continue to accumulate. The general charge is that in making advances from federal funds to finance work projects for the relief of unemployment the R. F. C. fixes wage rates far below those required to meet accepted decent living standards.

"J. C. Lewis, president of the Iowa State Federation of Labor, says R. F. C. relief committees in that state do not pay the prevailing wage rates prescribed by law. Zach Taylor, commissioner of streets and sewers in Chattanooga, Tenn., protests against the reduction of the R. F. C. rate for street work from $1.85 to $1.25 and then to $1 a day with only three days' work a week permitted. He claims the workers cannot buy a living with the decreased wages.

"Lawrenceburg, Tenn.—Forty-five men employed on a Reconstruction Finance Corporation relief project here refused to go to work today unless their wages were raised to $1.25 a day.

"The men left their jobs at a rock quarry yesterday, explaining their action as a protest against the wage scale. Wages on R. F. C. projects in Tennessee recently were cut to $1 a day, but following a workers' strike at Memphis the rate was increased to $1.25 a day in Memphis, Nashville, Chattanooga and Knoxville.

"Wages of $1 or $1.25 a day for rock quarry work, street and sewer work, or any other class of work, are a disgrace to American institutions.

"The Rip Van Winkle officials of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation should snap out of their prolonged industrial somnolence. The National Industrial Recovery act, with its policy of higher wages for all industrial workers, is the law of the land. It is high time for R. F. C. officials to recognize this fact and reconstruct their wage rates on relief work projects in accordance with the principles of the new law."

Labor Told Government Employers and Employes to Work Out Wage Agreements by Collective Bargaining.

Washington, June 29.—To obtain the benefits of the national recovery act, the workers of the United States must organize.

This is the message of the American Federation of Labor to wage-earners and salaried workers in every part of the nation.

In an appeal to unorganized workers everywhere to unite in unions, the American Federation of Labor points out that the government of the United States has established the right of the workers to organize in Section 7A of the recovery act.

"The question now is: Will the unorganized workers of the nation exercise this legal right to unite with their fellow workers for the purpose of securing higher wages, shorter hours and improved conditions of employment?" the A. F. of L. asks. It continues:

"THE DOOR OF OPPORTUNITY IS OPEN.

ANY CORPORATION INTERFERING WITH THE EXERCISE OF THE RIGHT OF THE WORKERS TO JOIN A BONA FIDE LABOR ORGANIZATION WILL BE VIOLATING THE LAW AND SUBJECT ITSELF TO THE PENALTIES PROVIDED THEREIN."

In plain, simple language, provisions of the new law mean, the A. F. of L. says, that employers and employes will be accorded the fullest opportunity to negotiate wage scales and conditions of employment. "In fact," it is added, "a simple, sound interpretation of the act means that the government expects employers and employes to work out wage agreements through collective bargaining."

The A. F. of L. appeal warns the workers against company unions, and urges them to unite in bona fide unions and through such organizations elect men of their own choosing to represent them and secure for them the maximum benefits under the provisions of the recovery act.

In a letter to national and international unions, state federations of labor, city central bodies and organizers, the A. F. of L. urges that the widest possible publicity be given the appeal to unorganized workers. Labor is urged to inaugurate organizing campaigns among the unorganized without a moment's delay.

"Carry the message to the unorganized," the letter says, "pointing out to them that if they are to be the beneficiaries of increases in wages, shorter hours of labor and improved conditions of employment, they must organize and must secure these these benefits through collective bargaining."

The letter says the American Federation of Labor must be the voice of labor and that it is purposed to make special union drives in mass production industries.

The letter and the appeal to the unorganized are signed by President William Green and Secretary Frank Morrison.

St. Louis Adopts Union Scale on Municipal Work

St. Louis, Mo.—The board of aldermen of St. Louis passed an ordinance providing for the payment of the prevailing scale of wages on all city work whether performed by the city as a municipality or let by contract to individuals. The ordinance also provides for the establishment of the eight-hour work day on all public works. Fines of from $50 to $500 are fixed for violation of the ordinance, and each day of violation is declared to be a separate offense.

The measure had the indorsement of organized labor in all its branches. It provides that the prevailing rate of wages shall be based upon the standardization bill fixing the scale of pay for city employes, which has been usually interpreted as being the union scale.

Recovery Act Invoked to Free Hosiery Plants

Strike Call Is Revoked on Pledge of Employers to Cease Coercion Against Organizing.

Philadelphia, June 29.—The first labor crisis under the industrial recovery act has resulted in a pledge to withdraw measures taken by employers to prevent workers from unionising. Because this case was the first in which section 7A of the new law was invoked, it is regarded as of real importance.

An appeal by Secretary of Labor Perkins a general strike of 10,000 workers in forty-eight non-union hosiery mills of Philadelphia, was postponed by the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers which had issued the strike call. The non-union manufacturers agreed to cease active opposition to unionization of their employes.

I understand that Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers' union has called general strike of workers in this industry effective Thursday morning June twenty-second Stop Under administration of federal recovery act negotiations for establishment of minimum wage and maximum hours of work and labor code are now proceeding between the Full Fashioned Hosiery Manufacturers association and the Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers union Stop In public interest and that of both employers and workers it would seem sound policy to suspend this general strike action during the period of these negotiations in the hope that both parties can arrive at amicable settlement of their difficulties Stop I am informed by Dr. Leo Wolman chairman advisory committee of industrial recovery administration that the manufacturers association has agreed in return for this truce to instruct its members to refrain from any measures designed to prevent their workers from joining the union and from taking steps to weaken the organization of labor Stop In view of this understanding I strongly urge upon your organization the withdrawal of your general strike order so that both the union and the manufacturers association may proceed with friendly discussion of their differences.

Following a conference between Smith and Alexander McKeown, president of the Philadelphia branch of the union, the following reply was sent Miss Perkins:

The Philadelphia union has accepted suggestion of Secretary Perkins and is postponing the strike until such time as the code of practice pertaining to labor has been adopted We strongly urge your department to begin an immediate investigation of the comparative conditions which led up to this general strike call Indications already point to the fact that Constantine does not speak for the manufacturers association members Stop We have entered into this truce in good faith and are hoping that the dispute at issue will be an immediate subject for your department

Seattle Opens Complete Union-Made Light Opera

Seattle, Wash.—Seattle's summer season of light opera was opened at the Metropolitan theater with the "Student Prince." Walter Douglas, of the Metropolitan Building company, and his associates organized the opera with union labor in every department. All members of the cast belong to the Actors' Equity, and all members of the operating departments belong to organized labor.

Local union labor is not only employed in the presentation of the shows and the operation of the theater, but the stage settings and other properties are made by local union workers and of local materials.

Organized labor of Seattle is enthusiastic over its union-made summer opera. Over 100 union wage-earners are employed in the venture.

Labor Advisory Board Insists On Collective Bargaining For All Industrial Recovery Codes

Washington, June 29.—The labor advisory board of the national recovery administration at its first meeting reached the definite conclusion that agreements in industry concerning maximum hours, minimum wages and other work conditions should be determined by collective bargaining and that organized labor should be consulted before industry presents proposed agreements to the recovery administration.

The evident intention of certain employers' associations to draw up the fair competition codes prescribed by the national industrial recovery law, including vital questions for the welfare of the workers, without consulting organized labor in the indutry, made it necessary for the labor advisory board to take prompt action.

In addition to Secretary of Labor Perkins, the board includes William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers; John P. Frey, secretary-treasurer of the Metal Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor; Joseph Franklin, president of the International Boilermakers' union; Geo. L. Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' union; Leo Wolman, Columbia university economist; Rose Schneiderman, secretary of the Women's Trade Union league; Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, and Father Francis Haas, of the Catholic Welfare council.

Members of the labor advisory board were said to have registered opposition to the labor provisions of the code submitted by the cotton manufacturers' associations which provided a forty-hour week and a $10 minimum wage for southern mills and $11 for northern factories. An early public hearing by Gen. Johnson's administration was announced for this code.

The bituminous coal code was reported to be blocked by the inability of the operators of different sections to agree on the labor and wage provisions. It was stated that a number of operators had expressed their willingness to adopt a code for higher wages and shorter hours, but that the Pittsburgh Coal company, a Mellon holding, and the Rockefeller-controlled Consolidated Coal company refused to agree to the plan.

If the bituminous operators refuse to file a code within a reasonable time, the law authorizes President Roosevelt to dictate one and compel its acceptance.

The code submitted by the cast iron soil pipe manufacturers representing 95 per cent of the industry proposed a thirty-hour week with a minimum wage of $2.75 a day in southern plants and $4.25 in northern plants.

Public hearings will be held on all the codes by the national recovery administration headed by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson.

WORKERS ADVISED TO MOVE FAST TO RAISE PAY RATES

Philadelphia, Pa., June 29.—Warning that organized labor must move fast to raise wages now in order to obtain high minimum rates under the national recovery act is given by the Hosiery Worker, organ of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers.

"No one knows what minimum wage rates will be set, but there is every reason to believe that the government officials who will make the final recommendations to the president on these questions will not want to set rates very much higher than those now prevailing in industry at large," the Hosiery Worker says.

"Wage rates very generally have now fallen below subsistence levels in most non-union industries. Unless labor revolts at once and refuses to accept wretchedly low rates the government is likely to authorize wage scales only a little above those now being paid. This would be a real calamity both for the workers and the country as a whole.

"The workers must, within the next three months, so effectively demonstrate their determination to organize that the government will have to heed the power of the masses at least as much as it must now heed all the organized influence on the side of capital and privilege."

It costs no more in effort or money to secure UNION GOODS and SERVICE, if you demand and insist on them.

Laborers' Pay Should Be Cut 50%

McDonald is now publishing a weekly "throw-sheet," and employed an out-of-town operator in preference to a Chattanoogan.

McDonald says: "President Hoover made a mistake in 1929 when he asked that wages be maintained. If he had cut wages 50% in 1929 the depression would now be over."

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. WORKERS SHY AT POLICIES OF "HOME STORES"

Corrspondent Finds No Sympathy for Low-Wager.

SAYS THROW-SHEET GOES UNNOTICED

Current Issue Reported to Be Absolutely Without Advertising.

"Everyone with whom I have talked tell me they don't care to spend their wages with a man who thinks wages should be cut. I have yet to hear a friendly word for the policies of McDonald and his 'Home Stores'."

Thus concludes a "human interest" story of a local printer, writing The Labor World this week of his experiences in investigating public reaction to the low-wage, long-hours policies of Roy McDonald, owner of the so-called "Home Stores," dairyman, baker and self-styled individualist.

"It is surprising to note how little attention the public is giving to McDonald's latest business venture," the investigator reports with reference to McDonald's weekly "throw-sheet," which the "Home Stores" owner is operating in connection with his grocery business, dairy, bakery, etc., and which brought forth the now well-known economic philosophy of the business executive.

McDonald, Labor World readers will recall, stated to a committee of working men that President Hoover made a mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from industrial leaders that wages would be maintained as an aid to prosperity. If wages had been cut 50 per cent at that time, he said, we would now be out of the depression. He further said that prosperity will never return until wages are further and further cut.

The grocer-baker-dairyman-publisher also declared that any worker on his pay roll would begin his day's labors at such time as said worker was told to report, and would finish the day by the same kind of an order. He indicated little sympathy for craftsmanship, or for special training of a worker for any particular task, declaring that one who worked for him would perform any task allotted to him by the management.

McDonald sent out of the state to employ an operator for his newspaper plant, ignoring the fact that local printers have been unemployed for the past two years.

An indication of the lack of sympathetic interest shown in the throw-sheet published by McDonald in connection with his various other enterprises is seen in the report, received at presstime, that this week's issue of the publication contains absolutely no advertising with the exception of the "Home Stores."

Editor the Labor World:

It is surprising to note how little attention the public is giving Roy McDonald's latest business venture. Last week I distributed some circulars my union is issuing to acquaint the public of the status of McDonald and his Free Press, and met with a hearty response from everyone.

I must have been several hours behind the Free Press delivery boys, for I found hundreds of copies of the Free Press lying on front porches and scattered over front yards. In many cases people were sitting on their porches and the Free Press was lying there unnoticed, just as the delivery boy had left it.

In one particular case of the paper going unnoticed a man to whom I gave a circular read it partly and asked me "What's this about McDonald and a newspa-

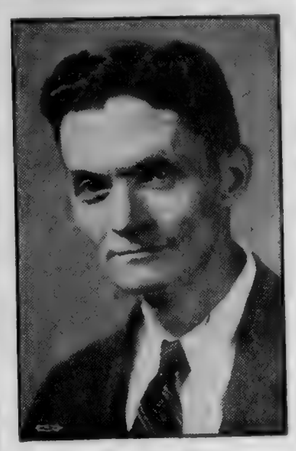
Mr. Secretary



Z. B. BENDER
Named Scribe for Newly-Organized Workers' Organization.

District Body Is Formed for Action On River Program

Delegates From Tennessee Valley Launch Organization for Workers' Rights.

Z. B. Bender, vice-president of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, was chosen secretary of the Tennessee River Valley Trades and Labor association, to be composed of delegates from building and metal trades local unions from the territory embraced in the development program, at the initial meeting of that organization Sunday at Central Labor hall. Stanley Rounds, of Knoxville, was named president.

Purposes of the new organization are set out as follows:

"To take up the question of wage scales, trade and jurisdiction over work and location; legislation, both state and federal, as applied to this work, and, if possible, to establish a uniform wage scale for each craft, on the entire project."

Three divisions were created, to be known as the Chattanooga, Knoxville and Muscle Shoals districts, and it was provided that the general business representative should be chosen from Knoxville, the secretary from Chattanooga, with assistants in each division. The business representative also will have an assistant in each district. A general chairman and vice-chairman are created in the same manner.

Local unions coming under the jurisdiction of the organization are invited to name three delegates as permanent members of the organization, and it is provided that each local so represented will be entitled to one vote.

The next session will be held Sunday, July 16, and all locals who desire to take part in the movement are requested to send delegates with credentials to that meeting, at Central Labor hall, Chattanooga.

The meeting last Sunday was the result of preliminary conferences between labor officials from the various districts affected, and a large number of delegates were present.

'Blue Ribbon' Dealer Signs Union Contract

Blue Ribbon Distributing company, local dealers for the popular Pabst product, Thursday signed an agreement with officials of Local 79, Brewery Workers, and there remain but two other local concerns which have not come to terms with the local union.

R. R. Lee, secretary of Local 79, said Friday morning that officials of the union are confident that the next issue of The Labor World will carry the good news to its readers that Chattanooga is "100 per cent." organized in this industry.

WORKERS FROM BIG INDUSTRIES APPEAL FOR ASSISTANCE IN PREPARING FOR RECOVERY ACT

Local Union Officials Swamped by Calls for Formation of New Unions—Established Units Strengthened—Government Representative Says Legitimate Organizations Cannot Be Forced Out by Company Unions—Entire Section Feels Demand for Unity in Facing "New Deal."

Wave of organization which has engulfed Chattanooga labor for the past two weeks continues unabated, and appeals from workers in all lines of industry, for assistance in joining with the American Federation of Labor, continue to swamp local union officials and workers.

Three separate locals of the United Textile Workers of America are well under way; hundreds of workers in plants notorious for their low-wage policies are being given the protection of organized labor as fast as possible, and practically every craft already organized is being strengthened by the addition of scores of new members.

From surrounding communities, including Cleveland, South Pittsburg and other nearby towns in Tennessee, as well as communities in Georgia and Alabama, urgent appeals have been made for organizers, and these also are being responded to as rapidly as is humanly possible.

All manner of propaganda with reference to the provisions of the national recovery act has been and is being spread by employers of labor, particularly in the textile mills. Workers are being told that if organization is perfected the mills will close down. Alleged advantages of so-called "company unions" are being pointed out to employes by various managements, and the welfare work of various concerns is pointed to as indicating the deep interest of the companies in their employes. From one mill comes a report that a "speed-up" system was abandoned "because the employes objected to it." A worker from this particular mill stated this is the first time on record that the company ever asked or recognized the wishes of its "hired help."

At Cleveland a full-fashioned hosiery mill was virtually closed Thursday when, workers reported, the first signer on a petition for increased pay was discharged. The others walked out, and a charter for a United Textile Workers' affiliate has been sent for.

At Piedmont, Ala., where the Standard-Coosa-Thatcher plant operates a large branch, a strong organization of textile workers has been formed, and the Piedmont Journal, newspaper in that city, is rendering yeoman support to an organization drive directed by W. O. Hare, secretary-treasurer of the Alabama Federation of Labor. The Journal, giving front-page streamer heads to the campaign, has also helped editorially, the latest issue containing the following first-page double-column spread, headed "Break for Working People:"

In the structure of the new industrial recovery bill, the working people are just beginning to realize that their interests have not been overlooked.

It takes two parts to equitably effectuate the welfare of industry, one, the organization of industry, and the other, the organization of the workers.

Neither side should have the advantage of the other. Industry has the right to organize in the interests of the employers, and labor has the right to organize, so that the workers may advance their working interests, in a living wage, better working conditions, and a higher plane of living.

In the new recovery bill cutthroat competition is to end; the employer is to live, and the man or woman that works for a living is also to LIVE.

Mark that!

And it means better times for all. That's the potential purpose of the recovery bill.

It's a new day for the working people, and they should wake up to their opportunity.

President Roosevelt has given a great break to industry, to the railroads, to the banks, to the states, to the municipalities, to all units of the national business, industrial and social set-up.

It also was intended to give a break to the industrial workers.

President Roosevelt says the working people shall have the right to organize, and bargain collectively.

Organization of textiles is receiving the greatest opportunity, and consequently the greatest momentum in its existence. Organization of textile workers will mean for the advancement of better wages, better working conditions, and therefore more efficient operations. That is not all, when the working people advance in earning power, that means an increase in the purchasing power of the nation—the very thing necessary for national recovery, which is the object of the recovery bill.

The Journal heartily indorses the principle of organized labor. We believe it means for better working conditions for the worker, more efficiency in labor, and manifestly increased purchasing power. The worker has the right to organize for the protection and advancement of his own interests.

The mayor of Piedmont, said to be a representative of the Standard-Coosa-Thatcher company, strongly opposed the organization, it is reported, but his efforts proved in vain.

Workers in the Standard-Coosa-Thatcher plants locally, although forced into a vote for a "company union," are rapidly joining with their fellow-workers from other plants in enlisting in an American Federation of Labor organization, convinced that the legitimate union, which has battled ahead in the interest of working people for over a half-century, is the only hope they have to gain full advantage of the United States government's efforts, through the recovery act, to improve the condition of labor by increasing wages and shortening hours, and to stabilize industry by fixing minimum selling prices.

Central Body officials in charge of the general organizing work preferred Friday morning not to publish details of the progress being made, but stated that in due time Labor World readers will be given full information as to results for all crafts.

In the meantime, they issued an appeal to workers in all lines to continue to be patient, and recognize the fact that those who are assisting in the organization work are doing everything possible to cover the territory and care for all applicants in the shortest time.

Mr. T. R. Cuthbert,
Organizer, American Federation of Labor,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dear Mr. Cuthbert:

It is my opinion that if any vote is sponsored by employers of labor in any plant for the purpose of organizing a "company union" or "workers' council" not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and said election is fairly or unfairly carried, that there is nothing in the National Recovery Act to prevent the workers from affiliating themselves with the American Federation of Labor union regardless. The workers could go ahead as if the election had not been held and they may join your organization without fear of discharge or punishment by the employer, and when sufficient numbers have joined with you, recognition of the American Federation of Labor union must naturally follow.

GEO. H. VAN FLEET,
Commissioner of Conciliation.

Henderson-Coleman Dispute Adjusted

"Argument" with Henderson & Coleman, dealers in men's clothing and furnishings at 1000 Market street, has been adjusted by executive board of Central Body, acting with representatives of Local 74, Carpenters.

The controversy arose several weeks ago over employment of non-union craftsmen, and the firm was placed on the "unfair" list after negotiations had failed to smooth out the troubled waters.

However, it was announced at last Central Body meeting that an agreement satisfactory to all parties had been reached, and the firm was again recommended for the patronage of organized labor and its friends.

Henderson & Coleman carry a splendid line of union-labeled men's suits, hats and shoes. It is a locally owned business.

Electrical Workers Call Open Session

E. E. McDaniels, business manager of Local 175, Electrical Workers, announced Friday that officers of that organization are planning an open meeting for Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, at Central Labor hall, for the purpose of discussing the provisions of the national recovery act.

The meeting is to be a get-together, Mr. McDaniels said, to be followed by an organization session on next Saturday, July 15.

Mr. McDaniels stressed the invitation to all electrical workers, union or non-union, including inside workers, linesmen, armature winders, crane operators, switchboard operators, telephone linesmen and workmen, commercial electricians of all types, radio men and operators, maintenance men in factories and office buildings—in fact, any who work at the electrical trade.

Every one who attends, Mr. McDaniels said, will be given full opportunity to discuss the possibilities of the recovery act and to make suggestions for plans to meet the new system insofar as it affects the workers in this industry.

Labor Department Continues Drive On Law Violators

Three More Cited to Court. McAllester Mills and Others Submit, Pay Fines.

Activities of the state labor department in the campaign against local violations of the labor laws were continued this week, when Chief Factory Inspector Wallace and Deputy Miss Mary Slate returned to Chattanooga Wednesday to resume their investigations.

Result of these activities since Wednesday, Mr. Wallace repoted Friday morning, is citations for violations against the Champion Hosiery Mills, White Swan Laundry and Chattanooga Dry Cleaning company. Others, Mr. Wallace said, will follow shortly, and the campaign will not end as long as violations can be found.

Net result of last week's activities, Mr. Wallace said, was submission by five firms, as follows: McAllester Hosiery Mills pleaded guilty in six cases, three at the McAllester Mills and three at the Southern Hosiery Mills, an affiliated institution; Browning Hosiery Mills, Turner Manufacturing company and Nu-Way lunch room. The McAllester Mills, Wallace said, were fined $25 and costs in one case for each of the two mills, and were allowed to pay the costs in the other four cases.

Cases against the three latest alleged violators will be heard before 'Squire Rice Friday afternoon, he said.

Commissioner of Labor W. E. Jacobs, who visited Chattanooga Saturday in connection with the campaign, told The Labor World that his intention is to stop all labor law violations, and that the campaign will be prosecuted without fear or favor. He invited "tips" from any source, and promised a thorough checking up on all rumored violations.

Chief Wallace said Friday morning he did not know how long he and Miss Slate will remain in the city, but stressed that his department will remain available at all times for the enforcement of all laws on the statute books which his department is charged with enforcing.

Says Lively Did Not Refuse Co-Operation

Editor The Labor World:

In your issue of last week the attorney-general was done an injustice, unintentional I am sure. Quoting Chief Factory Inspector Wallace, the article said:

"Co-operation of the attorney-general's office has been freely given in other localities, Mr. Wallace said, but efforts to secure assistance of Gen. Lively's office in the prosecutions scheduled Friday morning were met with the statement that the force was too busy."

Now, the facts are that President E. W. Beddow, of Lodge 56, and my-

TEACHERS SET FOR LEADERSHIP IN COMMUNITY

Ready to Assume Rightful Place, Says Smith.

HOLDS LEADERSHIP IS GREATEST NEED

Delegate From Local 246 Offers Impressions of National Convention.

Stanton E. Smith, president of Local 246, American Federation of Teachers, a delegate from the Chattanooga-Hamilton county local to the national convention at Milwaukee, returned, with Mrs. Smith, Sunday.

The local union official was loud in his praises of the splendid manner in which the convention was conducted, and at the solicitation of the editor of The Labor World, prepared the following interesting report of the sessions:

By STANTON E. SMITH

The seventeenth annual coenvntion of the American Federation of Teachers was the largest in the history of the organization. It furnished ample evidence of the courage and ability of the teachers of the nation to rise under hardships and the severe trials of a major economic catastrophe to the task of keeping the school doors open and the educational processes on which America is being built, functioning. But further than this it showed that the teachers of the United States are at last ready to come out of the cloistered security of the class room and to assume the rightful place of leadership in our community, state and national life for which their training has fitted them. If there are any not yet awake to their responsibility as citizens, and if there are any who have not informed themselves about the basic economic, political and social structures of which our society is built, then now is the time for such action. The need is for teachers who are teachers in the truest sense of informed, enlightened leaders. The profession has no room now for any others.

It was our pleasure as delegates to this convention to listen to several very splendid addresses by outstanding educators and others, the whole sum and substance of whose lectures might be summarized as in the above paragraph.

The Hon. Dan Hoan, socialist mayor of Milwaukee for the past 17 or 18 years, made what was intended as an address of welcome, but which by chance struck the very keynote of the entire convention. His plea was for the educators to strip away the blindfold from their eyes and with their trained intelligences to examine the reasons why economic dislocations such as we now behold can come to pass. He characterized as the tragedy of the ages that after a struggle since the beginning of mankind to produce enough for all to enjoy in plenty and having now arrived at that point by the help of machinery and science, the only solution to the maldistribution of goods which our traditional leadership can devise is to reestablish scarcity of goods so that the outworn economic laws can operate again. He laid squarely at the feet of teachers the task of informing themselves about the new order of economic well being and in turn teaching its implication so that we may at least seize the prize of plenty for which mankind has struggled since the beginning of existence.

The convention was further addressed by Professor Harold M. Groves, Local 223, of the Department of Economics, University of Wisconsin; Dr. John A. Lapp, Local 79, Director of the National Rehabilitation Association and secretary of the Citizens' Conference on Vocational Education, and the Problems of Reconstruction; Hon. Barrett O'Hara, former lieutenant-governor of Illinois; Professor Selig Perlman, Local 223, Department of Economics of the University of Wisconsin, and Henry Ohl, Jr., president of the Wisconsin State

Ice-vending machines are in successful operation in Pacific coast cities. A customer places 15 cents in a slot, turns a small handle and a 25-pound cake of ice wrapped in waxed manilla paper is delivered to him. Taylor Heads Washington State Labor Federation

Seattle, Wash.—James A. Taylor was unanimously re-elected president of the Washington State Federation of Labor for the years 1933-35 inclusive in a referendum vote of the membership. This is Mr. Taylor's fourth consecutive term.

Lady Took Cardui And Got Rid of Pain In Her Side

"Last summer, my health was bad, so I began taking Cardui," writes Mrs. H. E. Slaughter, of Norman, Okla. "My mother had given me Cardui in girlhood, so naturally I turned to it when I felt I needed it. I felt run-down and a general weakness. I had bad, dizzy headaches when everything would seem to dance before my eyes. My right side pained me so much, but since taking Cardui the pain has left me. I have taken several bottles of Cardui and have improved a great deal."

Cardui is sold at drug stores here.

The Mill Begins to Grind

Take this tip—the recovery act is grinding, grinding hard, and it contains more pitfalls than a regiment could watch. There is for labor just one adequate protection—UNIONS—GREAT BIG UNIONS—UNIONS THAT ARE ABLE TO TAKE CARE OF THEMSELVES.

Here is cause for battle and cause for concern: Big companies—Carnegie Steel, Humble Oil and others—are rushing company unions into existence. The law is clear, but these corporations hope to beat the law. The one object in doing that is to beat labor. The one way to beat that game is to get unions into the field strong enough to BEAT THE PLOT.

Of course, a test will come before the recovery act administration—probably before the president himself. But the employers will leave no trick unplayed to build up legal defenses.

The only real reliance for fairness is in UNIONS. Every trade union officer and member ought to be getting new members, and forming new unions.

The national industrial recovery act can and evidently will bring order out of chaos. If it doesn't work, then who knows what will come next? Nobody. And that employers, after the greed they have shown, the wreckage they have caused, the dirty mess they have made, should try at the outset to sabotage the new law in one of its most important provisions, is a sign that THERE MUST BE STERN MEASURES AND STRONG UNIONS.

Already we get something of the drift of the recovery act. Already we see how the good work can come and how some of the tricks can be played. It is so tremendous and so new that to see into every corner and behind every door is impossible. A strong labor movement can block any tricks. That's the one real instrument for protection in this new world.

There is an elaborate machinery in process of creation. There are several advisory committees. Nobody yet knows how much of their advice—if any—will be accepted.

Every kind of possibility is in the offing. BUILD UNIONS. That is not a matter that can wait. THIS IS A MATTER FOR TODAY.

ORGANIZE UNIONS AND DO IT AS IF YOUR LIFE DEPENDED UPON YOUR SPEED AND SUCCESS.

"Stretch-Out" System Under Fire

Organized labor commends Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, national industrial recovery administrator, for his action in appointing a committee to investigate the stretch-out system in cotton mills for the purpose of determining whether, in t he interest of work for the jobless, a curb on the system should be placed in the fair competition code for the cotton textile industry.

The stretch-out system is a plan whereby textile employers compel mill workers to operate a larger and larger number of looms.

The matter was brought to the attention of Gen. Johnson by Senator Byrnes, of North Carolina, during the hearings on the fair competition code for the cotton textile industry prepared by the cotton manufacturers. Senator Byrnes said that unless the code contained restrictions on the number of looms per weaver he felt that many mills would defeat the real intent of the industrial recovery act, which is to increase employment. He cited one mill where seventy persons were employed in the card room in 1929, while in 1933 the same machinery is operated by forty-five employes.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, approved the appointment of the committee. He said:

> "There is great danger that mills will increase the number of machines tended by one worker and thus defeat the purpose of the recovery act. The stretch-out system, even before the depression, was bitterly resented by the workers. We had strike after strike because of it.
> "We have authentic information that in 1928 in one southern mill workers were stretched out from thirty looms and in 1929 from forty looms to forty-eight looms. In another mill weavers were stretched out from forty-eight to ninety-six looms. * * * There is no question that increasing the machine load is a grave danger to the purpose we are all trying to accomplish."

Gen. Johnson appointed the following committee to investigate the system and make a report to him by July 15: Robert W. Bruere, of the bureau of industrial research; George L. Berry, of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America and a member of the labor advisory board to the industrial recovery administration, and George S. Harris, of Charlotte, N. C., representing the cotton textile employers.

Child Labor in Cotton Industry

One of organized labor's major policies for the protection of children was realized when the cotton manufacturers consented to include a ban on the employment of children under 16 in the fair competition code for the cotton goods industry under consideration by the national industrial recovery administration.

The first convention of the American Federation of Labor, held in 1881, condemned child labor with the following declaration:

> "We are in favor of the passage of laws in the several states forbidding the employment of children under the age of 14 in any capacity under penalty of fine and imprisonment."

From 1881 to the present the federation has fought for the abolition of child labor in every possible way. It has insisted that children should be in the school or playground and not in the factory. It has used its influence to secure the enactment of many state child labor laws. It vigorously supported the two federal laws barring the products of child labor from interstate commerce. It has persistently recommended the adoption of the federal child labor amendment conferring upon congress the power to limit; regulate and prohibit the labor of persons under 18 years of age.

The American Federation of Labor believes that child labor should be prohibited in every industry and will endeavor to have the child labor ban written into the cotton goods industry code included in all other fair competition codes which come before the national industrial recovery administration.

Watch the Thirty-Hour Week

Workers throughout the United States should carefully watch the administration by the various states of the $400,000,000 which has been allotted by Col. Donald Sawyer, public works administrator, to state authorities for public roads construction.

The thirty-hour week is mandatory "so far as practicable and feasible." The maximum of human labor must be employed in lieu of machinery "where consistent with sound economy." Minimum wage rates sufficient "to provide a standard of living in decency and comfort" must be paid.

All of these requirements are capable of being interpreted and applied against the workers by administrators and contractors hostile to the spirit of the law. Close watching by the workers will prevent this and secure for them their full rights in the expenditure of the huge $400,000,000 fund.

"Sound Your A"

Which, Interpreted, Means Here's the Latest Dope on the Musicians

By GEORGE RODGERS

Delegates to the convention of the American Federation of Musicians held in Chicago recently were entertained royally. As a courtesy to the delegates practically every name band in Chicago not only performed, but brought their floor shows along. The delegates were entertained by such bands as Ben Bernie, Buddy Rogers, Tom Gerrin, Louie Panico, Hal Kemp, Maurie Sherman, Guy Lombardo, Ted Lewis and others. The Chicago Symphony consisting of seventy-five men also gave an hour's concert under the direction of Eric Delemarter, assistant conductor.

Many constructive laws were passed. Every member should attend the special meeting Sunday and let Lester Cohn, our delegate, tell you all about it. The laws are of vital interest to every member of our organization. Brother Cohn reorts he saw Howard Fraser, pianist, a former member of our local, now musical director of a radio station in Montgomery, Ala. He also met our friends, Ted Wheeler and Don Pedro, whom we knew under the name of Pedro Avelar.

Brother Cohn also reports that Vice-President Bagley and Executive Officer Weaver will stop off in Chattanooga on their way to the American Federation of Labor convention to be held in Washington some time in October. Plans will be made to entertain these distinguished gentlemen.

By all means, come to the meeting Sunday.

It won't be long before there will be a working tax imposed on the members of our local. See if I am not right. . . The boys at Signal Mountain club have finally got their ducks in a row and are clicking nicely. . . Orchestras continue to remain at Lofton's, S & W and Gipsy Inn. . . Nice business was done over the Fourth by places employing union bands. . . Herman Dodd has a fiddle. . . Banjo players beware. . . Neal Peake, a new member, is developing into a splendid trombone player. . . The Musicians intend to back the other crafts to the limit. . . George Van Arsdale plays golf in the low 80s. . . Oh yeah. . . I have seen more optimism displayed by the musicians lately than ever before. . . They say this Charlie Moore fellow can take off on a piano. . . See you at the meeting Sunday.

MacDonald Backs $20,000,000 Jobless Relief Bond Issue

Sacramento, Cal.—Frank C. MacDonald, state labor commissioner, issued a statement urging the citizens to adopt the amendment to the state constitution authorizing the issuance of $20,000,000 unemployment relief bonds. The proposition comes before the voters at a special election.

The bond issue carries the recommendation of the state unemployment commission. If the bond issue is approved, state authorities will distribute the proceeds to municipalities during the next two years to assist them in caring for the jobless.

The bond issue is also indorsed by the California State Federation of Labor.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

...covery Head Concentrates On Making Jobs, Raising Pay

...toration of Unemployment and Increase in Buying Power Sought Before All Else—Failure to Deal With Foreign Competition and Higher Output May Menace Program

...shington, July 6.—The Roose... administration has only two ob...ves in promulgating codes of ... competition, under the national ...strial recovery act, at least for ...present, and these are to restore ...loyment and raise the buying and ...suming power of industrial work... to a higher level. These are the ...ends toward which Gen. Johnson ...working, and the yardsticks that ...being applied to each proposed ... Every factor that does not bear ...tly upon them in the study and ...roval of codes is being swept ...

This condensed and restricted pro... furnishes the explanation why ... things that seems vitally im...ant to employers and employes, ... a far-reaching bearing upon ...ure trends, are being left un...hed in both the provisions of ... and the facts that are devel...d in hearings from witnesses and ...rts. The administration does not ...t industrial control to extend be...d attaining these ends, and is ...ting upon gradual economic re...ery to enable it to stay within ... confines.

There is no reason to believe, how..., that in dealing with other in...tries, Gen. Johnson will be able to ...trict himself to the narrow limits ... the hearings upon the proposed ...on textile code, and to refrain ... entering into consideration of ...ters that bear directly upon price ... in the consuming field and to ...vent a general application of the ...tretch-out" system in industries as ...sult of higher levels of minimum ...es.

Some Pressing Problems.

Questions of foreign competition ... adequate tariff protection against ...ndations of cheaply made products ... other countries are pressing for ...e decision. If importations of ...ap products should rapidly in...se under the operations of the ...posed codes, the administration ...uld be confronted with a tariff ...blem that would thrust the suc... of its whole program of indus...l stabilization into the balance. It is admitted that the protection afforded today against the products of countries with greatly depreciated currencies is wholly inadequate, and that a rising level of commodity prices in this country would invite still larger consignments from such countries.

Still a further question that must be met if the stabilization program is successful is that of restrictions upon plant expansions and the installment of additional productive machinery. Under the old order of supply and demand the rule of practice was that a factory owner might install as much additional machinery as he wanted on the theory that the additional output would be sold in foreign trade.

Foreign Trade Vanishes.

But foreign trade today has been reduced almost to the vanishing point, and one of the difficulties of the depression has been that for years such mills have not been able to dispose of their added outputs to foreign countries and they have piled up in the form of huge surpluses of unsold and unconsumed goods in this country.

Under the Johnson scheme of control, the incentive to install additional machinery, and to use the "stretch-out" system among employes, becomes as great as at any time in the past. These leaks can conceivably defeat the whole program, and bring about a more difficult condition than the one existing now.

The cotton textile industry has voluntarily agreed to refrain from increasing the productive equipment of plants and factories except when certificates from an economic planning committee within the industry have been granted to do so. This arrangement would not interfere with the installation of replacement machinery, or with additional equipment to "balance" a mill or factory.

Many Mills Out of Balance.

However, many mills today are admittedly out of balance, and whether this element of control is to work solely by enlargements and additions, or is to involve the abandonment and scrapping of surplus mechanical units, is something that has not been made clear.

The Roosevelt administration in passing upon codes is seeking merely to eliminate practices that have led to excessive production, long hours, and the sale of outputs at "cut-throat" prices. These evils are pivoted chiefly upon hours of work and minimum wages paid. Neither Gen. Johnson nor the Roosevelt administration wants to go into any phase of public price fixing unless "run-away" prices should force them into this field.

There is tacit admission that the administration hopes that gradual recovery in industrial and business conditions during the summer and fall will offset the need for the use of more drastic methods, and that through a general condition of self-government established in industry, it will be possible to relax some of the functions which have already been assumed by the Johnson bureau.

More Mills Shut As Big Reading Strike Spreads

Workers in Three Plants Quit While Drive to Organize Workers in Hosiery and Sweatshop Garment Shops Is Pushed.

Reading, Pa., July 6.—The Reading hosiery workers' strike spread with walkouts taking place in three additional mills as unionized workers demanded the right to be represented by officials of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers. The Womelsdorf plant of the Nolde and Horst company and the E. Richard Meinig Knitting mill were crippled by walkouts. The D. S. and W. mill was closed down entirely.

The number now out probably amounts to 3,500 workers, according to estimates by Edward F. Gallahan, strike leader. A general shut-down of all hosiery plants in Reading is seen as a possibility.

An effort by the management to establish a company union in the Nolde and Horst mill, second largest in the industry, proved a boomerang to the company according to a statement issued from strike headquarters. "The workers called into the office of the mill by plant officials and an effort was made to induce them to join an organization which would be under the domination of the mill executives. The workers broke up the meeting after some little discussion and trooped to a strike meeting nearby and several hundreds made application to join the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers," the statement read.

Hugh Glover, representative of the United Hatters of North America, and Carl Holderman, of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, joined the force of labor organizers who are directing the hosiery strikes and the simultaneous drive to organize sweatshops in the clothing trades here.

Receivers For Operators' Union Denied Salary

New York, July 6.—Tough sledding, but receivers appointed last winter for Local 306 of the Moving Picture Machine Operators' union have "worked several months for nothing," the appellate court rules. Not only are Messrs. Rosenbaum, Alger and Dunn denied the $7,500 allowance made them by Supreme Court Justice Levy, but they must dig into their own jeans for $809 expenses they ran up during their illegal tenure of office.

Sadder still, if that may be, their attorneys, after fighting the case through three trials, must go without their $3,000 counsel fees. The receivers originally were appointed by Supreme Court Justice Cotillo, over the protest of union officials.

International President William C. Elliott, through Attorneys Rubien & Brigoff, fought the union case through to its successful conclusion.

Gov. Ferguson Vetoes Convict Printing Bill

Galveston, Tex.—Gov. Miriam Ferguson vetoed the bill which provided that the state board of control could contract with the prison board to have the state printing done in the Huntsville penitentiary.

Organized labor fought the bill throughout the entire session of the legislature, but the reactionary interests persisted in jamming it through both houses. Labor circles believed the measure was the forerunner of others to bring about complete industrialization of the prison system.

Last year the board of control arbitrarily attempted to have state printing done at the penitentiary, but were halted by an injunction secured by the Texas State Allied Printing Trades council.

Gov. Ferguson based her veto on Section 21 of Article XVI of the state constitution, which provides that state printing, with a few minor exceptions, shall be done under contract given to the lowest responsible bidder. She said the constitution could not be repealed by legislative fiat.

Long Beach Rig Builders Win Three Weeks' Strike

Long Beach, Cal.—The three weeks' strike of the Rig Builders against the McCloud Construction company was adjusted by an arbitration committee headed by James C. Coulter, financial secretary of Local Union No. 128 of the Oil Workers. The company agreed to the strikers' requirements, including wages, hours, work conditions and the payment of overtime and transportation.

30-Hour Week and Minimum Wage Prescribed for $400,000,000 Road Fund

Washington.—Colonel Donald Sawyer, public works administrator, announced the allotment of $400,000,000 in federal public road funds to the states and territories under the procovery law.

Labor Regulations.

The rules and regulations covering the use of the funds include the following provisions:

A maximum thirty-hour week must be observed "so far as practicable and feasible."

No convict labor shall be employed.

The maximum of human labor must be used in lieu of machinery "where consistent with sound economy."

Contracts must prescribe minimum wage rates, which must be sufficient to provide "a standard of living in decency and comfort."

Labor preference must be given (a) to ex-service men with dependents; (b) to bona fide residents of the local sub-division where the work is being done; and (c) to bona fide residents of the state.

Fair Competition Codes.

Preference in purchasing materials must be given to materials produced under fair competition codes approved by the Industrial Recovery administration.

The right is reserved to require construction of roads desired by the federal coordinator of transportation to replace branch-line railroad service suspended by the coordinator.

LOW WAGES AND LONG HOURS IN DALLAS GARMENT PLANTS

Dallas, Texas.—August Schultz, secretary of the Dallas Central Labor council, declared that shocking conditions of work and wages in Dallas garment factories had been revealed by an investigation made by State Labor Commissioner Jack Flynn.

"Affidavits taken by the state labor department," Mr. Schultz said, "show that the maximum hour law is being violated generally and that many factories work women and children ten, twelve, and fifteen hours a day."

"The average weekly wage paid in these sweatshops is about $1.10, and the highest wage the labor deputies found in any factory was $5.60 a week."

Machinists Boost Membership Rolls At Open Meeting

Workers Rush to Secure Protection of Organized Labor in "New Deal."

An overflow crowd answered a published call for meeting of all machinists at Central Labor hall Wednesday night, and so many applications were received that combined efforts of committee members and officials of the two local lodges were found to be inadequate in enrolling the new members. After more than a score had been received, others were given the blanks with instructions to fill out and return to the next regular meeting of Lodge 56 next Tuesday night.

Further, it was provided that another open meeting be held next Wednesday night, July 12, and all local machinists, union or non-union, are urged to be present and further plan for the operation of the national recovery act.

The present campaign, it was announced, is a joint affair, Lodge 1450 co-operating with Lodge 56 in preparing for the new conditions which will come from the federal act. Committee in charge of the movement is composed of the following: From Lodge 56, William Barney, Hugh Cauble, E. W. Beddow, Dave Sivley, W. F. Lange and Anton Buol; from Lodge 1450, W. M. Carlisle, D. L. Kennedy and Tom F. Hall.

The mass meeting Wednesday night was addressed by Paul J. Aymon, Matt J. Robinson, Tom F. Hall and Mr. Fowler, of the conductors. Interesting and effective talks were made by each of the speakers.

It is promised that more speakers will be available for the second big open meeting next Wednesday night, and officials of the two lodges predicted that another overflow crowd will be present on that occasion.

Daugherty Honored By Postal Clerks

J. H. Daugherty, of the Chattanooga postoffice, was named vice-president of the Tennessee State Federation of Postoffice Clerks in the election of officers at the concluding session of the twelfth annual convention of that body at Nashville Tuesday. Chattanooga was selected for the convention city next year. A. A. Utley, of Memphis, was named president, and E. R. Hatcher, of Nashville, was re-elected secretary-treasurer. John Anderson, prominent in state labor affairs for many years, was the victor in a contest with the outgoing president, Sam Matlock, of Knoxville, for delegate to the national convention at Chicago in September.

Ladies' auxiliary of the Clerks' Federation held its annual sessions at the same time, and a joint banquet was given Monday night at the Andrew Jackson hotel.

Some eight or ten members of the local branch and representatives of the auxiliary attended the sessions.

Prevailing Wages Are Provided For On County Works

Court Passes Resolution Protecting Pay and Working Hours for Employes.

Prevailing wages must be paid for all labor performed on public works in Hamilton county in future, a resolution providing for such having been passed by the county court in quarterly session Tuesday. The resolution, backed by a large delegation of local trades unionists, was passed without a dissenting vote.

Local labor men have for years, and particularly during the past few months, when the United States government has set the example, urged that rates of pay for public activities should not be lower than those maintained by private interests, and the action of county court Tuesday will be gratifying to the workers, as well as to all fair-minded citizens, backers of the measure said.

The maximum number of hours per day or week will also be stipulated in future contracts let by and for the county of Hamilton, and violation of either the pay rates or length of hours by any contractor is made punishable by concellation of the contract.

The resolution, which it is understood has been passed on and given a "clean bill" by County Attorney Carter Lynch, is as follows:

Be it Resolved by the county court of Hamilton county, Tennessee, in regular session, that hereafter all work done on public works by wage-earners shall provide for working conditions and a wage scale according to the prevailing conditions of each craft or kind of labor employed. Be it further

Resolved, That before bids are submitted on work to be contracted for, the county court shall inform said bidders what the prevailing wage scale or rate is, and said wage scale or rate shall be based according to the prevailing rate of pay in Hamilton county with the maximum number of hours per day or week. Be it further per?" I pointed to a copy of the Free Press there on his porch just as the delivery boy had left it, and said "There's a copy of his paper. He thinks Mr. Hoover made a mistake in not ordering all wages cut fifty per cent in 1929."

Resolved, That any violation of this provision by contractor shall be cause for cancellation of the contract.

Another man, after reading the circular, asked me if McDonald really wanted to cut wages fifty per cent. I told him what Roy McDonald told our committee and the Central Body committee when they called on him, about cutting wages to end the depression. This man then told me that he has a small restaurant and had been spending twelve to fifteen dollars a week with the Home Stores, but that now that he knows what McDonald thinks about wages he sure wouldn't spend any more money with the Home Stores.

Everyone with whom I have talked tells me they don't care to spend their wages with a man who thinks their wages should be cut. I have yet to hear a friendly word for the policies of McDonald and his Home Stores.

"I have used Thedford's Black-Draught for constipation for a long time, and find it gives relief for this trouble," writes Mrs. Frank Champion, of Wynne, Ark. Federation of Labor, and others. All of these men delivered excellent, thought-provoking and enlightening speeches, but a report of them would be too long for present purposes.

The address of Professor Selig Perlman on "The Philosophy of the Labor Movement" I do wish to say a few words about, as it is of special interest to all branches of the labor movement. Briefly, it contained an elaboration of the following outline.

Our economic thought in the United States has passed through two stages and is now entering a third. The first was the period of uncontrolled economic conquest best characterized by the phrase "rugged individualism" and manifesting itself in enormous expansion and development with large monopolies such as Standard Oil and others springing up. This was followed by a second period of middle class reforms in which we find the establishment of legislative restrictions on monopolies and other business, such as the Sherman anti-trust law, etc. These two periods were both based on a fundamental assumption of abundance of opportunity for all and therefore of little need for the restriction of individual activities in the economic field. We are now entering the third period, the philosophy of which is based on an entirely different basis, that of scarcity of opportunity (not scarcity of goods), hence a necessity for shortening the working periods, planning production, and in other ways placing restrictions on the economic activities of individuals so that all may share in the products which are essential to life and happiness. This period, the characteristics of which I have only touched on, Professor Perlman hails as the triumph of the labor philosophy.

In conclusion I might say that to me the most interesting parts of the convention were the work in committee and the reports on the floor of the convention. It was distinctly a working convention in which all delegates were kept busy. Indeed, the pressure of current events on public education makes it imperative that teachers assure a larger and larger place in determining the direction in which our democracy is to go, and this of course means busy days for all of us.

self, acting as an official committee from that union, called on the attorney-general, in company with Chief Wallace, for the purpose of soliciting his assistance in prosecuting the cases against various local concerns charged with violating the labor laws.

General Lively was very courteous, and stated to us that, although he was too busy himself, both criminal courts being in session, he would be glad to deputize someone to act in his place. He said, however, that Chief Wallace had power of attorney, and if he chose he could prosecute the cases himself, and if and when such cases came to the criminal courts he himself (Gen. Lively) would give 100 per cent co-operation.

I believe this statement is due in justice to the attorney-general, and we would appreciate your publishing it in the next issue of The Labor World.

WORKERS RUSH FOR PROTECTION TO TRADE UNION

Wave of Organization Remains Unchecked.

MANY NEW LOCALS ARE IN THE MAKING

Old Estblished Unions in Some Cases Double Membership.

Never since the days immediately preceding the World war has there been so much activity among working people of Chattanooga as has been noted during the past two or three weeks. From almost every known trade and calling have come appeals for assistance in organizing in an effort to meet conditions which will prevail under the new national recovery act, and local trade union officials and workers are "burning the midnight oil" in helping to co-ordinate the unorganized forces and place the applicants in the proper group and classification under the banner of the American Federation of Labor.

While in point of numbers the textile workers naturally lead, many other lines are practically 100 per cent. organized, and there remains the task of perfecting the new units and working them into business-like shape.

The full-fashioned hosiery workers are almost all enrolled, and textile workers in the miscellaneous branches are joining by the scores. In every section of the city and county group meetings are being held daily, the gatherings being set for various hours of the day from 10 a.m. until late in the evening. Opposition to the organization, which was strong in the beginning, has gradually dwindled, and with a few notable exceptions little trouble is now being encountered in the organization work from employers. Many have seen the futility of attempting to "bunk" their employes with the discredited "company union" scheme, and apparently have decided to bow to the inevitable.

At the Debonair mills, Cleveland, one of the Bryan units, a strike of workers is still on, and the protesting employes are remaining firm in their determination to secure a "fair deal" before they return to their jobs. It was said this week that the management of this mill advertised in Chattanooga and Nashville papers for strikebreakers, neglecting, however, to mention the fact that a strike exists. On Tuesday, the story goes, some twenty-eight victims of the advertisement came from Nashville and went to work in the mill, but upon learning, an hour or so later, that the strike existed, they walked out in a body.

Other new unions organized, nearly every one of which includes all workers in the respective crafts, are paper makers, cement workers, box makers, furniture workers, bakers, enamel workers and others.

Old established crafts are doubling and tripling their memberships, notable among those showing remarkable increases in membership being the molders, boilermakers, electricians, machinists, painters, carpenters and others.

Angel of Death Takes Toll From Union Families

Central Body Offers Condolences to Survivors of Harry Schrock and Martha Ball.

The hand of death was laid heavily upon the families of two local trades unionists during the past week, little Martha Lillian Ball, ten-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Ball, surrendering to the Grim Reaper last Friday morning at the home of her parents, 415 High street, and Harry Schrock, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., being the victim of a most peculiar accident Thursday, from which he succumbed at a local hospital Friday.

Mr. Schrock, a son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Schrock, was attempting to instill the idea of courage into one of his young charges when a rope which he had tied about his neck became taut and he was strangled.

Mr. Ball is an active member of Local 415, Journeyman Barbers, while Mr. J. G. Schrock is treasurer of Local 226, Painters.

Central Body, at its regular meeting Monday night, appointed committees on resolutions, which drew up the following:

Whereas, a Divine Providence on last Friday took from the home of one of our respected brothers, J. S. Ball, the 10-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ball, Martha Lillian; therefore be it

Resolved, That our sincerest sympathies are extended to Brother Ball and the other surviving relatives in their great loss; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be furnished the family, placed upon our minutes, and sent The Labor World for publication.

M. H. ORTWEIN,
J. L. CARPENTER,
W. L. GARDNER,
Committee.

Whereas, on Thursday, July 6, Mr. Harry Schrock, boys' director at the Y. M. C. A., was the victim of an unusual tragic accident which resulted in his passing on Friday; and

Whereas, Mr. Schrock was an outstanding citizen, interested in the welfare of our city's boys and giving freely of his talents that the youth of the community might be benefited morally and physically; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we deplore the sudden taking away of this good citizen, and mourn with his parents and other surviving relatives in their sudden shock and loss of a splendid son; be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be furnished Brother J. G. Schrock and family; spread upon our minutes and sent The Labor World for publication.

FRANK DUGGER,
GEORGE FORBES,
R. M. COOKE,
Committee.

Local 226, Painters, at the regular meeting Thursday night, appointed a committee which drafted the following resolutions on the death of Mr. Schrock:

Whereas, Harry Schrock, son of our brother and fellow-worker, J. G. Schrock, was the victim on last Thursday of a tragic accident which resulted in his death; and

Whereas, Mr. Schrock had gained a wide reputation for his unselfish devotion to the training of boys through his work as boys' director of the Y. M. C. A.; and

Whereas, Mr. Schrock, Sr., has been a loyal and devoted member and officer of this local union for many years; therefore, be it

Resolved, That Local 226, in regular session, extend to Mr. and Mrs. Schrock our heartfelt sympathy in their bereavement, and that this resolution be communicated to them and furnished The Labor World for publication.

UNIONS OPPOSE BOSSES' CODES FOR BUILDERS

Executives Plan Fight on Association Plans.

OFFER TO CONFER WITH EMPLOYERS

Hours and Wages Offered Not in Accord With Spirit of the Law.

Washington, July 13.—Wage and hour provisions in codes proposed by building trades employers' associations under the national industrial recovery act were opposed at a meeting of presidents of all the building trades unions, held this week in Washington at the call of the Building Trades Department, American Federation of Labor.

Information in regard to the proposed codes of the Associated Contractors and other employers' organizations were placed before the meeting, which expressed opposition to provisions of the codes. Hours provisions were criticized as not being in accord with the 30-hour week advocated by organized labor. Exception was also taken to provisions for a minimum wage, which the building trades unions oppose.

The meeting expressed the willingness of the building trades unions to confer with the employers' associations in an endeavor to obtain changes in the proposed codes to meet with the approval of the workers. If no agreement can be made with the employers, it was decided to fight the codes when hearings on them are held by the recovery administration.

The meeting was a 100 per cent gathering, every building trades union being represented, in most cases by its president.

Electricians Have Overflow Crowd

An overflow crowd is reported to have accepted the invitation of Local 175, Electrical Workers, to meet at Central Labor hall last Wednesday night and discuss the terms of the national recovery act as they apply to workers engaged in the various branches of that trade. It was said representatives from practically every branch were present, and evidenced a keen interest in the welfare of the industry under the "new deal."

So much interest was shown, in fact, that another open meeting has been scheduled, notice for which will be given in the daily papers.

Painters to Hold An Open Meeting

Officers of Local 226, Painters, announce an open meeting at Central Labor hall next Thursday night for all workers engaged in this business, including painters, decorators, paperhangers, signwriters, glaziers, furniture finishers and all other craftsmen engaged in applying or removing paints. A speaker will be provided for the occasion, and matters pertaining to the trade will be discussed.

Refreshments will be served.

Welwood Silk Mill Gives Strikers Wage Increase

Crossville, Tenn.—The employes of the Welwood Silk mill here won their strike for fair treatment and a wage increase. The mill boss phrased the pay boost to take place when business conditions permit it, but employes returned to their jobs despite the vagueness of the promise. The temper of the employes is so resentful over their low pay that unless the increase is granted very soon there will be another walkout. The mill management knows this, and the boost will not be very long delayed.

A. F. of L. Union Membership Climbs At a Rapid Rate

Workers Seek Organization Protection as Federation Plans Fight for Fair Codes Under Recovery Act.

Washington, July 13.—Membership in A. F. of L. affiliated unions continues to climb at a remarkable rate.

Secretary Frank Morrison is issuing figures, making no predictions. But his office is in a fever of activity.

Requests for organizing literature come each day from all sections of the country and are filled as fast as possible.

Meanwhile the federation watches unemployment reports, hoping the trend toward re-employment will continue.

Expectations are the membership growth, somewhat reminiscent of wartime, will find expression in larger delegations to the coming convention.

Backing up its membership, the federation is planning appearances in more hearings under the national industrial recovery act, expecting some bitter battles against imposition of unfair terms as to wages and hours.

Close study is being given the textile code, which exempts a great number of mill employes from its terms, and an appeal may be filed with Gen. Johnson, administrator, asking amendment of the code.

Steel, lumber, oil, printing, garment and other big industry codes are being watched for as likely to shape the picture of America's living standards.

"Hold-Outs" Face Decisive Action By Administration

Cotton Textile Code, Marking Big Progress in Backward Industry, Only Code Adopted to Date.

Washington, July 13.—On the heels of presidential approval of the cotton textile code as first in line, comes the news that a tremendous campaign is about to begin to force hold-out industries to come in under the tent with codes of fair practice.

The administration has been more worried than it has cared to show over the failure of such industries as steel, oil and automobiles, to produce codes. Reports of "progress" are definitely known to constitute stalling tactics.

The National Association of Manufacturers has largely inspired the hold-out tactics. It has spread the alarm of unionism, holding before its membership the bogey story that under codes their plants would have to face unionization.

War Expected Soon.

The administration is set to begin war on these "big fellows" and the opening gun may be expected at any moment.

The cotton textile code was signed and sent forth amid a fanfare of statements in praise of the industry and of those who partook in the job of making the code. It registers tremendous advance for that hitherto cut-throat, low-wage industry. In many mill towns a new kind of life and a new kind of freedom will begin at once.

Wages go up, not only for the lowest paid, but for all. The minimum, $12 in the south, $13 in the north, will be applied at once and all wages higher up will be stepped up accordingly. Maintenance crews will get time and a half for overtime, a new thing in the mills. Child labor is abolished.

Overproduction Checked.

Increased productivity can be had only by special consent. The stretch-out study, under Leslie L. Frey as technical adviser, will be finished before the code becomes operative, to further check avaracious motives.

But the textile code is the only code thus far agreed upon and no hearing date has been set for any other. There are plenty of codes on file, but they are from the smaller industries which the administration does not want to handle until the "big ten" major industries are coded and operating on a shorter work-week and higher wages.

Truth and falsehood are like the iron and clay in the toes of Nebuchadnezzer's image, they may cleave, but they will not incorporate.—Bacon.

ROY M'DONALD'S 'PROFIT SHARING' PLAN EXPOSED

'Home Store' Manager Tells Interesting Story.

RECEIVED $3.81 FOR NINETY HOURS' WORK

But Proprietor Says He "Laid Down," So Manager Is Now Unemployed.

PRINTERS BRAND FALSE REPORTS OF SETTLEMENT

Officials of Chattanooga Typographical union called attention Friday to alleged statements of "Home Stores" managers that McDonald has come to an agreement with organized labor and has been restored to the "fair list."

It was said that such a trick had been tried before, without, however, any apparent success, and union officials desired that attention be called to the rumor that it has been revived.

"There is absolutely no truth in such a statement," an official of No. 89 said. "We have had no contact whatever with McDonald since he informed our committee that his 'newspaper' plant would be operated non-union, that wages should be cut in half and that his employes would come to work when he told them to, and quit by the same order."

At least one "Home Store" manager has openly rebelled against the assessment placed by Roy McDonald on these men to pay the losses on his latest venture, and Arnold Flippo, who has been in charge of a store on West Ninth street for the past four years, is now unemployed.

It seems, however, that there were other reasons for Mr. Flippo's resignation from his position, as, according to his own statement, he only worked ninety (90) hours last week, drawing as compensation $3.81, so Mr. McDonald concluded Mr. Flippo was "laying down on the job," and so stated, Mr. Flippo said. Mr. McDonald claimed, he continued, that the business of this particular store was off $150 per week.

The store manager, however, has not always fared so badly, he admitted, recent report sheets showing his earnings as manager of the business to be $11.95 for one week and $10.58 at another time, with possibly not more than ninety hours' labor each time. This, he also freely admitted, was his "cut" after paying his pro rata share of the throw-sheet losses.

That the $3.81 earned by the manager last week is in line with other "salaries" paid by the grocer-baker-dairyman-publisher-individualist is indicated in the expense items under the head of "help," which show that $3.00 was spent for such necessity. Whether this included several people or only one assistant manager was not stated, but it has been suggested that had the manager been more loyal to his employer he might have put in a few more hours and saved at least part of this expense. It was not indicated whether the store manager's assessment for dairy or bakery stock was taken out before or after the $3.81 salary had been computed.

Friends of Mr. Flippo, who had become customers of the Ninth street store because of his courteous treatment, are said to have been informed since his resignation that he is "enjoying his vacation."

Local citizens were speculating this week whether the grocer-baker-dairyman - publisher - individualist would agree to the provisions of the national recovery act, his attitude, as expressed to a committee from Chattanooga Typographical union, being somewhat at variance with Mr. Roosevelt's idea of things as they ought to be.

Labor World readers will remember that McDonald said

Mr. Hoover made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a promise from the nation's industrial leaders that wages would be maintained as an aid to prosperity. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer-baker - dairyman - publisher - individualist averred, the depression would now be over; and we will not reach that much-desired state, he added, until working people's pay is cut further and further.

It was reported this week that McDonald is contemplating establishment of an ice-cream manufactory in connection with his various other enterprises, and one citizen hinted at the rumor that the "Home Stores" would at an early date place a line of house furnishings as an adjunct to the business.

Another well-founded report, however, was that McDonald has abandoned the idea of entering the daily newspaper field for the present, at least, and the "wistful eye" which he stated he had on this project has probably been "cocked" to an extent by his experience with his weekly throwsheet. At presstime the weekly gift to Chattanooga's citizenship had not made its appearance in The Labor World's neighborhood, and the "west side" was nervously speculating on whether or not the hot weather or something would cause the "Free Press" to be late again.

Brewery Workers Name Paul Aymon New President

Local 79 Again Indicates Preference for Old-Timers in Official Positions.

Local 79, Brewery Workers, has again indicated a preference for experienced men in official positions filled by the membership, and the semi-annual election of officers at the last regular meeting resulted in placing "old-timers" almost without exception in the officers' posts. Paul J. Aymon, who is declared to have been a worker in the labor movement when Lookout mountain was but a small hill, was named president, with the following "youngsters" to make up the official family for the coming term:

Financial secretary, W. F. Strickland.

Recording secretary, R. R. Lee.

Vice-President, Ed Steiner.

Sergeant-at-Arms, Charles Weinberg.

Trustees, R. W. Burkes, T. M. Ellis and Judson Phillips.

Leo Lee, treasurer, was elected at the last semi-annual election to serve one year, the treasurer's office being the only one designated annually.

Mr. Lee announced that the Tennessee Egg company, distributors of Kings beer, this week signed an agreement with Local 79 for distribution of that product by members of the organization.

Machinists Continue Successful Campaign

An organizing campaign launched jointly by Lodges 1450 and 56, International Association of Machinists, last week, continued its success during this week, reports declaring that it has been a great task to enroll the many new members seeking admission to the union.

Another meeting is called for Saturday night at Central Labor hall, and announcement is made that the session will be open to all who work at the trade, union or non-union. Local speakers will be present to explain the provisions of the national recovery act, and a general discussion of the "new deal" is invited.

Philadelphia Building Trades Merge for United Action

Philadelphia, Pa.—Joseph Richie, American Federation of Labor organizer here, called a meeting of the building trades chiefs to effect a merger of the unions to meet the exigencies which it is believed will arise under the national industrial recovery law. Twenty-one unions with 40,000 members were represented. The meeting perfected the machinery for the union merger.

NATION HEARS DEATHKNELL OF COMPANY UNION

Administration's Attitude Is Clarified.

TWO STATEMENTS EXPLAIN POSITION

Collective Dealing Should Hold No Fears for Fair Employer.

Washington, July 13.—Attitude of the national recovery administration toward company unions is this week clarified considerably in two statements.

The first of these is a statement written and submitted to officials in the recovery administration and by those officials approved as accurate. The second is a statement by Gen. Johnson.

The first deals with company unions exclusively and follows:

"Many questions come about company unions.

"This is intended to clear them up. It is the best opinion that can be got from official sources.

"The law does not say company unions cannot exist. It says no man can be compelled to join one, or to remain a member of one.

"The law does not say those long formed must cease to exist. It says they cannot exist by compulsion.

"The law deals only with compulsion—nothing else.

"Of course, as even the stupidest know, Section 7A of the act must be quoted verbatim in codes as submitted, but the question remains: What will happen if and when a code, while including Section 7A, seeks at the same time to stipulate some arrangement that will nullify the collective bargaining guarantee and keep unions out of the field. Best opinion is such codes will be subjected to forcible amendment. Indications are the issue will be joined when the Steel code comes in.

"Example in point: It is reported the Loyal Legion of Loggers and Lumbermen will offer a code. This organization claims its membership combines employers and employes in its field, the northwest. The law makes it clear organizations of employers must submit codes. It does not say employers and employes. It seems certain the L. L. L. L. code, if one is offered, will be turned back. There will be no order that the L. L. L. L. must disband; it will be specified merely that employes must be FREE to choose their own form of organization and free to select their own representatives in collective bargaining."

Gen. Johnson's formal statement, in which the administrator guarantees a "fair deal," follows:

"The policy of the national recovery administration respecting the rights and obligations of both organized and unorganized labor is based on the declaration of policy in Section 1 of the act itself, which clearly stated the objectives of this legislation, in part as follows:

'To induce and maintain united action of labor and management under adequate government sanction and supervision.'

"Manifestly the purpose of the act is to create and preserve harmonious relationships and to prevent industrial strife and class conflicts.

"Labor in any industry has the right to organize and bargain collectively; the law also recognizes the right of individual workers to bargain for their own conditions of employment. But in the execution of this new social policy to which the government stands committed, it is the obligation of the national recovery administration to require the payment of living wages by industry as a condition of continued existence and to prevent excessive and unreasonable disparities, in the interest both of social justice and a balanced economy.

"Collective bargaining under adequate government sanction and supervision should hold no fears for the fair-minded industrialist; on the other hand, the national recovery administration pledges itself through its labor advisory board, to obtain a fair deal for labor in any industry presenting a code, whether the employes are organized or not. It is not the function or the purpose of the administrator to organize either industry or labor."

Increase Tax Rate If Necessary--Cuthbert

Editor The Labor World:

Judge Will Cummings' recent stand in declaring himself for the nine-months' school term should not go by unnoticed. It is the duty of our high officials to take such stands and not declare themselves for "what the dear people wish." Such watchful waiting policy is characteristic of the politician—the statesman declares for the just cause regardless of what the outcome may be to him politically.

Judge Cummings has asked, however, for an expression from the dear people whether the nine-months term is desired to the extent of raising the tax rate. At any mention of raising the tax rate there arises a mournful wail from the large property owner. The tax rate is sacred to them and must not be tampered with, but the education of our children may be put off, curtailed or done away with, but do not raise the tax rate, say the ones who have their wealth tied up in inanimate objects.

My wealth is tied up in my family. What little additional an increased tax rate will cost me will be money well spent on my child. And let it be known that my property assessment has not been reduced one dime, yet the loudest wails against an increased tax rate comes from many who have been beneficiaries of the assessment reduction just announced by Tax Assessor Swafford.

Let us to say to you, Judge, that if a tax rate increase is necessary for a nine-months school term, LET'S HAVE THE INCREASE! This does not throw the gate open for extravagance and waste—it only means that money must be raised for the vital things of our community, and education is certainly one of the vital parts of this county and city.

T. R. CUTHBERT.

How Cardui Helps Women

"Mal-nutrition" means that your body is not getting enough to keep it up, so that what it has to do is not done well. You may not be eating enough to keep up the work of the body, or there may be something wrong that keeps you from getting full value from the food you eat.

Because of mal-nutrition, some women have aches and pains every month. Such pains should not be neglected.

Take Cardui to give you a better appetite, to give you more strength from the food you eat—to build up and increase your feeling of well-being. Aches and pains go away as you build up with the help of Cardui.

The Scene Unfolds

In a great auditorium a thousand men and women sit and listen while the heads of a great industry unfold their stories. The public hears some of the secrets of business.

Industrialists who have been rated as the worst drivers in America come forward to tell about their costs, their wages, their hours, their output. These things have been their own secrets up to now. The policies involved have been their own policies, for them to make and about which to consult no other person.

Now these things are suddenly clothed with a public interest. Rates of pay and hours of work are matters about which the government must be told. The government has the last word. These men come with explanations and with promises. The explanations and the promises will be weighed. The government will make a decision. That will be final.

Industries will change about-face over night. In the textile industry we know already that the 60-hour week is doomed. It will be gone before the end of July. And this great employer of child labor will at last cease to employ children! That sad and tragic story is coming to a belated close.

It must be said that most of the employers in the industry are happy to end their worst abuses. The minority must, like it or not, follow suit. It is, for this industry, a new day. It is almost amazing to observe these employers standing up in public, proclaiming, explaining, promising. These who have been accustomed only to issue orders. It is strange.

Some of these men have in times gone by used machine guns against the workers whom they must now consider in a new light. Today the workers have rights. Actual rights. It is true the picture is not perfect. Many amateurs are running loose in the recovery administration, posing as experts, exerting tremendous authority.

But a new power has come into being and it is producing astounding results. Always it has been the workers who have been told what they must not do, or what they were allowed to do.

Today, in a great auditorium in Washington the employers are being given a hearing, after which they will be told what they must do and what they may not do. This unfolding of the beginnings of operations under the national recovery act is one of the most dramatic, perhaps one of the most significant, pictures in all history. And if it works as it is intended to work, then America may show the way to a new prosperity for the masses, who have never known prosperity,

Here Lies Probable Woe

If the national industrial recovery act is to function with fairness to all and malice toward none, then something needs to be done and done quickly about the method of code making.

As the matter stands, there is nothing labor can do about a code until it is drafted, docketed and called for hearing. Then labor can appear and register its kicks in open hearing. But by the time a code gets to the hearing stage a great deal of what may be called congealing has been done. And the administration itself has, in a sense, become a partisan of the code as offered.

Perhaps the nation does not realize to what extent the administration becomes party to a code before there is any hearing. Here is the way of it, as it is working in practice:

An industry begins to work out its code. If it is a big industry, it goes to Washington to see what about many things. It finds the deputy administrator assigned to that industry. And the deputy administrator sits in with the industry and helps work out the code. He must be either more or less than human if he comes out of that co-operative effort without being partisan to the code he has helped to draw.

The deputy may take advice from labor in that field, and he may forget all about labor. Or he may take labor's advice and then discount it—kill it in advance.

Labor's advice was had in the making of the cotton textile code, but labor had to go in and fight for modification of that code. Labor's advice was not taken in advance, yet when labor offered its views in open hearings, the deputy administrator said, "Why, but you were my advisor."

At this hour a deputy is sitting with the leaders of the garment industry. Will he emerge partisan to the code there prepared? We shall see, but there is an inescapable presumption.

These codes deal with labor. They fix its hours and its wages, a pair of fields in which labor has been mighty jealous.

The result may be happy, all around, but the method thus far indicates that very shortly a verdict will have to be passed in language blunt enough for even a cavalry officer to understand.

Unemployment Insurance Blocked

During the first half of 1933 the number of unemployed persons in the United States exceeded 13,000,000 and did not fall below 12,000,000. A large portion of this vast army of the jobless has been compelled to live on charity.

Despite the social menace of this situation, despite the unanswerable argument that justice demands legal protection outside of charity for these millions who are without work and penniless through no fault of their own, no state legislature has enacted an unemployment insurance law this year.

This lack of concern over the plight of the millions of unemployed by members of the state legislatures is discouraging. While it is true that bills concerning unemployment insurance were introduced in twenty-nine state legislatures and the Congress of the United States, the fact that many of them merely called for investigations and none of them were made law indicates that legislators regarded the unemployed as worthy of nothing more than the semi-starvation rations doled out by private and public relief.

In Wisconsin the unemployment insurance law enacted last year was attacked in the legislature by a number of bills, with the result that the application of the law was postponed until employment is 20 per cent. greater or payrolls 50 per cent. greater than in December, 1932. Under no circumstances can the law become effective until July 1, 1934.

The reactionary position of the legislatures on unemployment insurance is to be regretted. One thing is sure. The declaration of the American Federation of Labor that there must be a system of unemployment insurance in every state with the employers contributing the necessary funds as a charge on industry remains the only tangible solution of the unemployment problem.

The millions of unemployed and their families will not consent to vegetate forever on handouts from public and private charity organizations. Statesmanship demands the enactment of comprehensive unemployment insurance before the already seething germs of social discontent get beyond control.

Child Labor Knocked Again

The adoption of the Child Labor Amendment to the Federal Constitution by Illinois and Oklahoma brings the number of states which have approved it up to fifteen.

With the prohibition of children under 16 from employment in the cotton textile industry included in that industry's fair competition code and scheduled to go into other industrial codes, plus the continuing adoption by the states of the Child Labor Amendment, the outlook for the entire elimination of child labor in the near future is encouraging.

And it is indeed high time that the ban on child labor be extended to every state and territory. Children are worth too much to our future citizenship to have their lives shrivelled and dwarfed for the benefit of employers who worship profits as their god regardless of the price paid by child workers.

BY THE WAY

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

How long is it since Elizabethton, where the Bemberg company fortified its plants with machine guns to stop a wage raise much less than that now conceded and to prevent a unionization now made legal by act of congress? Just a few short months.

How long since kidnappers took Edward F. McGrady in bonds out of the state of Tennessee to stop his work as an organizer of textile workers? It is not many months, and now he sits at the right hand of the man who can dictate the wages in those mills and command their payment.

How long is it since Marion and Danville, where there was shooting and clubbing and where an ancient feudalism stood fast for its ancient right to say to the workers, "You come," and they came, "you go," and they went?

It is not long, as the years roll on. Not long—and yet, in point of progress, how long it is!

You are probably witnessing the last of the great bargains that have marked and disgraced the retail counters of the nation in these last miserable months.

Mark it down: PRICES ARE ON THE UP!

It seems like something almost uncanny, but the indication is that something like a great undercutting scythe is swinging across America, slashing down those miserable wage rates of the underpaid and the under privileged.

As this movement proceeds there will be two forces at work. One will be the vast governmental machinery that can write an order across a piece of paper and affect the lives of perhaps millions. The other will be the new stiffness of backbone that will get into the workers and lead them to demand better wages on their own account.

Higher prices? Let them come. There is only a favorable comparison between the man who can walk up proudly and pay full price and the man who edges up to grasp a bargain because it has to be a bargain to come within his reach.

There are great indications that pockets long empty will soon contain wages.

It had better be so, for there has been a great valley of danger before the eyes of our people in these months just passed. We were but a step from calamity, from chaotic fighting for relief.

It's a queer thing, this new business. Corporations and big owners who have long regarded their wage rates and work-hours as nobody's business but their own now stand up in public and tell the facts in full, pleading that the march of progress be not quite so fast, but making voluntarily such concessions as in the past would have been resisted with armies.

Bargains are going slithering away, it seems. They, and the condition they represent. Women are going to stop making dresses for 17 cents apiece.

Labor, which has stood against forcing industrial progress by law stands in praise of a law that had to come because employers would not yield to any other pressure.

The slave steps down from the block. The mill owner is no longer the master of those who work. The air, somehow, is clearer and cleaner.

Bargains and the making of bargains are going into history.

But one of these days there will come forth a solemn order saying in effect a wage of so much a day and that the hours shall be so many a day and that prices shall be such and such.

And that will be the start of a new kind of life in America.

That will be an order of the United States government and the United is full of prisons into which to put violators.

Then there will be no more mad house. Then will power come into action through what are solemnly known as "the orderly processes of the law"—and those who are ordered to do so and so will proceed to do so and so.

The national recovery act is in operation and, America is going down a new road!

Do you know How Cheap Electricity Is on the new residence rate?

IF you haven't already studied the new residence rate . . . now in effect . . . we suggest that you take your last electric bill and do so. Note that after you use 40 kilowatt-hours, the new rate falls to 4 cents per kilowatt-hour. After 80 kilowatt-hours the price drops to 2½ cents, and after 200 kilowatt-hours all you use is at the unusually low rate of 1½ cents per kilowatt-hour.

Truly electricity for household purposes is a greater bargain now than ever before.

For instance, if you are now using electricity for lighting and the operation of one or two small appliances, you can make greater use of this service . . . or add other appliances . . . which will bring you and your family greater comforts and conveniences . . . at little extra cost (and in some cases no extra cost) over what you have paid for electric service in the past.

Again, if you are now cooking or refrigerating by some method other than electricity, consider the added advantages and savings that the lower steps in the new rate afford. It is now possible to cook with electricity for nearly one-half of the former cost . . . and you can operate an electric refrigerator at very little expense over and above what you now pay for lighting.

We invite you to visit our nearest office to get further details of the savings and advantages possible under this new rate.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

If ... organized groups of either man...ement or labor fail to meet that ...allenge they will be indicted for in...mpetence by the suffering millions ...o are now giving to industrial ...adership one more chance—perhaps ... last—to justify its authority."

Again warning of the imperative ...cessity for quick action, Richberg ...id:

"This is no time for men who have ...sitions of power and large influence ... shaping the policies of commercial, ...nancial or labor organizations to ...old back, either to placate hesitant ...inorities or to serve selfish special ...terests. The forces of the depres...on have not been conquered merely ... a rise in commodity prices or in ...e market quotations of stocks and ...onds. We have still millions of men and women out of work; we are spending millions of dollars every day to keep these unemployed masses and their dependents from starvation."

Richberg emphasized that the recovery administration is not seeking merely to encourage a brief business boom without any effort to control the forces of disintegration which brought on the depression. "We are not trying to revive the 'Follies of 1929.'"

The speaker declared that the success of the recovery act experiment hinges largely on the ability of the managers of private business to accept a new opportunity for self-government in industry.

Summarizing what the recovery administration is trying to do, Richberg said:

"Every substantial industry in the country is being urged to prepare and to submit promptly a basic code of fair competition. This code should provide for such a shortening of hours of labor as will bring about the immediate re-employment of the number of men normally attached to the industry. This code should establish minimum wages for the hours of work as limited, so that a decent living may be assured to the humblest worker. This code should contain also the mandatory provisions of Section 7a of the act, protecting the rights of self-organization and collective bargaining for all employes."

Richberg declared speed and mass action are essential to meet the far-reaching needs of the immediate future, that there must be a united attack of all industries upon low wages and long hours and a simultaneous rise of purchasing power all along the line.

Workers Must Organize to Get Their Rights Under National Recovery Act

San Francisco, Cal.—The necessity ...f thorough organization of the work...rs in order to secure their just bene...ts under the national industrial re...overy act and the inadvisability of ...mployers opposing such organization ...ere stressed in a radio talk here by ...Will J. French, a member of the state ...ndustrial accident commission.

Employers' Opposition Deplored.

"Newspapers tell of some opposi...tion to the collective voice of em...loyes," Mr. French said. "This is ...nfortunate. The employers welcome ...he proposed law because it seems to ...ffer a partial solution of some of the ...difficulties in business, it suspends the ...nti-trust legislation, permits combi...nations now held to be illegal, and al...ows each industry to organize as a ...elf-governing group, under federal ...supervision.

Employes Are Handicapped.

"The employers take the lead and ...orm the organization, and they will ...ct as a unit.

"The workers' right to organize is ...onceded in the act, but the legisla...ive machinery is not as helpful to ...hem.

"The times and the need require ...n outlook at common problems out ...f clear lenses, and old antagonisms ...have no place in the untried plan.

"Several of the strongest business ...associations in the United States will ...participate, in all probability, and if ...rganization is good for one side, and ...t is, it should be welcomed on the ...ther side.

"We all know that only by collec...ive action can results be obtained, ...nd the futility of individual attempts ...s known. Furthermore, the main ...urpose of the national industrial re...overy act is to bring together all the ...factors that are engaged in commerce, and it is certain that the wage-earners, because of their number, constitute the largest group.

"Out of this hitherto unparalleled step may come further planning. There should be no cessation of the activities of energetic humans until the day comes when no man will fall helpless on the economic highway.

Objectors Have Failed.

"We will hear more of the objectors who will recite the need of less government in business and more business in government. The reciters have had their day and opportunity, and there is no evidence that success has crowned their efforts.

"Therefore, the people, by duly elected or appointed representatives, have a right to be heard and to open the closed doors so that at least food, clothing and shelter shall be placed in their right relationships to each citizen.

"The depression has caused us to revise our conceptions of wealth, and the well-to-do man of today is troubled about tomorrow.

Jobs for Idle Millions.

"The national industrial recovery act," Mr. French concluded, "aims to foster fair competition and to provide for the construction of certain useful public works, and for other purposes. This makes up a well-rounded program. It offers hope, because of its scope, that unemployment will be affected in such a manner that millions of willing workers will return to their former tasks, or to other means of earning a livelihood. If private business fails in furnishing jobs, then public business must succeed."

Mill Workers End Strike; Arrest of Pickets Blocked

Aurora, Ill.—Some 300 employes of the Aurora Cotton mills here returned to work after a walkout of ten days in support of a demand for restoration of wage rates cut 35 per cent over a period of time.

The management agreed not to discriminate against any of the employes on account of their part in the strike.

It was stated that Mr. Walker, of the Fox Valley Manufacturers' association, attempted to persuade State's Attorney Carbary to have deputy marshals from the sheriff's office arrest strikers who picketed the mills. But evidently Mr. Carbary knew the pickets were within their legal rights, for no deputies appeared on the scene.

The strike was settled through the mediation of H. A. Canfield, conciliator from the United States department of labor, sent here at the request of the Aurora Trades and Labor assembly. The wage controversy will be adjusted by Mr. Canfield and the mill management.

The big reason why so many marriages fail is that the average house isn't big enough for two people who weren't spanked enough.

WORKERS RUSH

In most cases it is hoped that when codes for the various industries are submitted to the administrator of the recovery act, employes will be in position, through the American Federation of Labor, to state the desires of the workers and their own ideas of what constitutes a "fair deal."

Many meetings have been scheduled during the coming week, and although the campaign is now some three weeks old there apparently is no let-up in the calls for assistance in presenting a united front in the new industrial order.

"Sound Your A"

Which, Interpreted, Means Here's the Latest Dope on the Musicians

By GEORGE RODGERS

Those of you that missed the special meeting last Sunday really missed something. Lester Cohn brought back some information from the convention that was worth while, and there seemed to be more enthusiasm after hearing the report than I have seen in a long time.

With the economic situation clearing it looks like better times are in store for the musicians as well as the other crafts. In New York alone six thousand musicians have been put back to work. Locally, there are more dance men working than ever before. Fall may bring even brighter prospects, with the possibility of the theatres and hotels adding on men. There is no doubt that the public is waiting for shows in the flesh. With the hotel business on the increase, the managers will be looking for something to brighten up their lobbies and entertain their guests. We, the members of this organization, can help put this over in a big way by hearty co-operation with each other, and the intelligent presentation to the prospective employer.

There will be a meeting of the executive board Monday night, July 17, at 8 o'clock. All members are urged to attend.

ILLINOIS LABOR MAKES BIG LEGISLATIVE GAINS

Minimum Wage and Anti-Yellow Dog Contracts Bills Passed, Child Labor Amendment Adopted, Workmen's Compensation Act Improved and Other Important Laws Enacted—Olander Leads Labor Fight.

Chicago, July 13.—The Illinois State Federation of Labor, R. G. Soderstrom, Streator, president, and Victor A. Olander, Chicago, secretary-treasurer, made substantial gains with its legislative program at the recent session of the Illinois general assembly. Outstanding among the bills and resolutions passed were ratification of the child labor amendment to the federal constitution, anti-yellow dog contract bill and minimum wage law for women and children.

"The outlook was discouraging up to ten days prior to adjournment," said Secretary Olander, "but the Illinois State Federation of Labor persisted in its efforts to secure favorable action on the various bills in the interest of the workers of the state, notwithstanding the fact that most observers considered the situation to be virtually hopeless. The result was most gratifying, and indicated that the officers of the federation had acted wisely in maneuvering a number of bills out of committee, regardless of the lateness of the session."

The fight for ratification of the child labor amendment was spectacular in the extreme. One resolution for ratification having been voted down earlier in the session, another resolution was brought out of committee in the dying hours of the legislature and under high pressure was jammed through despite the wails of anguish arising from the opposition.

Much of the credit for the successful denouement is given to Secretary Olander and his two-fisted methods. The usually calm and suave Olander dumfounded state political leaders when he went into action with his plain sailor language and table-pounding with his fists, not to mention a certain important door which he crashed.

Among the bills enacted, not already mentioned, were the following:

Improving workmen's compensation act.

Housing bill and companion measures.

Defining so-called salary or wage purchases as loans under the small loan act and thus virtually outlawing the nefarious loan shark business which has been conducted by the so-called salary purchasing agencies.

Authorizing municipalities to apply for grants and make contracts under the industrial recovery act in accord with the limitations of that act providing for the thirty-hour week and adequate wages.

Limiting the working hours of bus and truck drivers on the state highways.

Safeguarding mothers' pensions by providing for a separate mothers' pension fund.

Re-establishing the buy Illinois products commission.

Accepting provisions of the federal act providing for the establishment of a national employment system.

The egg candlers' bill.

Appropriation of $25,000,000 for emergency unemployment relief.

Naval Building To Give Direct Work to 18,400

Thousands of Others to Get Jobs As Result of Government's Modernization Program, Navy Department Says.

Washington, July 13.—Thousands of men will be given work directly and indirectly by the naval construction program authorized under the national industrial recovery act, the navy department estimates.

In an outline of benefits to labor and industry expected from the building program, the navy department says that the program will create more than 2,430,000 "man weeks" of work.

Of the $3,300,000,000 authorized for all public works, $238,000,000 was allotted to the navy department for the purposes of undertaking a naval building program to modernize the United States fleet.

The navy department says the new construction will begin very soon, in line with the general policy of expediting all work that will provide enlarged activity for labor.

Labor costs in shipbuilding are estimated at 85 per cent of total expenditures. Under this program 18,400 men are expected to be employed directly in government and private shipyards with an unestimated but large number being employed in the industries that will benefit from the naval work.

More than 125 industries and mechanical trades will be called upon to help in the building program. Materials to be used in great quantities include steel, the leading item; lumber, cork, rubber, metal fixtures, fittings and valves, electrical equipment, brass, lead, zinc, paint, insulation, tiling, bedding, linen, hardware, tools, fire prevention apparatus, communications systems, life saving equipment, blocks and rigging and navigating instruments.

RELIEF ADMINISTRATOR BANS USE OF FEDERAL FUNDS TO SUBSIDIZE STARVATION PAY

Washington, July 6.—Following a statement by Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator, that federal relief funds will not be used to enable employers to pay starvation wages, the Reading, Pa., branch of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers wrote to Hopkins protesting against what the union termed "paying subsidies from relief funds furnished by the federal authorities to assist the E. Richard Meinig hosiery mills in Reading to continue operations."

John W. Edelman, editor of the Hosiery Worker, in the communication to Hopkins urged that an immediate investigation be made of charges relating to the Meinig mill. It is contended that the Meinig company has not paid wages to its help for several weeks past and that relief funds have been advanced to a number of employes on behalf of the hosiery concern. It is charged that this company has for the past six months been constantly in arrears in wage payments to its employes and that on some occasions as much as six weeks pay was due individuals.

Sweatshops Subsidized.

"Sweatshops are being subsidized through issuance of relief funds to employes unable to live on the paltry earnings made in the shop, mill or mine," Edelman said. "This has been a common practice in Pennsylvania for the past year or more. It is something new, however, to assist a manufacturer who doesn't pay wages regularly by loaning food orders to his help. If this practice is not quickly checked the many other manufacturers in this state who are paying wages when they feel like it, although their mills are running regularly, will seek similar assistance from the government."

In telling of plans of his administration, Hopkins laid stress on the assertion that federal relief funds will not become "involved in any situation where employers pay their workers starvation wages and expect them to get the difference from relief agencies."

Numerous instances have come to his attention, Hopkins said, where employers have approached relief agencies with the idea that they were cut-rate employment agencies where workers could be obtained at less than a self-supporting wage.

"This is asking public relief moneys to subsidize industrial wages," he declared. "I am thankful that in none of the instances that came to my attention did the relief agencies entertain such a proposition. There is much satisfaction in realizing that the great majority of industrial employers believe in paying a living wage. I want the relief-giving agencies to know that wherever they come under the federal emergency relief administration I back them wholeheartedly in turning down any such attempts to take advantage of human distress."

LOCAL UNIONS CONTINUE TO MAKE GAINS

Progress Reported On All Fronts.

TEXTILE MEETINGS SATURDAY, SUNDAY

Full-Fashioned Folks at the Auditorium, General Meeting at Central Labor Hall.

Organization wave which struck the city some three weeks ago continues unabated, and labor in Chattanooga will be in excellent position to comply with the terms of the national recovery act, so far as such relates to unified co-operation with industry in working out the many problems which the NIRA is expected to solve.

New charters have been issued for a large number of trades never before organized, and large plants which have been unorganized since their establishment are now "100 per cent union." With a few exceptions, notably some of the "bitter-enders" among the textile mill owners, the provisions of the act which relate to joint action by employer and employe are being accepted by industrial leaders, and in the main a disposition is being shown to co-operate with President Roosevelt's recovery program.

Some of the larger institutions which endeavored to form company unions have given up the idea and are complying with the spirit of the law by recognizing legitimate trade union organization among their employes.

A meeting for all full-fashioned hosiery workers will be held Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, at the Memorial auditorium, to be followed on Sunday afternoon at the same time by a gathering open to all general textile workers at the Central Labor hall.

PAINTERS HOLD OPEN SESSION.

An open session sponsored by Local 226, Painters, at Central Labor hall Thursday night was attended by some 250 union and non-union workers, and following addresses by T. R. Cuthbert, Paul J. Aymon, John Peel, Fred Held, Zeb. Ollinger and A. C. Kamin, a dutch lunch was enjoyed. The membership of local 226 has been doubled within the past three weeks, and prospects are that practically every skilled craftsman in this line will be enrolled within a short time. Allied trades which have not been organized are also falling into line, and it is thought one or two new charters will be necessary to care for the newcomers in the different lines.

MACHINISTS ALSO MAKING PROGRESS.

Scores of machinists have enrolled with the local lodges during the present campaign, a scheduled meeting having developed the necessity for several to follow, and it is announced that another gathering will be held at Central Labor hall Saturday night at 7:30. Union and non-union craftsmen, it is announced, are again invited to attend and take part in the plans and discussions.

ELECTRICAL WORKERS HAVE OVERFLOW

Another overflow crowd answered the invitation of the local electrical workers to meet at Central Labor hall last Wednesday night and hear the provisions of the national recovery act discussed. Local 175 is declared to have practically trebled its membership, and in this trade also many allied workers who have heretofore been unorganized are being enrolled. It was announced Friday morning that officers of the local union will be at the hall all afternoon Saturday in order to accept applications and to advise any and all electrical workers who seek it.

LOCAL TRADES UNIONIST LEARNS HOW "COMPANY UNION" IS FORMED

Slips Into Meeting of Davenport Employes and Gets an Enlightening Lesson on "Road-Roller" Tactics —Sentiment for Real Union Is Boosted By Farce Enacted at Y. M. C. A.

"Patriotism as She Is Practiced in 1933" might have been the title of a serio-comic performance staged Tuesday night at the Southside Y. M. C. A., according to a local trades unionist who crashed a meeting of Davenport Hosiery Mill employes, called for the purpose of forming a so-called company union.

The local unionist was invited to the gathering by a number of the Davenport employes who have affiliated themselves with the American Federation of Labor through the Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers, and was smuggled past the watchful eyes of special guards.

Immediately the gathering convened, the union man reported, one ambitious brother assumed the leadership, appointed himself chairman and began the proceedings by stating that Davenport employes wanted no outside agitators to "tear up the pretty playhouse" built for the workers by the mill owners. "The company has been good to us," he is reported to have said, decrying the preference of a great many of the employes for a legitimate trade union through which to make their desires known in the president's recovery program. "We want a happy family affair," he said, in effect, "just like a sewing circle."

At the psychological point another employe rose to condemn the "foreign agitators," stating that the names of the organizers were so long and strange he was unable to pronounce them. The "loyal" employe was obviously referring to Fred Held, vice-president of the Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers, and John Peel, representative of the United Textile Workers, who are in the city representing these organizations.

After this speaker had expressed his opinion of the "furriners" the chairman read a resolution providing for the formation of a "company union," and called for a vote of those present. Attempts of several participants to secure the floor to speak on the question before the house were ruled "out of order" by the self-appointed chairman, who declared that, once a motion was made and seconded, there could be no discussion.

A "vote" was then taken, and counted that the "company union" had won, and the meeting was adjourned.

Reports from the Davenport mills Wednesday and Thursday were to the effect that the sentiment for a real union had been greatly helped by the comedy staged on behalf of the company, and that many who had been undecided on joining a legitimate union were now outspoken in their determination to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor.

Dan W. Tracy Succeeds H. H. Broach As President of Electrical Workers

Washington, July 20.—Dan W. Tracy, of Houston, Tex., has been appointed president of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers to succeed H. H. Broach, who resigned because of ill health.

Tracy has been a vice-president of the Electrical Workers since 1919, in charge of District No. 7, centering at Houston. He has been a member of the union for twenty years. He has been very successful in his work, notably in the negotiation of contracts.

Announcing the resignation of President Broach and the appointment of his successor, the international executive council, meeting in Washington, pointed out that Broach's administration has extended over one of the most trying times in the history of the union. The statement continued:

"This period of depression has coincided with a period of personal ill-health on his part, and yet during the three and a half years of his incumbency he has been at his desk, unless acute illness decreed otherwise, and has shouldered the disturbing tasks, incident to wholesale unemployment, with devotion and courage.

"President Broach's temperament is such that he cannot mark time on any job he undertakes. He has thrown every ounce of energy into the task and has spent his talents unsparingly.

"He began his administration with the much-needed codification of our organization law. He succeeded in injecting his own eagerness perseverance, devotion and service into widespread sections of the Brotherhood. He has widened the scope and significance of the president's functions.

"Such talents have been invaluable to this organization; yet we must—however reluctantly—abide by his determination to resign. We do this with the sincere wish that his health may constantly improve."

Broach was named president in December, 1929, to succeed the late James P. Noonan. The election of Broach, who was then 37, made him the youngest president of an international union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Before becoming president, Broach had been a local recording secretary, next a business agent, then an international representative, next vice-president, then president.

TEXAS MINISTER INDORSES ORGANIZED LABOR MOVEMENT

Fort Worth, Texas. — Strong support of organized labor as an institution to protect the workers against long hours, low wages and other unjust conditions was expressed by the Rev. J. Leslie Finnell, pastor of the Magnolia Avenue Christian Church here.

"I am in sympathy with all men who work for a livelihood and I cannot comprehend how any man who believes in the Christian religion can be opposed to organized labor," he said.

"I believe workers have a right to organize for their mutual protection and benefit. Here in Fort Worth, in stores in which the employes are unorganized, store help is compelled to work unreasonably long hours, ten, twelve, sometimes fourteen hours and frequently on Sundays. I hope the time will come when these workers will organize and correct this condition."

A. F. of L. Building Trades Department Selects O'Neill for Secretary-Treasurer

Washington. — The executive council of the building trades department of the American Federation of Labor appointed William O'Neill, of Atlantic City, N. J., to fill the unexpired term of the deceased secretary-treasurer, W. J. Spencer.

Mr. O'Neill has been general organizer of the United Association of Plumbers of the United States and Canada for the past four years and a business representative of the Atlantic City Plumbers' union for a long period. He will assume his official duties with the building trades department on September 1.

MANUFACTURERS ARE 'WARNED' BY MR. GILBERT

Fears Unions Will Gain Advantages.

WANTS NON-UNION CLAUSE IN CODES

Local Employers Urged to Organized Effort Against Workers' Activities.

The Tennessee Manufacturers' association — if, indeed, Secretary Gilbert expresses the sentiment of the gentlemen composing that organization—is greatly alarmed over the awakening of labor to the need of real unionism, and the membership of the employers' union is being circularized and warned to take steps to stop the great rush of workers to the protection of the American Federation of Labor.

In a letter to the members, Gilbert, who is a sort of "yes-man" for John Edgerton, Lebanon sock mill owner and president of the bosses' union, calls attention to the workers' campaign, enclosing a reprint of an advertisement which appeared in local papers, and in a more or less dramatic appeal does a "Paul Revere" stunt, using the postman for a horse.

"Our efforts have been devoted largely in making Tennessee a profitable state for industrial investment and advancement," Edgerton's manfriday declares, and the cheerful information is given that the association "has one of its attorneys in Washington this week in order that he might get first hand information which can be used for the benefit of the manufacturers of Tennessee."

Gilbert's periodical ravings, however, are not considered seriously by a great many manufacturers, there being a large number of fair-minded employers in Chattanooga alone who recognize the trouble-making proclivities of the secretary and his chief.

You have noticed in the daily papers recently display advertisements by labor union organizations urging and insisting upon employes of Tennessee to join a labor union "in order that they might get their just dues under the national recovery act."

Such advertisements are being inserted in newspapers throughout the United States and are causing much confusion on the part of both employes and employers.

We are enclosing a reproduction of one of these advertisements that our members might see the extent organized labor is going in "feathering its own nest," as a result of the industrial recovery act.

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson has recently stated, with emphasis, "This administration is not going to be used as a means of unionizing any industry." In other words, Gen. Johnson is playing hands off with reference to all matters outside of the letter of the law which he is endeavoring to enforce.

There is nothing in the act compelling employes to join a labor union. There is in the act, however, certain inhibitions placed upon employers with reference to dealing with their employes in connection with forming a company union or joining a labor union.

The writer heard Gen. Johnson say that insofar as his office as administrator was concerned, the relations between employer and employe would remain statu quo when the industrial recovery act went into effect, consequently we are asking the members of this association, who have from the beginning believed in the principle of the open shop, to continue their allegiance to the American principle of employment, and not be induced by pressure or coercion to give in to the unions when an effort is made to organize the employes in any plant.

We are asking that in the prep-

PLANS COMPLETE FOR OBSERVANCE OF 12th ANNUAL "PAINTERS' DAY"

Barbecue-Picnic To Be Staged at Lake Winnepesaukah Next Thursday — Interesting All-Day Program Announced, With Valuable Prizes for Contest Winners.

"All set" is the announcement made Friday morning by John Smith, chairman of the general committee which has been busy for several weeks arranging for the twelfth annual "Painters' Day" barbecue and picnic at Lake Winnepesaukah next Thursday, July 27.

The painters' outing has come to be one of the most popular annual affairs of its character, and thousands of friends of the unionists are always present to take part in the festivities.

Beginning at about 9 o'clock, Mr. Smith said, the program will last practically all day, with features for the entertainment of old and young. Among the most popular items to interest all comers will be the athletic and field contests, which have been so arranged that all persons, "from 6 to 60," may compete for really worthwhile prizes in an exhibition of athletic skill. There will be races for boys under 16 and for men over 60; egg race, baseball throwing contest and 50-yard dash for girls under 12; various contests for married women only, married men only, etc. The most proficient person, man or woman, in the ancient and honorable game of "barnyard golf" will also be presented with a prize. A general drawing for cash prizes, participated in by all holders of tickets, and a prize for the prettiest baby on the grounds will also be given, providing a sufficient number of judges, with nerve enough to undertake the task, can be secured.

The barbecue feast, under the capable direction, of course, of the old master, Zeke Witt, will be ready at 10, and will be served throughout the day. There will be baby beef, mutton and pork, with all the trimmings, including salads, sauces and such, and preparations have been made to take care of all comers. Suitable drinks will, of course, be served with the meal.

Buses will leave the bus terminal every hour beginning at 9, and guests of the Painters will be furnished free transportation to and from the picnic grounds.

RELIEF IN 1932 INCREASED 79 PER CENT IN 120 CITIES

Washington, July 13.—Funds expended by 120 American cities for relief in 1932 increased 79 per cent over the amount spent for relief in 1931, the United States department of labor reports.

The total amount spent by the 120 cities was $313,410,370. Of the total, 82 per cent came from public funds.

The largest single expenditure in any city in 1932 was reported by New York. The figure was $79,018,025, an increase of 76.7 per cent over 1931.

Next was Chicago, with $38,163,809, an increase of 183 per cent over 1931. Boston stood third with $13,646,673, an increase of 96 per cent, while the Detroit area's 1932 expenditures of $11,559,027 represented a 15 per cent decline from the 1931 total of $13,629,727.

Woll Says Labor Backs Beliefs Set Forth in Recovery Measure

Atlantic City, N. J., July 6.—Addressing the National Association of Retail Grocers in convention here, Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, said organized labor had come over entirely to the belief expressed in the national industrial recovery act that "unrestrained competition is not the life of trade but the death," that "trying to maintain competition by law is futile and harmful," and that "anti-trust laws are obsolete."

Woll said that the recovery act contains elements for national good and elements for national disaster. He added that its chief virtue is that it gives President Roosevelt authority not only to modify as he goes along but to end the act if he sees that it will bring disaster.

"My faith in Mr. Roosevelt," Woll said, "rather than in the new law, makes me confident that under the new deal we will recover."

Cooks and Waiters Plan Code Under National Recovery Act

Cincinnati, July 6.—The officers of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes' and Beverage Dispensers' International Alliance have filed notice with Gen. Johnson, administrator of the national recovery act, that they desire to be heard on all questions coming before him having any bearing on the hotel, restaurant and beverage trades and that in due course a code of fair competition would be presented for his consideration.

To assist the union in drawing up a code, all local unions are being asked to submit a statistical record of wages and working hours in union and non-union establishments.

Trades-Labor Body To Elect Aug. 6

Tennessee Valley Trades and Labor association, an organization composed of delegates from building and metal trades in the district covered by the proposed river improvement program, held its second session last Sunday at Central Labor hall, with delegates in attendance from several cities in the territory.

Plans were laid for a permanent organization, and election of permanent officers will be held at the next regular meeting, which is called for this city Sunday, Aug. 6.

Secretary Bender reports considerable progress has been made, and the organization is expected to prove of material benefit in meeting the many problems which the improvement will bring for the workers.

Scranton Mill Owners Break Union Agreement

Reading, Pa.—The strike of 6,000 men and women in sixteen Berks county hosiery mills, which was announced as settled by an agreement recognizing the right to organize under the national industrial recovery act, broke out anew when the manufacturers refused to abide by the settlement terms.

The second strike occurred over the agreement provision that upon satisfactory evidence that a majority of workers in any plant had elected to negotiate through certain elected representatives, the employers individually would meet with such representatives together with a committee of their own employes and consider all grievances.

Officials of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers claim that the manufacturers refused to abide by this pledge. The strike was thereupon renewed. Some 3,000 employes of the Berkshire Knitting mills also joined the strikers.

TWO FIG-BARS HOME STORE PAY FOR DAY'S WORK?

Citizen Declares 12-Year-Old Thus Compensated.

REPORTED McDONALD TO OPEN JOB PLANT

Johnson Tire Co. and Fowler Stores Continue to Favor Throw-Sheet.

Wages paid employes of the many and varied interests controlled by Roy McDonald, director of the so-called "Home Stores," have in some cases at least been more or less a matter for conjecture, but a possibility of the "Home Store" wage scale for juveniles came to light this week in the report of a citizen of the west side, who declared that his son, aged 12, was employed as delivery boy at one of the stores, working twelve and one-half hours, and at the conclusion of his day's labor was presented with two fig-bars as his compensation. The complaining citizen, however, added that after strong protest upon his part, the employer sent 10 cents in cash to his home, which, incidentally, was returned to the coffers of the grocery store.

Latest business venture of the grocer-baker-dairyman-publisher-individualist reported this week is the commercial printing 'game, which McDonald is declared to be embarking upon in his usual lavish way. The weekly throw-sheet which was established several weeks ago possibly has proved too great a drain on the resources of the grocery business, and the job plant is seen as an adjunct to the publisher's ambitious plunge into the "Fourth Estate's" field.

The Johnson Tire company, dealers in United States tires, gas, oil and other automobile accessories at Eleventh and Broad streets, and the three local Fowler furniture stores continue to occupy the unique position of being the only local concerns which are assisting the publication by using its advertising columns. The Fowler stores have long been on the "unfair list" of organized labor, through the connection of J. O. Fowler with the recently-bankrupt Mascot Stove company. Efforts to enlist the sympathetic interest of the tire concern in the claims of Chattanooga workers failed, and the Johnson company has continued its patronage of the throw-sheet.

Nothing further has been heard of McDonald's ambitions to enter the daily paper field, and local working people believe he has for the present at least decided to deprive an anxiously-awaiting public of his services in that line.

Labor World readers will remember that McDonald told a committee which called upon him that he was an individualist, and that anyone who works for him will come to work at such time as he orders, and will quit by the same sign.

President Hoover, he said, made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders to keep wages up as an aid to prosperity. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer-baker-dairyman - printer - publisher-individualist averred, we would now be out of the depression, and further, he held, we will never be out until wages are further and further cut.

An operator was brought from out of town to set the type for McDonald's throw-sheet, despite appeals of Chattanooga workers that printers in this city have suffered from the depression and many have been unemployed.

Considerable difficulty was experienced last week by the Labor World staff in locating a copy of the throw-sheet, and efforts to find a copy of the current issue had been unsuccessful at press time.

Holds 40-Hour Week Is Blow to Recovery Act

Trade Association Counsel Also Finds Textile Code Minimum Wage Is Too Low.

New York.—With the majority of business executives reconciled to a thirty-five or thirty-six-hour week, acceptance by the government of the cotton textile industry's program for a forty-hour week would be a "severe blow" to the success of the national industrial recovery act, Sol. A. Herzog, counsel to a number of trade associations and to the Congress of Industries, declared here.

Since the major industries will set the pace for the smaller groups, he added, very few trades would accept a week shorter than forty hours if the textile code is approved by the federal administrator.

At the same time, Mr. Herzog expressed the opinion that the minimum wages of $12 for the south and $13 for the north were too low, pointing out that the minimum wage for women in Massachusetts mills is now $13.50.

Most industries are anxious to grant labor generous terms, he declared, and are thinking in terms of around $16 for minimum wages, rather than the $12 and $13 proposed by the cotton goods group.

"Since this industry's code is the first to be submitted to Washington," Mr. Herzog continued, "and has been widely publicized, the government's attitude on it is of the utmost importance. If the administration desires to have the aims of the recovery act fulfilled, it must see to it that the major industries are not granted too much leeway."

Begin Taking Cardui Today If You Suffer Like This Lady Did

"WHEN I was a girl, I began taking Cardui," writes Mrs. Maggie Stanfield, of Crandall, Ga. "I was very irregular for twelve months. Nothing did me very much good until my mother began to give me this medicine. Then I got all right, stout and well.

"After I was married, I was in bad health. I began taking Cardui again. I was troubled with my back a lot. Was awfully restless. I could not sleep well. I just weighed 90 pounds when I began taking Cardui. I improved rapidly. Before long I weighed 126 pounds. I felt fine. I was able to do a good day's work."

Cardui is sold by druggists here.

And This Is America!

In general, American institutions are the pride of Americans. But the wages and hours in the lumber industry revealed in connection with the fair competition code submitted to the national recovery administration by a committee representing 85 per cent. of the lumber barons exempt that industry from the pride category.

The lumber barons want a forty-eight-hour maximum work week with a minimum weekly wage rate of $10.80, or 22½ cents an hour.

Their demand ruffled the usually suave personality of Hugh S. Johnson, the recovery administrator, who said:

"A forty-eight-hour week is so long I wouldn't even consider it. It is up to the lumber industry to make out its case, but 22½ cents an hour is far below what I regard as a necessary minimum wage."

General Johnson added that these hours of work and minimum wages "are wholly unacceptable and will in no case be approved."

Thereupon John D. Tennant of Longview, Wash., chairman of the lumber industry's emergency national committee which framed the code, jumped into the limelight to defend his committee's long hours and low wages. He said that in cases where the code called for a forty-eight-hour week the past normal working time was sixty hours or more, and that the minimum wage of 22½ cents an hour represented an increase from the present prevailing wage of 11¾ cents an hour.

Sixty hours a week at 11¾ cents an hour paid lumber workers in the past and present! Forty-eight hours a week at 22½ cents an hour proposed for the future!

Evidently the poet who wrote "America the Beautiful" could not have had for her inspiration the economic conditions of the 750,000 men normally employed by those who own and control the lumber industry.

Tricks That Are Vain

Remember that jingle about the Heathen Chinee and "tricks that are vain"?

Well, it isn't necessary to go Oriental to find out about such tricks.

It's necessary only to observe the codes that are being filed with the national industrial recovery administration.

Knowing full well the purpose of the law, they come tripping along with codes that are as full of tricks as a magician's hat.

They know a real and sharp shortening of the work-week is needed and planned. But they offer work-weeks running as long as 48 hours.

They offer wages for hard labor that ought to shame a 10-cent store.

They just don't get the idea.

But they will, never fear. They will.

These poor fellows who two months ago were wailing in despair, many of them certain that they were all doomed, are riding hard, making every effort to see how deep they dig into what they now believe is to be a new and unfailing well of profits.

The great American Business Man is, in many respects, a pain in the neck, when it comes to judgment, common decency and national patriotism.

He needs to take a lesson from Labor and Labor needs to hurry up and get strong enough to give it to him so it will count for most.

Pennsylvania's Disgrace

The low wages and long hours imposed on women and minors by many Pennsylvania employers, brought to light by the Gallagher commission investigating sweatshop conditions, are a deep disgrace to the citizens of that state and a discredit to the state government for its failure promptly to remedy the situation.

Testimony before the commission revealed that in Pittsburgh the wealthy Aluminum Corporation of America pays hundreds of women $1.10 a day in the place of men formerly employed at $5 to $6.

Factory owners pay girls 2 cents an hour and compel them to make silk dresses at 20 cents each, with wages of only $3 for two weeks' work. They also take on girls as "learners" for three or four weeks without pay and then lay them off after one week at $5. Girls with nine weeks' experience were paid $2.98 for two weeks' work.

The testimony also revealed that owners of 5 and 10 cent stores work their employes an average of sixty hours a week for $7 and compel them to work Sundays preparing the stock. In a sales contest one store owner compelled girls who failed to sell an average amount of goods to carry unwrapped nursing bottles to and from work.

The inhuman wages, hours and working conditions imposed on women and girls by the sweatshop employers of Pittsburgh are duplicated by unscrupulous employers in other industrial sections of the state.

The conditions revealed by the Gallagher commission are a severe blow to the prestige of Pennsylvania. The state has labor laws galore, but they do not enable the authorities to smite the sweatshop owners.

A mandatory minimum wage law of the New York type, which prohibits the employment of women and minors at wages unreasonably low and not fairly commensurate with the value of the service rendered, with adequate penalties for violation, seems to be absolutely necessary to end the economic slavery imposed on thousands of Pennsylvania's women workers by profit-mad employers.

Governor Gifford Pinchot should act promptly and convene a special session of the legislature for the purpose of wiping out of Pennsylvania's industrial life the stigma of sweatshop employers and starvation wages.

Old-Age Security

A survey by the American Federation of Labor shows that the enactment of an old-age pension law by the Michigan Legislature raises to twenty-five the states which have sanctioned this legislation. Ten states have enacted pension laws this year. The 1933 roll of honor includes Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Indiana, Maine, Michigan, Nebraska, North Dakota, Oregon and Washington.

A number of legislatures that have not yet adopted pension legislation have either discussed it or have instructed committees to study it. Pension legislation was approved by one or both houses of the legislature in seven states, but was not enacted into law. The twenty-five states with pension laws have a population of 55,472,000, all of whom will be protected by old-age security when the recent laws become effective.

This progress of old-age security legislation in the first half of 1933 is encouraging. It gives support to the belief that the time is not far distant when the remaining twenty-three states, the Territory of Alaska and the District of Columbia will approve pensions for the aged so that every person in the United States will have the guarantee that declining years will not contain the specter of suffering from poverty.

The American Federation of Labor has actively supported old-age security legislation in every state, and with its model old-age security bill has endeavored to have pension laws applied by a state administrative body instead of local officials.

What Next?

Steel barns are now being offered by steel fabricators in the central west. The foundation or cow-barn section may be made of masonry or concrete. The steel trusses that form the left are made in convenient sections so that two men with the aid of a tractor or team of horses can erect the structure. The steel frame is grounded, reducing the lightning hazard to a minimum. Steel and concrete construction minimize the firm danger.

BY THE WAY

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

How patriotic is business!

The cotton textile code is promulgated, effective a certain day. And what, ladies and gentlemen, happens? Do all of the textile mills sit up nights getting ready for thee new program?

The answer, trusting souls, is that they do not. They proceed to act like a pack of wolves, each working with high fever and under high pressure, to see how much advance surplus they can pile up at the old low wages and with the old long work-week. The more they can pile up in surplus at the old low production costs, the more profit, kind people, they can pile up when prices advance under the new schedules of wages and hours.

You can look for an increase of about 5 per cent in price, on account of the new code. If there is additional increase, start yelling like blazes.

Of course, the industrial recovery act doesn't confer upon any body the power to go out and grab chisellers and throw them sans ceremony into the hoosegow. But the law does confer the power upon administrators and courts to get them by the neck in an orderly and lawful manner and do to them things drastic, swift and plenty.

So, observe the patriotism of business and watch for further happenings. The nation is coming swiftly to an era of higher wages and, of course, higher prices. But prices must not run too far ahead or there will be a grand smash—and trouble in carlots.

The holy fears of unions instilled into certain lines of business by paid professional union-hating propagandists is curious, useless and a fine commentary upon the good sense of executives. But it is there and it is slowing up the transition to the new state of affairs.

Business wants all the breaks, having learned little. But, unless it wakes up and "plays ball" what a sock it is doomed to get from what has been called "the club behind the door" which is snuggled up neatly in the national industrial recovery act.

Make no mistake, mesdames and messires, this new law is the most important thing in America. You can afford to give up a baseball game to find out what it's all about, if you don't already know. You can afford to burn lights late at night keeping posted.

Do your kidding about something else, not about NIRA, the seeress of modern America, the determining factor just now in our destiny. And, breathe it not abroad, in streets or public places, but there's a joker lurking for a lot of the union-hating babies of Big Business.

Verily, and no fooling, they are going to be greatly surprised.

Some misinformed storekeepers and others have gotten the idea that the national industrial recovery act justifies them in immediately raising prices. That is exactly what the recovery administration is seeking to avoid.

The law has been taken in some circles as a warrant to enter combinations to fix fees and prices and the scale has run upward to 100 per cent in numerous instances.

Price-boosting concerns have overlooked the essential point in the recovery program that wages should go up in advance of price increases or at least keep pace with them. In some cases wages have actually been advanced but in no instance has the increase been commensurate with the greater cost of the service or price of the commodity.

President Roosevelt has directed attention to the fact that the whole recovery program will fail if price increases are put ahead of the purchasing power of the consumer. That seems to be what is actually taking place all over the nation and the government will have to act quickly and stop this petty profiteering or the plan will be seriously impeded.

Recovery—big word, big doings—touring recovery offices, "looking 'em over"—getting "low down," as it is called.

Gen. Hugh Johnson is top man in this heap, unless you count Barney Baruch, who is surely some pumpkins in the new set-up.

Baruch, with an office in the state department, big adviser on international money and economics, has the allegiance of both Johnson and Farm Relief Administrator Peek. Now, to beat that you just about have to go back to Noah and his job as boss of the Ark.

A month from now maybe there will be order and some kind of routine in this vast new machine. But, today—mad house!

What is the job this mad house has on hand? Ah, ladies and gentlemen, it is the job of running the United States, as far as industry, agriculture, oil and railroads are concerned.

America wakes slowly to the fact that there is a new order of things—a smashing, busting, revolutionary new order, with absolutely not a darned thing as it was day before yesterday.

Gen. Pershing, at the head of his armies in France, wasn't much of a factotum, compared to these new commanders. Wait until the power begins to hit home—as it will.

But today there is that mad house, trying to find its way around its own offices. Men huddle in groups over desks in the midst of a racket that can be heard the length of a vast building.

The commerce building is so big a man can spend a half hour trying to find the office to which he is destined. Enormous.

"When do you get time to think?" you ask an official. "I don't," he answers, if he's on the square.

Where do they go to think and plan the giant moves that are today surely in the making?

Of course, in those rooms referred to as "upstairs" there are a few big, quiet offices, with magnificent rugs on large floors. But even there is a certain mad house atmosphere, too.

What? Whoops! Here are men, suddenly thrust into command of a nation's power plants and mills and mines. Who wouldn't go just a little bit nutty with excitement and thrill?

If President Roosevelt handles the present situation satisfactorily, we'll give him a tryout as a backlot baseball umpire.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

I. T. U. BRANDS IMPORTATION OF STRIKEBREAKERS DURING NEGOTIATIONS AS ACT OF WAR

Indianapolis, July 20.—Importation of strikebreakers to a city in which negotiations with employers are being conducted will henceforth be regarded as a declaration of war by the International Typographical union. The union's stand was set forth in the following resolution adopted by the executive council, meeting in headquarters here:

"Whereas, the International Typographical union has made every reasonable effort during a most trying period to maintain harmony in the printing industry by negotiation and conciliation of differences, and arbitration where conciliation failed; and;

"Whereas, members have continued to perform their duties under status quo conditions pending settlement of differences both as regards new contracts and wage adjustments under existing contracts; and,

"Whereas, in the face of fullest cooperation publishers in some cities have engaged the so-called open shop division of the American Newspaper Publishers' Association, which transported large crews of professional strikebreakers from city to city during negotiations for the purpose of intimidation; and,

"Whereas, in some instances these professional strikebreakers have been imported to force wage reductions and changes in conditions where there are unexpired contracts in existence and arbitration agreements in effect; and,

"Whereas, the presence of professional strikebreaking crews is not conducive to harmonious negotiations essential to recognition of mutuality of interest upon which all wage agreements should be based; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved, that from and after this date the importation of strikebreakers into any jurisdiction where contracts are being negotiated, or wage adjustments are under consideration, will be considered as an unfriendly act on the part of employers and a virtual declaration of industrial war, and that the International Typographical union will consider such conditions as justification for immediate withdrawal, without notice, of the members of this organization in the employ of publishers or employers guilty of such overt act; and, be it further

"Resolved, that a publisher or employer operating in more than one city, who violates an existing contract or arbitration agreement and locks out the members of this union, shall be considered to have sacrificed his right to protection under contracts which may be in effect in other cities in which he operates.

Big Industries Offer Codes As Conflict Looms

Labor Ready for Hard Fight on Company Union Issue — Textile Codes in Effect, Benefiting Host of Workers.

Washington, July 20.—With big hearings running, with several highly important codes filed and with the administration on the verge of calling for voluntary national observance of definite wage and hour schedules, the Industrial Recovery act moved its ponderous machinery forward this week at fairly high speed.

The cotton textile code went into effect, raising wages, cutting hours and taking the children out of the mills. Almost all of the balance of the textile industry, including silk and rayon, voluntarily came under the protecting shelter of the cotton code.

Steel and lumber offered the administration their rules and a healthy part of the coal industry did likewise. But this speed does not mean freedom from problems. It means tremendous problems.

Code Violation Charged.

On the first effective day of the cotton code complaints came from Tennessee and Georgia that mills were violating the code provisions. Quick investigation is promised, with remedy.

The steel code laid on Gen. Hugh S. Johnson's doorstep the company union issue, with its elaborate provisions calculated to protect the industry's set-up in that field. Indications are that other codes will seek to pattern after steel, if, indeed, they do not copy its provisions verbatim. The recovery administration will at least "scrutinize most carefully" these provisions and labor will go into the hearings prepared to make the fight of its life to knock them out of the code on the ground, probably, that the labor provisions of the law itself are sufficiently in the field of labor relations.

One Million Benefit.

As the textile codes went into effect and steel and other industries raised wages, it was estimated that nearly a million workers benefited by increased pay or employment through shorter working hours.

George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, expressed the opinion that 100,000 new jobs would be created by operation of the textile codes, covering cotton textiles, rayon, silk and thread industries.

Steel companies, including independents and subsidiaries of the United States Steel corporation, announced 15 per cent wage increases in anticipation of raises proposed in codes now before the Recovery Act administration. Officials of steel companies estimated that employment in the industry has jumped 233 per cent in July, as compared with the first quarter of the year.

EMPLOYING PRINTERS REFUSE TO DISCUSS CODE WITH UNIONS

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago, July 20.—Officers of international printing trades unions, in session in Chicago for the purpose of endeavoring to reach an agreement with the employing commercial printers of the country in reference to a code for the industry, expressed keen disappointment and resentment over failure of their objective because the employers' meeting was dominated by the open shop element, under the leadership of Thomas E. Donnelley, president of R. R. Donnelley & Sons Company of Chicago, operator of the world's largest strictly non-union printing plant.

The invitation of the union officers to the employers' meeting to appoint representatives to a joint conference was spurned. The employers adopted the code prepared and submitted by Donnelley. Previous to the meeting rumors were rife that union employers would put up a fight against Donnelley, but there was no fight, except that the country editors who are also engaged in the commercial end of the industry bolted and drafted a code a trifle better than the Donnelley document.

It is rumored that Donnelley has groomed a close personal friend to become deputy administrator to govern the printing industry. The right of Donnelley's friend to sit in judgment will be challenged if the appointment is made.

Howard Raps Employers.

Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical union, gave expression to the views of himself and colleagues in a statement given to International Labor News Service. Mr. Howard charges the employers with trying to participate in the new deal in industry with a "stacked deck of cards." He says that the printing trades unions will invoke federal authority to compel recalcitrant employers to obey the law.

Beggar: Just a minute, mister.
Millionaire: Yes, what is it?
Beggar: My wife is starving.
Millionaire: So's mine. It's tough on the girls, but it is the only way to get that fashionable, slim figure.

The practical trade unionist always demands the union label, shop card or button.

aration of any code or agreement that something like the following be inserted:

"It is clearly understood that the national industrial recovery act does not impair, in any particular, the constitutional rights of the employe and employer to bargain individually or collectively as may be mutually satisfactory to them; nor does it impair the joint right of the employer and employe to operate an open shop.

"Nothing in this code is to prevent the selection, retention and advancement of employes on the basis of their individual merit, without regard to their affiliation or non-affiliation with any labor organization."

We are writing this general letter to the manufacturers of Tennessee in order that it might answer the many inquiries this association is receiving, most of which are growing out of newspaper advertising campaigns and the distribution of circulars among employes with reference to joining labor unions.

The Tennessee Manufacturers' association intends to comply, in every particular, with the new industrial law which will soon be over every industrial enterprise in America. This association, like other organizations, however, believes that the freedom of contract between employer and employe should not be impaired, and that there are certain other inalienable rights vouchsafed the manufacturers under the constitution and existing laws, which must be respected, consequently we want to urge the manufacturers of Tennessee to think straight, go slow and act wisely in the immediate and future conduct of their business, because when codes and agreements are "signed, sealed and delivered" many of the provisions might prove to be a "millstone" instead of a benefit.

The Tennessee Manufacturers' association has one of its attorneys in Washington this week in order that he might get first hand information which can be used for the benefit of the manufacturers of Tennessee.

The Tennessee Manufacturers' association was organized twenty-two years ago to help and protect the industries of this state. Our efforts have been devoted largely in making Tennessee a profitable state for industrial development and advancement, and we do not want to see anything happen to our industries now which will retard or burden them in the conduct of their business. We want to say again that if the manufacturers of Tennessee will co-operate through this organization, we will see to it that those things which rightfully belong to the industries of this state will be given them.

Sincerely yours,
C. C. GILBERT, Secretary.

It costs no more in effort or money to secure UNION GOODS and SERVICE, if you demand and insist on them.

FEDERAL REPORT SHOWS DROP IN PRISON PRODUCTS SOLD IN COMPETITION WITH FREE LABOR

Washington, July 20.—A decrease in the prison products sold on the open market in competition with free labor and free industry is shown by the survey of prison labor just completed by the bureau of labor statistics of the U. S. department of labor. Congress was convinced in 1929 that too many prison goods are still sold on the open market and therefore passed the Hawes-Cooper act which goes into effect 1934 and will tend further to restrict the sale of prison goods in competition with free industry. The report of the department of labor shows that the states are beginning to respond to this legislative stimulus to establish a sound system of manufacture and distribution of prison products.

The state-use system of prison labor, which is supported by the American Federation of Labor, in 1932 had increased in favor with the states to 65 per cent of all production, whereas in 1923, 55 per cent of all productive labor in the state and federal prisons were working under the state-use system.

According to the survey, there were 158,947 prisoners confined in state and federal prisons in 1932. This compares with 84,761 in 1923, the year of the bureau's last previous survey on this subject. The figures represent an increase of 87 per cent in the nine-year period.

Of the number incarcerated in 1932, 82,276 were engaged in productive labor, 52,986 were engaged in various prison duties (such as cooking, washing, keeping the cells clean, scrubbing prison walls, etc.); 6,558 were sick and 17,027 were idle.

The 52,276 prisoners engaged in productive labor produced goods having a value of over $75,000,000. Among the most important classes of goods produced were 22,000,000 shorts having a value of over $8,000,000; 63,000,000 pounds of binder twine having a value of over $4,000,000; and more than 36,000,000 automobile license tags. Twelve hundred miles of new road, having a valuation of over $15,000,000, was built by prison labor in 1932. Approximately $5,000,000 worth of this road work was built in Georgia.

Of the 116 state prisons, 66 paid a money wage to all or a part of the inmates; 48 paid no compensation of any kind for work done; and 2 allowed credit of time on sentences for prisoners doing certain classes of work. Of the 12 federal prisons, 7 paid wages to prisoners for work done and 5 did not. In most of the institutions the pay was nominal, generally ranging from 2 cents to not more than 15 cents per day, although in a few prisons the scales were considerably higher.

Of the prisoners employed at productive labor in 1932, 1.8 per cent had nominal working hours of less than 24 per week; 55.2 per cent worked 44 hours or less per week; while 21.8 per cent worked 60 hours or over per week.

The productive work of prisoners in federal and state prisons was carried on under several systems, namely, state-use, state-account, contract, piece-price and public-works and ways. Of particular interest is the distinction between the state-use system and the state-account system. In the former system, all products are used in state institutions and none is sold in the open market. Under the state-account system, prison products are offered for sale and thus come into competition with products of free-labor and industry.

The lease system, i. e., the system of leasing out inmates to employers at so much per prisoner, has entirely disappeared from practice, the survey revealed.

After the close of the services a gentleman said to me: 'Sir, you made a great mistake, that young man is an idiot.' Since then I have always been afraid to reprove those who misbehave in chapel lest I should reprove another idiot." During the rest of the service there was good order. MANEUVERING OF EMPLOYERS IS DEPLORED

Discriminations Indicate Insincerity.

COMPLAINTS OF "RAW DIALS" PILE UP

Stories of Patriotism Belied by Charges of Unfair Treatment.

Telephone and telegraph wires between Chattanooga and Washington were kept busy this week carrying complaints by local trades union officers of discriminations against workers, principally in some of the textile mills, because these workers are taking advantage of the right guaranteed them by the recovery act to join with a real union, and have refused to "fall for" various and sundry schemes concocted by employers to keep their employes from legitimate organized effort to benefit themselves in the manner for which the recovery act was passed.

While the daily newspapers are filled with articles under big headlines quoting this, that and the other manufacturer, mill owner, etc., as saying wages have been, or will be, increased, labor officials have been swamped with appeals for assistance from workers who have been discharged, "laid off" or what have you —and in the background always is the statement that these employes have expressed the opinion in one way or another that they preferred to trust their future under the recovery act by becoming a member of a genuine trades union instead of a "club" or "sewing circle" formed under the careful direction of company representatives.

Trade unionists are pointing out that the same old "line-up" which has monopolized the public prints for years with its hypocritical protestations of fair dealing is rushing to the headlines again with fervent patriotic statements, while subordinates are laying plans to defeat the purposes of the recovery act. This, of course, is held as not true generally, there being a great number of employers who are and always have been fair who are now earnestly striving, at considerable sacrifice, to co-operate with the president's plans.

In spite of this opposition, however, hundreds continue to join the various established unions, and new organizations are being formed as rapidly as possible. Open meetings of the various locals are being held almost nightly, and many who have never held membership in their particular craft union are "signing up" for the promised new deal.

That the matter of discriminations has officially reached Washington from various sources is shown in advices from the capital Thursday, and some definite action is confidently expected from the administration within a very short time.

Meeting to discuss possible steps to stop discrimination against union organization activities all over the nation, the labor advisory board of the national recovery administration decided to bring the matter to the attention of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator. It was expected Gen. Johnson would soon issue a statement clarifying the stand of the recovery administration on the matter.

The labor advisory board heard reports from a score of unions to the effect that representatives in many industries who have offered their services to wage-earners desiring to form unions have been confronted with the discharge of those seeking the information.

Dr. Leo Wolman, chairman of the board, presided. Spokesmen for workers in the textile, coal and other industries reported that discrimination was being practiced by employers in many sections against those approaching union agents for information.

In the case of the textile union, it was asserted that the specific provisions of this code, now in effect, barring discrimination because of union membership, were being violated.

The labor advisory committee designated President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, as the labor spokesman to present officially labor's case when the steel code comes up for public hearings. These hearings will serve as a test of the bona fide unions as against the "company union."

Although the proposed steel code includes the mandatory provisions of the recovery act governing collective bargaining, it also contains a strong declaration for the "open shop," which organized labor declares nullifies the collective bargaining clauses.

Turn on the Light!

Turn on the light! Let the truth be known, regardless of consequences! Honor to whom honor is due, and all that sort of thing!

The Chattanooga News, one day this week, printed a three-column photograph of three women, a mother and two daughters, working in their home for a local hosiery mill, and it was charged that the three members of this family, which consists of a widow and eight children, had, combined, earned 46 cents on the particular day that the photo was taken. But the next issue of the afternoon paper published a statement from the owner of the mill that the woman had made on that particular day 59 cents. He also stated that on another day she had even earned 70 cents. Furthermore, the textile mill official was quoted as declaring the unfortunate family had been given food and even money by the "poor girls in the mill" and management of the mill. In fact, according to the story, he himself had kicked in with 50 cents cash money on one occasion for the relief of the family.

Now, we believe this case should be sifted to the bottom. If three members of this famliy earned 59 cents working for this mill, instead of 46 cents, as charged, the public should know the truth.

By all means, turn on the light!

And another thing. A correspondent of The Times indicates, in Friday morning's issue, that J. Harvey Wilson, executive of the Richmond mill who has been in violent disagreement with Mr. Roosevelt's recovery program, won the war and made the world safe for democracy by his work for the liberty loan drive. According to this correspondent, Mr. J. Harvey Wilson, "hatless and coatless, ran hither and yon for a straight week fighting to get money with which your parents and their property could be protected, and he put it over—the liberty loan of 1918. As subscriptions were tabulated (I was at the adding machine in Harvey's office uptown)," the Times correspondent dramatically continues, "and a district was seen short a few hundreds of its quota, and finally the total shortage was a few dollars less than $5,000, it was Harvey Wilson who nonchalantly flipped a signature card on the table, and without speaking left the room. The card was his additional subscription of $5,000 more liberty bonds."

Mr. J. Harvey Wilson's patriotism no one will question, but there may be a few recalcitrants who merely lost a leg, an arm or an eye or two who will rise up to claim an equal share of the glory which Mr. Wilson gained by his investment in liberty bonds.

Now, we believe if Mr. J. Harvey Wilson won the war he should have full credit for it, and also, as suggested by the correspondent quoted, the contrbiution of Mr. J. Harvey Wilson's sock mill, which "has been feeding 1,500 to 2,000 people, clothing them, entertaining them and educating their children for nearly a half-century," should not go unnoticed.

Again, turn on the light! Give full credit to our patriotic southern sock-mill executives. Let the full truth be known!

We do our part!

Union Men Laid Off; Go Back With Pay

An interesting item is printed in the current issue of the Piedmont (Ala.) Journal, live weekly organ which is sponsoring the cause of organized labor in a mill in that city which is said to be a branch of the Standard-Coosa-Thatcher company.

The item, in a front-page box, relates how two workers were laid off for union activities and went back to work after a week, with full pay for their lost time, supplied by their fellow workers. It follows:

It was the signal for rejoicing and great applause among the members of the textile union Monday morning when Glenn Kines and Herbert McLeod were put back to work with the mill yard crew.

The two men, both members of the textile union, had been laid off but they were not allowed to miss a pay day. Last Saturday morning, at the union meeting, at Masonic hall, where the two men were present, members of Local No. 1745, United Textile Workers of America, took up a collection and instantly there was a veritable rain of money, and the men were paid their usual salaries, with a nice bonus to spare.

Monday morning, as they were noticed going back on the job, a mighty shout of applause went up from union members.

NOTICE!

A joint meeting of the Executive Board and Entertainment Committee of Chattanooga Trades and Labor Council will be held Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, at the hall, Seventh and Market streets. All members of these bodies are urgently requested to be present, as important matterms are to be considered.

MR. McDONALD FALLS IN WITH RECOVERY ACT?

Merchant Prince Indicates Possible Change.

OFFERS CO-OPERATION TO MR. ROOSEVELT

Johnson Tire Company Not Represented in Advertising Columns of Throw-Sheet.

Indication that Roy McDonald, manager of the so-called "Home Stores," may have begun to see a light was seen Friday morning in an advertisement in the daily Times, which pledged, jointly, McDonald's stores and the Hill stores to 100 per cent. co-operation with our president in his program of national recovery.

Local trades unionists and others, who recalled McDonald's activities and his economic philosophy as expressed to Chattanooga workers, were wondering if the grocer-baker-dairyman-printer-publisher-individualist has indeed experienced a change of heart and recognized the possibility that co-operation is a valuable asset in the program for industrial recovery.

One more or less radical working man remarked, facetiously, that a day's pay for a 12-year-old under the "new deal" might even be three figbars instead of two. This reference was to a report printed in last week's issue of The Labor World that a youngster had been engaged for the day by a "Home Store," and after working twelve and one-half hours had been compensated with two penny confections. Another suggested that McDonald might even agree to some certain number of hours for the employes of his varied interests to work each day, replacing the system which he himself announced — that a man who worked for him would begin the day when he (McDonald) ordered, and quit when he was told to.

It was also suggested that public opinion may have operated to some extent in disturbing the individualistic philosophy of the grocer-baker-dairyman-printer-publisher. This opinion is justified, it is pointed out, by the unusual demand for a large sticker issued by Chattanooga Typographical union, intended for use on automobile windshields and rear windows, reading "Roy McDonald, Owner of the Home Stores, Wants Wages Cut. I Trade With Merchants Who Believe in Living Wages."

Only one thousand of these stickers were printed to begin with, but it quickly became apparent that an additional order would have to be placed. The most gratifying feature of this instance, it was said Thursday, is that scores of auto owners who have no connection whatever with organized labor, and some who are not even classed as wage-workers, urgently appealed for copies to place on their own cars.

Suggestion was made this week that McDonald's throw-sheet, for which he employed an out-of-town operator, might be renamed the "McDonald-Fowler Advertiser," because of the fact that the Fowler stores appear to be about the only local advertiser left, and further because Fowler's idea of working people's wages and hours, as shown through his connection with the defunct Mascot Stove company, seem to be well in alignment with those of the grocer-baker-dairyman-printer-publisher.

Last week's issue of McDonald's experiment failed to carry the advertisement of the Johnson Tire company, and labor people who have in the past patronized the publications which have a live-and-let-live policy.

Labor World readers will remember that McDonald told a committee which called upon him that he was an individualist, and that anyone who works for him will come to work at such time as he orders, and will quit by the same sign.

President Hoover, he said, made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders to keep wages up as an aid to prosperity. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer-baker-dairyman - printer - publisher-individualist averred, we would now be out of the depression, and further, he held, we will never be out until wages are further and further cut.

Organized Labor Forced to Move To Larger Quarters

New Meeting Place at Seventh and Market — Roosevelt Hall to Be Dedicated.

Unprecedented increase in membership of many local unions, and formation of a large number of new organizations, has forced Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and its affiliated locals into larger quarters, and new halls were secured this week at Seventh and Market streets, which include the entire third floor, with entrance on East Seventh street.

There are in all, in the new quarters, six halls, with approximately three times the floor space which the old halls offered.

The largest of these, which will be used for an auditorium, was officially designated at last Monday night's meeting of Central Body, as "Roosevelt hall," and at an early date appropriate dedication ceremonies will be arranged, combined with a general housewarming.

Carpenters, painters, plumbers and electricians have combined for the last two weeks in making the new quarters attractive, and the result is that Central Body and the local unions now boast the most elaborate and spacious meeting halls which the labor movement has called "home" in the history of the organizations.

Tuesday was "moving day," and after a few finishing touches the quarters will be in such condition as to be a matter of pride for trades unionists to exhibit to visitors, local or "outsiders."

Glass Blowers Get 20 Per Cent. Boost In Pay Envelopes

Members of Branch 92 Affected by National Agreement Signed This Week.

Some fifteen members of Branch 92, Glass Bottle Blowers, employed by the Chattanooga Glass company, will be beneficiaries of an agreement between the National Association of Glass Bottle Manufacturers and the international union, according to William B. Bland, secretary of the local branch. If working hours are reduced, as is expected, Mr. Bland said Thursday, possibly a half-dozen more workers will be added to the rolls. The agreement affects at present only the "hand-blown" department, but it is stated that negotiations are in progress which will affect 6,000 in the "automatic" branch of the industry.

An International Labor News Service story received by The Labor World Thursday reads as follows:

Atlantic City, N. J., July 27.—Restoring the 1932 scale, the National Association of Glass Bottle Manufacturers has granted a 20 per cent. increase in wages to 4,000 men in the hand-blown department of the Glass Bottle Blowers' association of the United States and Canada, of which James Maloney is president.

The wage increase, agreed on at conference between the union and manufacturers here, takes effect Sept. 1. Negotiations affecting 6,000 skilled union workers in the automatic branch of the industry were begun following announcement of the increase for the hand workers.

Prevailing Wage May Be Included In City Contracts

Commission Passes on First Reading Ordinance Providing for Fair Pay Scale.

City commission Tuesday passed on first reading an ordinance providing that prevailing rates of pay and hours of labor shall be mandatory on all public works contracted for by the city of Chattanooga.

The ordinance, almost identical with a resolution which passed the county court unanimously at the recent session of that body, insures at least a rate of pay for workers on city projects equal to that prevailing for similar work on private projects.

The ordinance provides that all bids shall be submitted with the "prevailing rate" and the maximum number of hours included, and is regarded as a protection for Chattanooga workers against cheap-labor contractors who sometimes make estimates based upon fair labor costs and then "sweat" the workers out of an extra profit.

Operating Engineers Plan Session Sunday

Operating engineers in the Chattanooga territory are invited to attend an open meeting at the new Central Labor hall, Seventh and Market streets, Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock. It is stated that already some half-hundred have expressed their intention of attending to hear and take part in a discussion of the recovery act and the new deal as it will affect this craft.

A representative of the international union will be present, it was stated, prepared to confer with any who desire information.

Seven States Pass Minimum Pay Laws Since January 1

State Officials Invited by Labor Department to Confer in Washington on Enforcement of New Legislation.

Washington, July 20.—Minimum wage legislation made inroads into the middle west recently when Illinois passed a minimum wage law, making the seventh state to pass such a wage law since the first of the year.

The law follows the pattern of all the other state laws and enforcement problems will be the same, according to Secretary of Labor Perkins.

An invitation to confer in Washington with Secretary Perkins on the subject of enforcement of the minimum wage laws will be sent to officials of the seven states which have passed laws this year. They are: New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Utah, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Illinois.

Recovery act administration officials will confer with the state officials but the state minimum wage laws will not in any way be connected with the industrial recovery act. It is thought that the passage of these state laws will strengthen the fabric of the national program however.

Kennedy Production Co. Is 100 Per Cent Union

St. Petersburg, Fla.—The Aubrey Kennedy Production company, motion picture firm, recently won to this city from a number of hot competitors and now expanding rapidly, has entered into wage and working agreements with five local union crafts, it is announced by V. S. Herring, president of Central Labor union.

Contracts were signed with locals of the International Association of Theatrical Employes, the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, the Painters, Paperhangers and Decorators, and the Electrical Workers. A contract pending with the Brick Masons, Plasterers and Tile Setters will make the Kennedy organization 100 per cent unionized.

Aubrey Kennedy, pioneering the motion picture industry in Florida, took over Weedon's Island here last February and started to convert the old St. Reno clubhouse into a studio. Work has been continuous since and now production is under way on "Chloe," starring Olive Borden, under the direction of Marshall Neilan, famous wherever pictures are shown.

CITY SCHOOLS AGAIN BECOME STORM CENTER

Discharge of Teachers Brings Protest.

INTIMATED SMITH TO BE "DISCIPLINED"

Central Body Deplores "Injustice" to Children and Teachers.

First heralded as a movement against non-residents, and later explained as an "economy" move, the discharge of city school teachers to a number variously estimated at from fifty to two hundred has again set "the pot to boiling" regarding education affairs, with the city department remaining the center of the storm.

Local 246, American Federation of Teachers, has taken the position that committees were promised last spring there would be no wholesale discharge of city teachers, and that to wait until the eve of the reopening, when many had spent money in attendance at summer school, and others had naturally made no move to seek employment elsewhere for the winter, is a palpable injustice, and unfair to say the least.

Stanton H. Smith, president of the Teachers' federation, speaking for the organization, last week recalled in a prepared statement given The News, that city teachers had been led to believe their positions were secure, and protested the wholesale "firing" of those who have held positions in some cases for years, without previous notice.

For his temerity in thus speaking for the teachers' body, Mr. Smith has been indirectly threatened with "discipline" for "insubordination." It has even been suggested that the "young professor" may himself be made an example of, and discharged in order that other teachers may learn a lesson in "loyalty."

Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, in a resolution unanimously adopted Monday night, took the position that to discharge in great numbers school teachers at the present time, when the number is "already inadequate," would be an injustice to school children, and to teachers who had reason to anticipate their continued employment.

The resolution, which was presented to city commission Tuesday, was as follows:

Whereas, the department of education has announced its intention to dismiss a large group of school teachers although the number is already inadequate; and

Whereas, this action comes in the middle of the summer after teachers have remained in involuntary idleness without seeking other jobs in anticipation of retaining their present positions, and others have spent a good share if not all of their savings to attend summer school; and

Whereas, such a policy is unjust and inhumane in view of the fact that such notices of dismissal could and should have been given no later than the close of school last spring; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we, the Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, do hereby petition the honorable board of commissioners to reconsider this action in justice to the children, in fairness to the teachers, and in the interest of our educational system.

DEFENDS HEALTH AND SCHOOL WORK

The "anti-social policy" of curtailment of health and education was hit by Central Body in another resolution unanimously adopted Monday night, and the purpose of labor to "fight to the finish" against such curtailment was stated.

The resolution recites the conviction of the workers that the health service and public schools are the life-blood of our democracy and offer the best insurance against repetition of the debacle from which we are starting to recover.

This resolution was also offered city commission Tuesday, as follows:

Whereas, we are convinced that health service and public schools are the life-blood of our democracy and offer the best insurance against the repetition of the

A new plastic material called "Vinylite" can be put to many uses, from the making of dishes to doors, molding and baseboard. It may be used as a lacquer, or to impregnate cloth or paper, or as a cement to fix veneer imperishably to steel. "Vinylite" is made from vinyl resins.

Street car companies are now experimenting with a new type of car which is much quieter and faster than the old cars. Wheel cores cushioned in rubber help to give silence. The new cars are said to have faster pickups than the best automobiles and have automatic devices which do away with jerky stops and starts. New type springs, giving riding ease. Though not fully perfected, a few of the new cars are now in service.

And Labor Led the Way!

The United States government asks all Americans to patronize those firms which display the NIRA emblem, which indicates they have signed the blanket code for minimum pay and maximum hours.

Thus, inferentially, it says, DON'T PATRONIZE THOSE WHO DO NOT DISPLAY THE EMBLEM!

That's boycott.

That's what unions have done ever since there has been such a thing as a union label.

Unions have said: "PATRONIZE PRODUCTS BEARING THE UNION LABEL."

Unions have said this because the Union Label stands for FAIR WORKING CONDITIONS.

They have said, "Do not buy goods that do not bear the label."

And for this the courts of the United States have hauled unions up and put them under injunction. The famous Danbury Hatters case grew out of boycott.

Now, behold, the United States government, finding sweatshop and exploiting employers refusing to be decent voluntarily, says to all America: "DO NOT PATRONIZE THEIR PRODUCTS."

It seems, after all, that through all the years the UNIONS HAVE BEEN RIGHT AND THE COURTS HAVE BEEN WRONG.

The whole force of government now lines up for THE UNION POSITION. THE UNION LABEL LED THE WAY.

A Deserved Criticism

The failure of the recent International Labor conference at Geneva, Switzerland, to do something definite to relieve unemployment by the application of the shorter work week is sharply condemned by the Scottish Typographical Journal, the organ of the Scottish Typographical Association. Its editor says:

> "The framing of the 40-hour convention has been postponed for a year. Not only so, but if the reactionaries had their way the matter would be indefinitely shelved. And to our utter humiliation we find that the representative of this 'national' government of ours was in the forefront of this retrogressive action. * * * That a reduction of hours in itself will not solve the unemployment problem is undisputed by even its most insistent propagandists. At the same time, action in this respect would undoubtedly go far to ease the economic problem by employing more people and with a resultant increased purchasing power. It is all the more regrettable, therefore, that the opportunity was not taken to give a progressive lead to the settlement of the problem presently confronting the world."

There are 30,000,000 unemployed men and women throughout the world. The refusal of the conference to take positive action on this great emergency and give prompt consideration to the shorter work week as a remedy for it, is in sharp contrast to the policy of the government of the United States which has dramatically met the problem of the jobless by inaugurating the 30-hour week on public works and a variable week not in excess of forty hours in private industry.

Hesiod's saying that the man who procrastinates struggles with ruin is equally true of the employers and their governments who dominated the Geneva conference. Their policy of delay was evidently applied in the hope that capitalist production with maximum private profit as its only goal will in some way resurrect itself on the same old basis of long hours.

The government of the United States does not subscribe to such a foolish idea. President Roosevelt realizes that machine production makes shorter hours of labor possible, and that the 12,000,000 jobless, largely the offspring of labor-displacing machinery, make the shorter work week imperative if civilization is to continue.

The International Labor office has certainly led the world in conferences on unemployment and the hours of labor, and in procrastinating its final decisions. But when it gets right down to the action that does something, Uncle Sam heads the international procession for wholesale reduction of the length of the work day and the work week with its absorption into employment of millions of the American jobless.

Price Fixing Upheld

The constitutionality of the law enacted by the last legislature of the State of New York authorizing a state board to fix milk prices has been affirmed by the court of appeals of that state.

The law was enacted to meet the emergency caused by milk being sold too cheaply to be profitable to the milk producers. This situation was met by making the sale of milk at a too low price a crime, the question of price being determined by a majority vote of three officials of the state milk control board. The preamble to the law declared that the low price of milk created a temporary emergency which justified the statute.

A Rochester grocer was convicted of violating the milk price orders issued by the milk control board and fined by a Rochester court. The defendant took the case to the court of appeals.

Chief Judge Cuthbert W. Pound, who wrote the prevailing opinion, said:

> We are unable to say that the legislature is lacking in power, not only to regulate and encourage the production of milk, but also, when conditions require, to regulate the prices to be paid for it so that a fair return may be obtained by the producers and a vital industry preserved from destruction.

In emphasizing his opinion, Judge Pound declared that at times the well known policy of non-interference by the state with individual freedom must yield to the policy of compulsion for the general welfare. He said the exercise of state's power to regulate private business could only be invoked under "special circumstances," and added that "it may be invoked when the legislature is dealing with a paramount industry upon which the prosperity of the entire state in a large measure depends."

WHAT HAPPENS TO WORKERS WHEN THE PLANT IS CLOSED

Harrisburg, Pa., July 27.—The results of a study by the Pennsylvania department of labor and industry to find out what happened to 324 women workers after their dismissal when two silk mills closed permanently appear in a recent issue of "Labor and Industry." At the time the women were interviewed, ten months after they had been laid off, somewhat over half were employed, considerably more than a third were jobless though hunting for work, and 5 per cent. were not looking for jobs. Median week's earnings for the women securing new jobs in silk factories had dropped from between $19 and $20 for a full week in the closed mills to $15.69 for the full-time workers and $8.50 for the others. Of the families represented by these women, 106 were obliged to go into debt or to secure outside assistance and 77 drew on savings or borrowed money on life insurance or other property.

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

Now, there's the matter of dead cats. Dead cats undoubtedly are unpleasant things to have around. Dead cats are even unpleasant to write about, even in an improperly constructed sentence. Dead cats in the back yard, or in the gutter, or on the roof, are unpleasant enough. But dead cats in the air—there's something to conjure with. And especially if the air is to be full of dead cats.

Particularly the whole things brings up the question of whose cats. And who is there that keeps cats enough so that the air may be full of them when dead? True, there are nocturnal hours when it seems as if there were cats enough, in all conscience, to fill the air, dead or alive. But the better vision offered by daylight seldom reveals such a plethora of cats.

However, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, the grim-visaged administrator of NIRA, promises us the air will soon be full of dead cats. His words, exactly.

Now, ladies and gentlemen of the citizenry, there is something to contemplate. If we can only behold an atmosphere surcharged with the presence of the right kind of dead cats—the right breed, perhaps—there will be great multitudes who will join in when the band strikes up, "NIRA, my God, to Thee."

If the air can be sprinkled plentifully with the dead cats of the steel trust, the oil trust, the Morgan empire and a few more like them, that will be something to write home about. Ah, then, "Tell it not in Gath; publish it not in the streets of Askelon," but wire it to the home folks.

Now of course what Gen. Johnson meant was that before long the atmosphere is going to become filled with fight and that somebody is going to get beautifully and plentifully licked.

That sounds like good news, because it is clear that the general has no intention of being the one to be licked. He intends to go the limit to enforce the law and to see to it that those opposing it furnish the dead cats, or shall we say, furnish the cats which are to become dead, sufficiently to fill the air.

The remark was, perhaps, a passing flash—but it was seemingly a most illuminating flash. It may turn out to have been one of those remarks more illuminating than a book full of deep stuff.

Feline density in the air is something to contemplate. It's one of those pungent remarks, like "don't monkey with the buzz saw." It intimates that there is a day ahead when recalcitrants will be called to stand forth and face bare fists to a knockout.

Clearly something like that has to come. Greed has never yet surrendered in good grace. It has always been nasty right down to the last line of the last verse of the last chapter.

There is little reason to expect that it has changed its ways. Its cats will probably be as putrid as ever, when dead, but when dead they can be properly interred, without epitaph—and we can then look forward to air fit to breathe, air that smells like freedom, with a new cleanliness and wholesomeness. Let it rain dead cats!

Tacoma Teamsters Win Wage Slash Strike

Tacoma, Wash.—Members of Teamsters' and Chauffeurs' union, Local No. 313, won their militant wage cut strike against the nine taxi and trucking concerns comprising the Truck Owners' association here. The men walked out when the association imposed an arbitrary wage cut after having broken off arbitration proceedings provided for in the agreement with the union.

Following the walkout the Tacoma Central Labor council placed the Truck Owners' association on organized labor's "We don't patronize" list.

The settlement provided that the men should return to work on the same wage schedules as prevailed before the walkout. There were a few minor adjustments in helpers' scales. The settlement was brought about by the intervention of Ernie C. Marsh, representing the conciliation service of the U. S. department of labor at Washington, and Will Coates, labor commissioner of the Washington state department of labor and industries.

Representatives of the truck owners went into the first arbitration meetings with the threat that unless their proposed wage cut was accepted by the teamsters by a certain date the negotiations would be abruptly ended. They were surprised that this threat did not cow the teamsters into calm submission, and were doubly surprised when the teamsters met the cut with a walkout.

"Once again," declares the Tacoma Labor Advocate, "unionism, labor solidarity, has revealed its power to protect the working standards of the membership."

CHICAGO PUBLIC BACKS LABOR'S FIGHT AGAINST SCHOOL PROGRAM

Great Mass Meeting Roars Approval of Slashing Attack on Board of Education's Plan to Wreck Public Educational System in the Name of "Economy."

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago, July 27.—That the educated, thinking people of Chicago are more in sympathy with the principles and concepts of the American Federation of Labor at this time than at any previous time in the history of this city was made plain at a gigantic mass meeting of citizens held at the Chicago stadium.

The audience of 25,000, called together to protest against the wrecking of the Chicago public school system by shyster politicians under orders from evil-minded, avaricious big bankers, gave the biggest ovation of the evening to John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor. The vast throng arose and cheered President Fitzpatrick for three minutes after he had concluded his presentation of labor's case against the board of education. It was not an organized labor meeting, but was held under the direction of organizations embracing many classes of citizens. Speakers represented universities, parent-teachers associations, the Kiwanis International, churches and various educational organizations.

Board's Program Assailed.

Mr. Fitzpatrick read a lengthy resolution which had been adopted by the Chicago Federation of Labor, copies of which had been forwarded to various public officials, including President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Interior Ickes.

The central thought of the resolution was to the effect that the proposed program of the board of education, adopted at a secret meeting, would deprive the children of the poor of needed educational advantages, intensify the unemployment situation and sabotage the plans of President Roosevelt for industrial recovery.

President Fitzpatrick brought the audience to its feet in roaring approval when he launched into a slashing attack upon Melvin A. Traylor, international banker, whom he charged with giving bad advice to Mayor Edward J. Kelly, who appointed and controls a majority of the present school board. Mr. Fitzpatrick characterized Mr. Traylor as a "public enemy."

It was only a year ago that the democratic national convention, meeting in the same great auditorium where the mass meeting of outraged citizens above referred to was held, rejected Melvin A. Traylor as a presidential candidate and chose Franklin Delano Roosevelt as its standard bearer.

Traylor Reported Plotting.

It is currently rumored that Traylor, still smarting from wounds received during his vain pursuit of the presidency, is sulking against the present plans of his successful rival. Head of one of the world's biggest banks, the First National of Chicago, Traylor is in a position to wield a tremendous influence in undertakings for industrial recovery.

Strike Ties Up Studios.

Hollywood, Cal.—Production of three pictures was halted at the Columbia studios by a strike of union workers.

A sympathetic walkout of electricians, cameramen, propertymen and other craftsmen followed a strike of sound technicians.

The dispute involved classification of the studio as "independent" or a member of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., of which Will H. Hays is president. Different wage scales prevail in the two classifications.

Green Denounces U. S. Government Dismissal Policy

Says Uncle Sam's Action Is Inconsistent With Declared Aim of Providing Employment and Raising Buying Power.

Washington, July 13.—The inconsistency of the federal government in dismissing thousands of employes in the name of economy at the time it was rushing preparations to spend billions of dollars to make employment and raise buying power was emphasized in a statement by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor.

Thousands of government employes were dismissed, furloughed or retired as the new fiscal year began. Some 3,000 were let out in Washington alone.

President Green said that the government might point the way to better conditions by instituting the 30-hour week and increasing wages. "It ought to set an example for employers in private industry," he said.

In his statement Green pointed out that the government is bending every energy to make employment through the national industrial act. He continued:

"On the other hand, the federal government is increasing unemployment by dismissing government workers by the thousands, and reducing buying power through reduction in wages and salaries and dismissals and furloughs. Here is presented a truly paradoxical situation. Consistency would require that the government, which after all is the largest employer of labor, should conform to the spirit as well as the law of the industrial recovery act.

"It ought to lead in reducing hours for its employes, in creating work opportunities and in raising wages. It ought to set an example for employers in private industry.

"The six-hour day and five-day week in government service would very greatly increase employment opportunities and would, in all probability, make wholesale dismissals and furloughs unnecessary."

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigars and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

4. To pay "white-collar" workers not less than $15 a week in cities of 500,000 population or more; not less than $14.50 a week in cities between 250,000 and 500,000 population, and not less than $14 in any city between 2,500 and 250,000 population.

Minimum Wage Provisions.

5. To pay mechanics, factory workers and artisans not less than 40 cents an hour, unless the hourly rate for such work was less than 40 cents on July 15, 1929, in which case the latter rate should be paid, but not less than 30 cents an hour.

6. Not to reduce for the shorter work week the wages now paid employes for the longer work week.

7. Not to employ any persons under 16 years of age.

A printed form containing these provisions, in addition to a number of others, was handed each of the 5,000,000 employers in the country Thursday morning by the regular postman. The employer is asked to sign it and return it at once to one of the district offices of the commerce department.

Pacts Effective August 1.

The agreement will be in effect from August 1 to December 31, this year, unless before that date the president approves a code of fair competition for the employer's industry. In this case, the terms of the code would supersede the agreement.

Beginning at once and continuing until Labor Day, the recovery administration intends to carry on a campaign designed, as Gen. Johnson expressed it, "to saturate the country with the dope about this thing."

To Reach Every Channel.

Not only will this campaign be carried on through every channel of communication—the newspapers, radio, motion pictures and public meetings, but the churches—Catholic, Jewish and Protestant—fraternal orders and civic organizations are being organized to lend a hand in bringing home to the people that "this is a test of patriotism" and "the time to demonstrate the faith of our fathers and our belief in ourselves," as it was explained in the announcement.

"We are going to reach every place where two or more people meet," asserted Gen. Johnson. "We are going to ask the public to support those who co-operate with us. We are not asking a boycott of anyone.

To Mould Public Opinion.

"I believe that we can create a public opinion as strong as any war psychology. We did it with the draft law. When we started there was only a thin strip of the eastern seaboard that wanted war, but in a short time we had the entire country wholeheartedly supporting the war.

"Here we have something to build on—something that is poignant to the human heart—the plight of the 12,000,000 men and women in this country out of work."

Painters Feed Many In Spite of Rain

Hundreds of men, women and children visited Lake Winnepesaukah Thursday, despite a dreary, wet day, and partook of a fine barbecue meal in celebration of the annual "Painters' Day."

Sponsors of the affair declared that, although the crowds were naturally cut considerably by the weather, in all the circumstances the affair was fairly successful.

Pagan Economic System Must Go, Forum Is Told

If Present Order Is to Continue, Industrial Leaders Must Change Attitude, Dr. John McDowell Declares.

Charlottesville, Va., July 20.—Everything in life, except religion, is largely dependent upon economic conditions, Dr. John McDowell, moderator of the general assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, told the Institute of Public affairs at the University of Virginia.

"It is idle," Dr. McDowell said, "to talk of the kingdom of God, of an ideal social order in which the Divine Will is realized, while the present essentially pagan economic system exists. The time has come when we must insist that it is impossible for men and women to be possessed with Christ's spirit and not be concerned with the conditions under which people live and work.

"We must put our Christianity into all our human relationships if it is to be real and effective in modern life. Economic society may be guided by intelligence, but it must be founded upon conscience, which means it must be founded upon religion.

"It is increasing evident that if our individualistic system of ownership and control of industry and agriculture is to continue, those who hold economic privilege must adopt a new attitude of intelligent social concern based on a long view of their own and their neighbor's interest.

"If the churches have a message for industry, now is the time to declare it. For although it is not the business of the church to furnish to the world an economic program, it is our business to see that no economic program is permitted to exist under which injustice and oppression find shelter."

Jersey Firemen Ask 8-Hour Day.

Irvington, N. J.—An eight-hour day was advocated for paid city firefighters in a resolution adopted by the New Jersey Uniformed Firemen's association convention here. City firemen now work in twelve-hour shifts. A resolution also was adopted condemning further pay cuts.

CENTRALIA PRISONER PAROLED

Olympia, Wash.—Britt Smith, former secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World in Centralia, sentenced to twenty-five to forty years for murder on charges growing out of the Armistice Day clash between I. W. W. members and American Legionnaires in 1919, has been paroled as promised by Gov. Clarence D. Martin. Ray Becker, the last of the eight I. W. W. prisoners, refuses to accept a parole. He holds out for a commutation of sentence, maintaining that a parole implies an admission of guilt.

Jobs, Pay Rolls Jump for Third Straight Month

Good Gains Recorded But Employment and Pay Still Far Under 1926 Figures.

Washington, July 27. — United States department of labor figures show that employment may be definitely considered on the upgrade. From the month of May through the month of June there was an increase of 7 per cent. in factory employment and a corresponding increase of nearly 11 per cent. in pay rolls, making the third consecutive month that an increase in both pay rolls and employment had been noted.

Almost 400,000 wage earners in manufacturing industries went back to work in June and it was estimated by the bureau of labor statistics that about 100,000 more were re-employed in the sixteen non-manufacturing industries which were included in the survey.

Employment figures for agriculture, railroads and a number of other important lines of business, which were not reported by the bureau of labor statistics, also show a significant increase. The level of factory employment for the country as a whole was higher in June than in any other month of the past year and a quarter.

The increase in pay rolls and employment was scattered all over the entire country, each state reaping some of the benefits.

The employment increase, together with the increases in April and May, make a total increase of 14 per cent. in employment since the bank holiday in March. This is the third successive month that the reports have shown a definite increase in both wages and employment.

Although there are more workers on the payroll in June, 1933, than in the same month of the preceding year, the employment index is still far below the average index of 1926. The wage level has increased 20 per cent. since the bank holiday.

The lumber industry reported the biggest gain in employment. The level of employment in the beverage industry, due to the legalization of beer, was 95.9 per cent. above the level of the corresponding month in 1932.

In commenting upon the report, Secretary of Labor Perkins warned against over-optimism and speculative production. "We must not allow ourselves to overlook the fact that we are far from being out of the woods of this depression," she said. "Although the percentage increase in employment and pay rolls has been large, it must be kept in mind that the actual rise in both cases was small as compared with the total number of workers normally employed and the total payroll normally paid out.

"We must increase the purchasing power of the 40,000,000 wage earners of the United States," continued Miss Perkins, "so that they will be able to consume the increased output which is flowing from our factories. In the speculative race to produce as much as possible before wages and hours are fixed by the industrial codes—as appears to be the case in some industries — lies the danger of piling up surplus stocks which may prove a boomerang to business. Many business men are showing an enlightened and loyal co-operation in this matter. But it is not enough, at a time like this, that the better type of business man be willing to enter into a code of fair competition and to observe its regulations. He must actively build up a philosophy of mass purchasing power."

St. Louis Nutshellers Win Strike for Higher Wages

St. Louis, Mo.—The nutshellers here won their strike for better pay, the several firms involved agreeing to the increase, although their officials put up the usual claim that operation is unprofitable at the present market. Hoffman Bros., the Barnhart Mercantile company and the Funstein company and other firms were involved.

Mayor Dickmann and a committee assisted in bringing about a settlement of the controversy.

Twenty-one strikers were fined on the rotten charge of "unlawful assembly."

Someone has figured it out that one's chances of being struck by lightning are about six in a million. Not knowing exactly what the score is, is what causes most of us concern during a violent thunderstorm.

Wedding Sunday Morning Will Unite Two Local Trade Union Families

MISS RUTH FORBES

A wedding of interest to local trades unionists will occur Sunday morning at 8:30, at Patten Memorial chapel, University of Chattanooga, when Miss Ruth Adealia Forbes, pictured above, will wed Mr. Harry Griffin Burnette.

Aside from the unusual popularity of both the "youngsters," the marriage will be of interest because of the fact that it will unite two well-known trade union families.

Mr. Harry Burnette, father of the bridegroom, has for many years been secretary of the local Patternmakers' league, while the bride's father, Mr. George Forbes, has been an active officer and worker in the local labor movement since the memory of the oldest inhabitant runneth not to the contrary.

The young couple will leave immediately after the ceremony for a honeymoon trip which will include the world's fair at Chicago, and The Labor World speaks for scores of local friends in wishing for them a most happy and successful voyage on the sea of matrimony.

Syracuse Saves $600,000 In Feeding Needy Families

Syracuse, N. Y.—A threat to establish a city commissary, early last year, to feed the needy families of the unemployed, brought about a prompt offer from the 200 grocers here, through the Civic Defense league, to supply welfare commissions with all required foodstuffs at wholesale cost, plus 12 per cent for handling.

The first year's operation of this system has saved the city more than $600,000, according to a report to Mayor Rolland B. Marvin, compared with what it would have cost had not threat of city competition forced the grocers to moderate their charges.

Rail Employment Increases.

Washington.—The interstate commerce commission reports that employment on Class 1 railroads increased 20,200 men in June as compared with May. The figures showed 957,330 men for June and 937,108 in May.

Almost all the increase was in the ranks of train and engine service employes, the number of which gained 1.39 per cent.

Open Campaign to Enroll Dixie Labor Under Union Flag

Southern Workers Invited to Haven of American Federation.

Legal Protection for Collective Bargaining Guaranteed By Recovery Act, Without Interference from Employers, Opens Way for Labor Organization in Dixie — Headquarters Established in Atlanta — Googe in Charge.

Washington, Aug. 3.—Responding to the widespread desire of working men and women in the southern states to enroll in bona fide trade unions, and secure through collective bargaining the large advantages possible under the national industrial recovery act, the American Federation of Labor started a militant crusade to explain the benefits of genuine trade unionism to the workers of the south, with headquarters in Atlanta, from which organizers will radiate throughout every industrial section.

In a letter to the secretaries of the national and international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, William Green, president of the federation, said:

"The American Federation of Labor has launched a special organizing campaign in the south. We have established headquarters at 317 Hurt building, Atlanta, Ga. George L. Googe, of Savannah, is in charge of the campaign.

Workers Request Organization.

"The workers of the south are manifesting great interest in organization and are responding in a very fine way to requests we are making for them to join organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and to take advantage of the opportunity presented for collective bargaining under the provisions of the industrial recovery act.

"I believe the time is ripe for a great forward movement in the south. The indications are that thousands of men in all trades and callings in the south will join their respective organizations with which they should be associated, and which are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Complete A. F. of L. Support.

"May I request that you advise your organizers and local officers in the south of this organizing campaign. Urge them to utilize our headquarters at Atlanta whenever they find it necessary. Please recommend to them that they co-operate with George L. Googe, who is in charge of the organizing campaign, and those associated with him in this splendid work.

"The American Federation of Labor will be glad to extend to all organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor a full measure of support in carrying forward this organization campaign in the south."

Great Newspaper Points Sincere Way To Real Co-Operation

Non-Union for Half-Century, Philadelphia Record "Signs Up."

(Special Correspondence in Labor)

Philadelphia, Aug. 3.—Like Saul of Tarsus, the Philadelphia "Record"—one of the leading metropolitan papers of the east—has seen a great light.

Announcement was made this week by President David Stern that contracts had been signed with Typographical union and Newspaper Pressmen's union and that he had sent a telegram to President Roosevelt promising "full and immediate co-operation" with his recovery program.

"The Philadelphia 'Record,'" Stern said, "believes that unionism is an essential element in the president's plan to raise wages and increase the nation's purchasing power."

The wage agreements were the outcome of negotiations started on invitation of the "Record" management.

The significance of this action is better realized when it is recalled that for nearly a half century the "Record" had been notoriously anti-union. At one time it was known and hated from coast to coast as the foremost "rat" paper of the country.

A few years ago the property was taken over from the Wanamaker estate by J. David Stern, its present owner, who adopted an extremely progressive policy toward labor questions. Its editorials in defense of unions, demanding relief for the unemployed and urging the government to adopt a generous recovery program to aid the jobless have attracted wide attention and have frequently been quoted by "Labor."

In unionizing its plant the "Record" recognized the truth of the maxim that an ounce of example is worth a ton of preaching. Its internal management is now consistent with its editorial policies.

"The business man," declared the "Record," discussing its new relation with its employes, "is accustomed to look on labor as a commodity to be purchased as cheaply as possible. He is now asked to regard labor in a new light—as consumer.

"And the best guarantee that wages will be kept high enough to maintain the purchasing power that is the life blood of business lies in the unionization of labor.

"Unionized labor provides the best check against industry's natural selfishness."

Jobless Demand Fees Paid Employment Agencies

New York.—Glaring frauds on unemployed workers were revealed when two private employment agencies—the Longacre employment agency and Coutant's Chauffeurs' agency—were closed by the New York City license department.

Jobless men and women who in some instances had paid all their cash to the employment agencies besieged the department for demands for redress. They told of futile quests for mythical jobs, resulting in the expenditure of as much as 95 cents for carfare, usually borrowed; the sending of several applicants for one job, and the refusal on the part of the employing agent to refund fees when he had failed to provide work. The fees, ranging from $6 to $40, represented in most cases all the money applicants had.

Over 200 claims for return of fees amounting to $1,656 were filed against the Longacre agency and forty-six claims amounting to $848.20 against the Chauffeurs' agency. Proprietors of the concerns are liable to be prosecuted for violation of the employment agency law.

RELIEF TO STATES TOTALS $53,580,194

Washington.—Harry L. Hopkins, administrator of the half-billion relief fund voted by congress last spring as the result of a drive by the American Federation of Labor, reports that up to July 1 $53,580,194 had been allotted, a little more than 10 per cent.

Illinois leads the list of forty-seven beneficiaries, with $7,434,668. New York is second with $6,532,292, Pennsylvania third with $4,547,918, Michigan fourth with $3,968,262, and California fifth with a grant of $3,444,840.

New Hampshire, Wisconsin, Delaware, Alaska and Puerto Rico had received no allotments up to the end of June, and Maryland had received only $5,786, and this in May.

Southern Railway Shopcraft Unions Convene Saturday

System Federation to Hold Pow-Wow in Chattanooga at Labor Hall.

Representatives of six shopcraft unions, covering the entire Southern Railway system, will assemble Saturday afternoon at Roosevelt hall, which means the large assembly room in the new quarters of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, at Seventh and Market streets.

Tom F. Hall, member of Lodge 1450, Machinists, told a representative of The Labor World Thursday that the meeting will be in the nature of a forerunner of the annual convention, and that new business conditions created by the recovery act and the general trend toward better times will be discussed.

One of the outstanding features of the conference, Mr. Hall said, will be the election of a successor to B. B. St. Clair, who served as general chairman of the Southern federation for many years until his death at his home in Knoxville a short time ago. The selection of a man to replace Mr. St. Clair, Mr. Hall said, will not be an easy matter, as the veteran had rendered faithful and valuable service to the rail workers' organization.

Other business to be transacted, it was said, will be developed at the session which it is expected will be completed on Saturday afternoon.

Delegates will be present from all points on the Southern system, Mr. Hall said, including Washington, St. Louis, New Orleans, Jacksonville, various points in the Carolinas and in Illinois. About 200 are expected to attend.

Idle Heads of Families For Public Works Jobs

Washington.—Action which is expected by officials to take thousands of unemployed heads of families off the relief rolls of the federal, state and local governments by putting them on the payrolls of public-works projects was announced by Harry L. Hopkins, emergency relief administrator.

It is planned to establish "a vital co-ordinating link" between the federal emergency relief administration and the United States employment service. The two agencies will combine efforts to place immediately a maximum number of workers on public projects.

Boulder Dam Gets $38,000,000; Steady Jobs for 6,000 Planned

Washington.—Elwood Mead, commissioner of reclamation, reported to the Cabinet advisory board that 4,000 men are now employed at the Boulder dam site, and that for every one employed there, 2.4 other men were employed elsewhere as a result. From July 1 until completion of the project, he estimated, would require 60,888,895 "man hours" of work.

The board recently set aside $38,000,000 for Boulder dam, including $10,000,000 to purchase machinery. It is estimated the money will provide steady work for 6,000 men throughout the year at construction sites.

30-Hour Week Would Increase Number of Jobs in This Mill

Youngstown, Ohio.—George F. Alderice, president of the Commercial Shearing and Stamping company, reports that his company is operating three eight-hour shifts making steel bodies and hydraulic hoists.

The three eight-hour shifts in this plant illustrate the immense benefit to the unemployed which would result from the prompt enactment of the federal six-hour day and five-day week bill now before the United States congress at Washington.

If that bill were the law of the land, President Alderice would operate with four six-hour shifts and employ 25 per cent more workers.

"HOME STORES" JUGGLE HOURS TO MEET CODE?

Reports Allege Much Maneuvering.

EMPLOYES PAID ON HOURLY RATE?

Working People Wonder How McDonald Will Observe Code.

The unemployment situation has not been helped any at the so-called "Home Stores," if reports reaching The Labor World this week are true. Neither has there been any addition to the purchasing power of employes of that concern.

A young man employed at a certain unit of the McDonald chain told a pitiful tale to a representative of The Labor World this week. His name and the location of the store is withheld for obvious reasons. It was declared that this young man had formerly been employed regularly by the "Home Stores," and when the code had gone into effect and the concern had announced through the daily papers that "We will do our part," this employe (and it is assumed that others were placed on a similar basis) was instructed to report early in the morning, work a couple of hours, lay off a while, come back and work some more, and then received his pay on an hourly rate.

Another report which has reached The Labor World is that juveniles employed to distribute McDonald's non-union throw-sheet had suffered a decrease in their weekly pay of 20 per cent. Whether this is in accordance with the code was a matter for conjecture among local working people.

It is believed, however, that printers employed on the grocer-baker-dairyman-printer-publisher's throw-sheet will now receive $15 per week, which will possibly overcome some of the pay-roll savings accumulated through the change in system of employment for the clerks mentioned above.

Further, local working people were inclined to sympathize with various store managers who, according to last week's Home Stores sheet, were the vicims of cold-check artists to the extent of more than $100. It was assumed that these managers will be called upon to pay for their "carelessness," and the $15 minimum which they might have received under the code will possibly be several dollars short until the mistakes are paid for.

Another "saving" which the grocer-baker-dairyman-printer-publisher will doubtless make is indicated by a sign in at least one of his store windows notifying the public that deliveries are not permitted under the code, which means that no more juveniles may be employed at a rate of two-fig-bars per day, and customers of the "individualist's" institution will be forced to "tote" their own purchases home.

Local working people will watch with considerable interest the operation of the "Home Stores" under restrictions of the code, in view of former expressions by the grocer-baker-dairyman-printer-publisher regarding the operation of his business.

Labor World readers will remember that McDonald told a committee which called upon him that he was an individualist, and that anyone who works for him will come to work at such time as he orders, and will quit by the same sign.

President Hoover, he said, made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders to keep wages up as an aid to prosperity. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer-baker-dairyman - printer - publisher-individualist averred, we would now be out of the depression, and further, he held, we will never be out until wages are further and further cut.

The patent medicine vender of a few years ago, on the street corner, has changed his ways and now talks over the radio.

Operation Fatal To Miss O'Guin, School Teacher

MISS HARRIETTE O'GUIN

Sympathy of local trades unionists will go out to the surviving relatives of Miss Harriette O'Guin, popular member of the faculty of Anna B. Lacey school, who passed away at a local hospital last Saturday of complications following an operation for appendicitis.

Miss O'Guin had been a teacher in the Hamilton county schools for several years, having been a member of the faculty of Tyner High school for two years previous to her transfer to the Anna B. Lacey school, and was a member of Local 246, American Federation of Teachers.

She was one of the youngest graduates of the University of Tennessee, having finished at that institution at the age of 18. She also attended Peabody college, in Nashville.

Miss O'Guin was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. O'Guin, and lived with her parents at 642 Boynton Terrace. Her father is a well-known local newspaper man and attorney, and has in the past frequently furnished interesting contributions on economic conditions for readers of The Labor World.

Besides her parents, Miss O'Guin is survived by two brothers, Billy and Lamar, and her grandmother, Mrs. J. W. Parris, of Nashville.

The Labor World joins a host of friends in extending to the bereaved relatives heartfelt condolences in their great loss.

Rules Destitute Strikers Eligible For Federal Relief

Washington.—State, municipal and other relief organizations which have been refusing aid to destitute families of striking mine and factory workers in Pennsylvania and other commonwealths have been called to a turn by Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator, in charge of the half million dollar fund voted for the relief of the jobless and their dependents by the last congress.

Replying to Eric H. Biddie, executive director of the Pennsylvania state emergency relief board, who asked for a ruling on a strike case in Montgomery county, Pennsylvania, Mr. Hopkins replied:

"The federal emergency relief administration is concerned with administering relief to the needy unemployed and their families. Each case applying for relief to the local emergency relief agencies should be treated on its merits as a relief case wholly apart from any controversy in which the wage earner may be involved.

"The federal emergency relief administration will not attempt to judge the merits of labor disputes. State and federal agencies as well as courts exist which are duly qualified to act as arbiters and adjustors in such disputes.

"Unless it be determined by the department of labor that the basis for the strike is unreasonable and unjustified, the federal emergency relief administration authorizes local relief agencies to furnish relief to the families of striking wage-earners after careful investigation has shown that their resources are not sufficient to meet emergency needs."

Building Craftsmen Urge Government to Put 'Pep' in Program

Fear Results of Another Winter of Unemployment.

Secretary Ickes Urged to Speed Up Plans for Re-Employment — Workers Hold Time Element Particularly Vital in View of Approaching Cold Weather. Deplorable Delay Irks Heads of Builders' Unions.

Labor association will assemble in Chattanooga again Sunday at 1 p.m., for further prosecution of plans outlined at two previous sessions of the new body, and for the election of permanent officers, according to Z. B. Bender, secretary.

Two previous sessions of the body have discussed plans for the protection of conditions for workers in the valley program, and a general outline of procedure has been set, Mr. Bender said.

Delegates are expected at Sunday's meeting from Knoxville, Memphis, Atlanta, and Sheffield, it was added.

"NIRA" probably is a nice girl. Uncle Sam is a nice fellow. All Uncle Sam's rehabilitators earnest and well-meaning agents—but they will have to step on the gas and deliver work instead of talk if winter is not to steal up on the unemployed toilers and maltreat them as badly as they were maltreated last winter, the Philadelphia Trades Union News points out.

Secretary Ickes and Secretary Perkins have been urged by President McDonough and his fellow associates of the Building Trades Department of the A. F. of L. to hurry building trades work pronto. Delay is fatal. The armies of unemployed in the industry simply can't "stand the gaff" much longer. The entire situation is intolerable. There is just so much human resistance.

The entire subject matter has also been brought to the attention of President Roosevelt. The union chiefs are hoping the chief executive will find some influence persuasive enough to facilitate quick action on jobs for the building craftsmen. Road and bridge building contracts mean but the minimum for the building trades men. The only thing helpful will be an immediate release of big building operations through the land.

Holding in abeyance of contracts by the various departments of government has sorely irked the union chiefs who are contacted with myriads of jobless toilers. It is a sad and grievous situation. Action, not talk, will save a bad situation.

James M. Myles, international vice-president of the Operative Plasterers, is working night and day trying to obtain action. Myles has contacted congressmen, senators, chief executives, legislative heads, departmental commanders and what not—in an attempt to hurry the lagging footsteps of those in charge of building contracts and projects.

Codes and codes have been scanned but appropriations of congress have been held up by the ramifications of "NIRA" activities. The situation, according to Myles, must be hurriedly cleared before many more weeks. The advent of winter minus activity in the building trades spells disaster.

Industrial Recovery Explained by Richberg

Counsel for National Recovery Administration Says the Objects of the Law Are to Create More Jobs and Increase Mass Buying Power.

New York.—In the administration of the national industrial recovery act the government is "not trying to establish public management of private business," nor "fix prices by governmental order," nor "unionize labor by federal command," declared Donald R. Richberg, general counsel of the national recovery administration, at a luncheon of the Merchants' Association of New York.

"The objects of the national industrial recovery act," Mr. Richberg continued, "are to put more people to work, to give them more buying power, and to insure just rewards for both capital and labor in sound business enterprises by eliminating unfair competition."

"The forces of the depression have not been conquered merely by rise in commodity prices or in the market quotation of stocks and bonds," he added. "We still have millions of men and women out of work and we are spending millions of dollars every day to keep these unemployed masses and their dependents from starvation."

Industrial Codes.

On the fair competition codes made mandatory by the industrial recovery act, Mr. Richberg said:

"Every substantial industry in the country is being urged to prepare and submit promptly a basic code of fair competition to the national recovery administration. This code should provide such a shortening of the hours of labor as will bring about the immediate re-employment of the number of men normally attached to the industry.

"This code should establish minimum wages for the hours of work as limited, so that a decent living may be assured to the humblest worker.

"This code should contain also the mandatory provisions of Section 7a of the act, protecting the rights of self-organization and collective bargaining for all employes."

"We have no panaceas that must be accepted," Mr. Richberg concluded. "We have no patent medicines that must be swallowed, no rigid theories that must be adopted. We have only the earnest desire to carry forward the program of the president in the light of his vision and under his guidance, to the end that the institutions of democratic control may be preserved in government and in business—each in its separate sphere, and each in co-operation with the other."

Glass Workers and Bosses Deadlock Over Wage Rates

Atlantic City, N. J.—At the end of a five-day deadlock, wage negotiations between the American Flint Glass Workers' union and the National Association of Manufacturers of Pressed Blown Glassware recessed on July 22 until a date in September to be announced. The next meeting will be held in Pittsburgh, Pa.

Many of us will remember 1932 as the year we got a lame back bowing to the inevitable . . . Most men aren't slaves to their own consciences so much as they are to their wives' whims. . . When enemies bury the hatchet they generally keep a blueprint of the spot. . . A real executive is one who can handle people who know more than he does. . . A lot of our troubles, which look like mountains in the distance, are only small hills when we reach them. . . The first offense, in terms of law, merely means the first time the offender had the bad luck to get caught. . . There should be more leisure for men of business and more business for men of leisure. . . A reputation for absolute honesty has pulled thousands of men through tough spots in life.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—Are there any American unions with jurisdiction over more than two countries?

A.—Yes. The International Association of Machinists, for example, has jurisdiction over the United States and its possessions, Canada and Mexico.

Q.—What early union in the steel and iron industry was named after a Roman god?

A.—The United Sons of Vulcan, which joined with other organizations in 1876 in forming the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of North America. Vulcan was the Roman god of fire and of forging and smelting.

Q.—When was the first union old age pension system established?

A.—In 1905, by the Granite Cutters' International Association of America.

What Next!

German steel fabricators are offering a portable metal house which can be completely erected in eight days. The outer walls are made of two plates, the inside one of steel with a lincusta finish, the outside one of copper. The 4 inch space between the walls is filled with laminations of asbestos, which is claimed to have great insulating properties, with the result that the house requires the use of only half the fuel needed to heat a brick dwelling.

1,200 Striking Silk Weavers Return to Work; 1,500 Refuse

Pawtucket, R. I.—About 1,200 weavers in eight silk mills here returned to work on a four-loom basis, 40 hours per week and $1.50 per 1,000 picks. The workers accepted the conditions pending the approval of a uniform rayon and silk code by the national industrial recovery administration in Washington.

Fifteen hundred operators in three mills remained on strike.

WOMEN! Get rid of the handicaps of a weak, debilitated condition with the assistance of Cardui.

Mrs. R. L. West, of Huntsville, Ala., writes: "I was weak and run-down. I had a pain in my side, and I kept losing weight. I grew nervous over my condition—this was unusual for me, for I am very cheerful when I am well and don't easily get nervous. I knew I ought to take something. My aunt told me I ought to try Cardui, which I did. I began to feel better. I kept it up until I had taken three or four bottles. My side quit hurting and I was soon feeling strong and well."

Cardui is sold at drug stores here.

NIRA Marches On!

Like a beneficent storm, sweeping over the landscape with refreshing effect, the National Industrial Recovery Administration moves its forces into faster and faster action.

Employers fuss and fume, bluster and threaten—and give in to more than they ever dreamed of surrendering.

Shipbuilders, rooted in the tradition of union-hating, come to NIRA's office proposing a 40-hour week and depart with a code calling for but 32. They hate unions, but in General Johnson's office these magnates obediently sat for nearly two days with union spokesmen and threshed out the question of hours and wages.

Here was a collective bargaining affair that had teeth in it—the magnates came down to earth and stayed where they were until an agreement was reached.

NIRA marches on.

And there is child labor and prison labor—both departing from the American industrial field forever. What a revolution we have before our eyes! Not in the memory of men now living has there been such tremendous change. Had these things come because of rebellion the world would be talking of nothing else. But they came through the machinery of peaceful ways in a nation devoted to the practice and the extension of democracy. THAT IS A GREATER MARVEL THAN TO WIN IN WAR.

Of course there are employers who are trying to "beat the game." That was to be expected. We shall have more of it and for a long time to come. But that is the irritant, not the main symptom.

Now comes the blanket code, to lift, almost in a day, the whole level of living. There are those who say it can't be done. BUT IT CAN BE DONE AND IT WILL BE DONE BECAUSE IT MUST BE DONE.

Organized labor must be the advance guard and it must furnish the sentries in this tremendous campaign. It must keep its head, act with wisdom and press onward.

These are days of tremendous doings. These are days of amazing speed in the development of American civilization. Labor marches on. All America marches on. NIRA MARCHES ON.

This Matter of Prices

There is great discussion of prices and price increases.

There will be price increases. That must be clear to everyone.

Naturally, certain lines of business will seek to tie prices to a skyrocket. But in this instance there will be a great organized machine for the expression of public opinion and public opinion, as never before, will act to check greed.

It will be best if the people are well armed with facts. The people will not wish to kill any good business. There are businesses in which there must be price increases, because of increased wages and shorter hours. Let us pay those cheerfully, but let us SOCK THE PROFITEER.

Organize

Throughout the land the rallying cry of labor is being sounded. Organizers are abroad, taking to men and women the message of a new freedom.

Join a union. Get where your voice will be heard—where it will count. Get citizenship in the coming democracy of industry. BE UNION!

An Important Compensation Decision

The court of appeals of the District of Columbia has handed down an important decision in a workmen's compensation case involving the status of labor unions as to employers and the dividing line between employes and officials.

Opie F. Lindsay was the business agent for the Lathers' International union, Local No. 9, Washington, D. C. Acting in this capacity he went to Fredericksburg, Va., to investigate certain charges concerning labor conditions. While returning from Fredericksburg his automobile came into a collision with a passing motor vehicle, and Lindsay received injuries from which he died.

Mrs. Clara A. Lindsay, his widow, filed a claim for compensation under the workmen's compensation act of the District of Columbia. The claim was allowed by Deputy Commissioner Hoage, of the United States employes' compensation commission, charged with administering the act.

The insurance carrier of Lathers' Local Union No. 9 contested the claim on the ground that Lindsay was not an "employe" of the union within the meaning of the act, but an "official," and consequently not covered by the contract of insurance.

The supreme court of the District of Columbia upheld the award of the deputy commissioner. The insurance carrier thereupon carried the case to the court of appeals, whose decision now sustains the finding of the lower court.

In support of its decision the court of appeals declared that the Lathers' local union was an employer and that Lindsay when he met his death was an employe within the purview of the statute, and that at the time of the accident he was the business agent of the union performing duties defined by the union's constitution. The court added:

> "In the present case we think that inasmuch as the insurance carrier insured the labor union for the protection of its employes, among whom the business agent was known to be numbered, and received and retained its compensation for such insurance, it cannot complain if the courts call upon it to perform its contract in the spirit in which it was made."

In judicial circles it is believed that the decision of the court of appeals will stand as a precedent in holding that employes of a labor union, and the union itself, come within the protection of the workmen's compensation law.

The briefs supporting the claim of Mrs. Lindsay and the award made by Deputy Commissioner Hoage were prepared by the United States employes' compensation commission.

Rest Periods and Fatigue

The relationship between industrial fatigue and efficiency and the necessity of frequent rest periods in the interest of both the health of the workers and the output in commodities and services have received emphatic confirmation from the invention of a notable instrument by the eminent British doctor, Alex Cannon, K. C. A.

Believing that there is a definite connection between various mental activities and the movement of the chest in breathing, Dr. Cannon found that there was no apparatus capable of measuring these movements. He therefore exercised his inventive capacity and produced an instrument to meet the emergency. The instrument, which bears the rather formidable name, the Psychostethokyrtographmanometer, measures thought processes, including the mental power of endurance, and enables graphic records to be taken which record the individual's reaction to various stimuli.

After many experiments with the instrument, Dr. Cannon reports that prolonged mental concentration reduces the proper action of the lungs and the amount of oxygen in the blood so that mental fatigue results. This fatigue, he asserts, can be prevented by five minutes break every hour.

Organized labor and students of industrial fatigue have long held that frequent rest periods are necessary in the interest of efficiency for all workers, mental as well as manual. It is a pleasure to note that this conviction has received added proof, so far as mental workers are concerned, by Dr. Cannon's researches.

Even employers who are blind to humanitarian labor conditions would undoubtedly give their educated proletarians frequent brief rest periods if they were convinced that increased production, and consequently larger profits, would result therefrom. Dr. Cannon's instrument and the researches based upon a larger number of cases to which it has been applied seem to afford the means of imparting this conviction.

BY THE WAY

Comment on Some Interesting Matters in the Limelight Today.

Disquieting reports of attempted intimidation of union representatives are coming from many sections. These reports have been placed before the administration of the national industrial recovery act. All fair-minded citizens will hope that the recovery administration authorities will act with speed and decision to put a stop to such discrimination, which is prohibited under the terms of the recovery act. When public authority is against the workers they will seldom organize; the United States government must stand back of the workers in their fight to establish their constitutional and human rights to form trade unions and to have these unions recognized if it wants the new deal to be a success.

Miss Josephine Roche, of Denver, is president of the Rocky Mountain Fuel company, second largest coal mining company in Colorado. She is a modern employer and believes in unions, high wages, efficiency. While her big open-shop Rockefeller rival was writing its business in the red, Miss Roche's annual report for 1932 recorded a net profit and a bigger one than the year before.

The report shows that the Roche miners worked an average of 191 days in the year, compared with the state average of 126 days. Their average earnings were $1,650 a year, two or three times larger than in some non-union fields.

Why?

Through a high degree of union efficiency Miss Roche reduced operating costs. Through what she calls "The intelligent co-operation and careful work of the hundreds of employes of the company," production per man increased. The worker in the Rocky Mountain company mines produced an average of 10.5 tons of coal per day. That was three tons per day more than the average for Colorado.

The better paid worker is more profitable to the employer.

Hitlerized Germany the other day carried out a nation-wide search for "enemies of the state" that is described as probably unique for its vast extent. Promptly at noon every person found in a railroad train anywhere in Germany and every person in a vehicle in any principle highway or city street was subjected to search, both of persons and belongings. It was announced that the entire search was carried through without incident but the "result was somewhat disappointing." The vast search revealed only a few fugitives from justice, persons carrying arms without authorization, auto drivers without proper licenses and a little "forbidden literature."

The Hitler followers are still evidently doing their best to keep Germany in a state of alarm and hysteria. They are so impressed with the sence of their own importance that they do not realize the ridiculousness of their latest "stunt," which reminds one of the celebrated exploit of the king of France who marched with 20,000 troops up a hill, and then marched down again.

Government alone cannot start the wheels of industry. Government is only a symbol of power—the people's power, yours and mine. At least this is the theory of our democratic form of government. It has been a rather hazy theory, in recent years. But it is for us—all of us—to make it a living, burning reality.

Hitler goes on his mad way. His outlawing of the great social-democratic party, second largest party in Germany, evinces his determination to crush all opposition and make all Germans think and act alike. He seeks a regimented Germany—more regimented than even in the palmiest days of the Hohenzollerns—with every citizen a supporter of the Nazi dictatorship.

So far the Germans, with here and there honorable exceptions, appear to have taken the Hitler regime "lying down." Of course there may be tremendous opposition under the surface, but as yet it has not manifested itself.

Lovers of liberty all over the world are not reconciled to the idea that Germany democracy will continue to tolerate the Nazi tyranny. They have not given up hope that it will be overthrown. But if the Germans continue to stand for Hitler's rule, they will get little sympathy from the rest of the world for whatever evils it may bring upon them.

Every trade unionist can help in the recovery movement by buying union made products. The purchase of union made goods and the demand for union services make for higher standards of wages and the shorter work week and day, which are main objectives of the national industrial recovery act.

Yet now it is a brambled path,
And not one star the same,
With never any turning back
The way I came.

DEPARTMENT STORE HEAD SHOWS EMPLOYERS SACRIFICE NOTHING BY CUTTING HOURS, RAISING PAY

New York City, July 27.—Employers sacrifice nothing in agreeing to maximum hours and minimum wages under the national recovery act codes, Percy S. Straus, president of R. H. Macy & Co., Inc., big New York department store, told fellow members of the National Retail Drug Goods association, meeting to discuss their status under the recovery act.

"I have heard employers say, in agreeing to maximum hours and minimum wages," Straus said, "'We are making a sacrifice to labor. We must not do it without getting something in return.'

"I say to you that we employers sacrifice nothing in such an agreement. Insofar as the code controls every unit in every industry, no one suffers by comparison with his neighbor or competitor.

"Wages and hours are not absolute factors; they are purely comparative. If I pay no lower wages and work my employes no longer hours than others in my occupation, I gain nothing and I lose nothing by agreeing to such limitations. Wherein, therefore, lies the justification of employers in asking for something in return for that which they claim to have conceded, but which, in actual fact, means no material concession at all?

"The purpose of the national industrial recovery act is obvious. It aims to increase employment by decreasing hours of labor and increasing wages that are now below standard. These objectives, however, have been completely misconceived by many business men, both manufacturers and merchants.

"This is no time for petty arguments. All must quickly realize the implications of the recovery act and its possibilities for overcoming most of the difficulties that stand in the way of the return of prosperity. There is an urgent need for wholehearted co-operation by large and small businesses if industrial recovery is to be achieved. We are at war against depression. There is no place for 'slacker industry.'

"I have heard business men say they cannot afford to pay higher wages and work less hours unless competition is so regulated that profits will be assured. To me, that seems a contradiction. Competition, whether or not it be the life of trade, is the mother of efficiency. Without it neither higher wages nor more profits will be possible."

Clothing Workers Strike Wins Big Wage Increase

Port Chester, N. Y.—Dead tired of trying to buy a decent living with the low wages received, 400 clothing workers employed by the S. & K. Manufacturing company here went on strike. The walkout has brought to an end by an agreement under which the company granted increases of 10 per cent to employes receiving $20 a week or more, and increases of 15 to 18 per cent for workers receiving less than $20 per week.

Deportations of Unemployed Aliens Planned by Panama

Panama City.—Shouting "Panama for Panamans," some 5,000 persons gathered before the presidential palace and demanded deportation of all unemployed foreigners as a measure of relief for native workers.

Silk Workers Strike Against 1½ Cents Per Hour Pay Ba

Weatherly, Pa.—Thoroughly di gusted with the microscopic pay crease granted by the officials of Reed & Lovatt Silk mill here, o half of the employes walked out.

Mill officials expressed surprise the militancy of the strikers w struck in the face of a recent pay crease of 10 per cent for some e ployes and 5 per cent for others. T percentage sounded big, but when workers got their pay envelopes increase amounted to the insignific sum of approximately 1½ cents hour. And out they walked!

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor comider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

Green Points Route to New Unionist Army

Federal Unions Being Formed in Mass Production Industries, Including Autos and Steel—Organizing Office Operates in Detroit.

Washington, Aug.3.—To an extent never expected, the American Federation of Labor is plunging into the field of collective bargaining directly and may soon be drawn into wage negotiations and recovery act proceedings as the spokesman for great numbers of workers who have no international union.

This situation is the result of the present national organizing campaign, through which workers in the mass production industries are being organized in federal unions directly chartered by the A. F. of L.

With a headquarters office opened in Detroit, inroads are being made in the automobile industry, though not without the stiff opposition of the great auto makers. In the steel centers the federation has put some of its best and shrewdest campaigners. Workers, under the freedom established by the recovery act, are literally flocking into unions.

An example of union methods was found this week in this city when the Bookkeepers and Stenographers' union, E. J. Tracy, president, went into newspapers with a three-quarter page display advertisement calling upon office workers to organize.

President Green explained the organizing situation in a statement in which he said:

"The American Federation of Labor is pursuing its traditional policy in organizing the workers in the automobile, rubber, steel and miscellaneous industries. The establishment of federal labor unions in mass production industries means that the American Federation of Labor itself will represent these federal labor unions as they are directly chartered by the parent organization.

"Federal labor unions have been formed by the American Federation of Labor for many years. Through this form of organization the workers who do not come under the jurisdiction of national and international unions already formed become identified with the organized labor movement. The American Federation of Labor represents these federal labor unions just the same as national and international unions represent local organizations directly chartered by them. Through these federal labor unions the workers in mass production industries may become organized, may engage in collective bargaining and may be represented by men of their own choosing, as provided for in the industrial recovery act.

"As a matter of convenience and practicability federal labor unions will be established at different plants if conditions seem to make it necessary so that the workers may conveniently conduct their business affairs. In considering industrial codes applicable to these mass production industries the workers will be given the benefit of such expert, technical and trained service as the American Federation of Labor can supply. There is no way by which these workers may engage in collective bargaining except through the establishment of federal labor unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

"The officers and members of these federal unions will be free to choose American Federation of Labor representatives to speak for them and to represent them in wage negotiations at hearings here questions affecting their interests are considered under the authority of the industrial recovery act.

"In following such a plan of organization the American Federation of Labor is not in any way departing from the organization and the traditional policy which it has pursued from the beginning. This policy is the only one by which the workers can become organized and enjoy the benefits of collective bargaining as provided for in Section 7 of the industrial recovery act."

Mill Strike Brings 12½ Per Cent Wage Boost

Dover, N. H.—More than 1,000 employes of the Dover branch of the Pacific Mills corporation of Lawrence, Mass., won their strike for a comfortable wage increase.

The employes walked out on May 12 after the mill management refused to make a 25 per cent advance in pay. Later the company offered to raise wages 10 per cent, which the employes refused to accept. Finally the strikers fixed on a 12½ per cent increase, and the mill officials agreed to pay it.

The strike lasted a little over two weeks.

SHERMAN CORPORATION OFFERS TO "HELP" LABOR RELATIONS UNDER NATIONAL RECOVERY ACT

Concern Sets Up New Organization Whose Advertising Indicates It Is Seeking to Promote "Company Unions" Under Guise of "Constructive Measures."

Washington, July 27.—The Sherman Corporation, known directly and through many subsidiary corporations for its strikebreaking and "agent provacateur" operations, has organized the National Industrial Advisory corporation to assist corporations and trade organizations "in promoting the principles of the national industrial recovery act."

The staff of Administrator Johnson, of the national industrial recovery administration, is analyzing the advertising matter and operations of this new corporation to learn whether this is an attempt to organize company unions generally to meet the purposes of the act and to prevent the organization of trade unions in industries where labor is not completely organized.

Advertisement Tells Story.

In view of the past history of the Sherman corporation, quotations from the elaborate brochure sent to corporations throughout the United States are of interest. An advertisement in the New York Times and in other publications offers two classifications of service, under which, among other reading matter, is found:

"CONSTRUCTIVE MEASURES: To develop sound bases of employer-employe relationship.

"PROTECTIVE MEASURES: Protection from aggressive acts of non-representation groups."

Industry Planning" Offered.

In the brochure the corporation offers similar service under other headings:

"MISCELLANEOUS PLANNING ACTIVITIES: There are many other phases of industry planning which it is not feasible to discuss in detail, such as—

"Employment policies, continuity of employment, wage stabilization, arbitration procedure, defensive work, inter-industry co-ordination."

"NIAC SERVICE AND MANAGEMENT: Advise and counsel from a practical standpoint as to any modification or amplification of the code that may seem to be essential for the benefit and protection of all the interests that must be considered."

"Determine a sound basis for establishing fair wages, working hours and standards of employment and any possible increase in number employed and in spendable incomes."

"The development of sound and constructive methods of employer-employe relationship."

"Provision for protection from external aggression and interference, and control of internal violations.

"Collection and interpretation of information of an intimate or confidential nature which individual members might otherwise hesitate to disclose."

"Entire industries or trades will do well to bring to the National Industrial Advisory corporation the task of assisting them to take advantage of the opportunities found in the recovery act as well as meeting the obligations which it also imposes." (Bold type as an advertising matter.)

Offices of the NIAC have been opened at 1001 Fifteenth street, Washington, D. C.

It is believed warnings will be issued by representative labor organizations to keep on the lookout for the activities of the new corporation. It would not, it is contended, be surprising if there were not a large group of employers willing to organize in every possible way to restrict trade union organization.

Labor Organization Necessary for Benefits Under Recovery Act, Plumbers' Secretary Says

Washington.—Thorough organization of the workers in aggressive trade unions under American Federation of Labor leadership is imperatively demanded if they are to realize the advantages made possible for them under the national industrial recovery act, according to Thomas E. Burke, general secretary-treasurer of the United Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters of the United States and Canada.

In an article in the Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters Journal entitled "The Dawn of the New Era," Mr. Burke says:

"Many employers' associations, or trade associations, have been at work on their codes of practice. The National Association of Manufacturers furnished what is called a model code to its members in the week before labor held its conference. Employers' representatives have besieged the capitol for weeks. Many trade association executives have completed codes, some of them drawn in co-operation with the organized workers in their industries.

"It is clear that the new legislation offers labor its great opportunity to organize. It practically makes organization necessary. There cannot be wage agreements without organizations of workers."

Mr. Burke points out that while bona fide trade unions are necessary for the workers to achieve their just demands, the recovery act does not stipulate that the unions shall be A. F. of L. unions. "Independent or dual unions," he says, "may spring up—and they will spring up if labor is not energetic in seizing its opportunity. The future of labor organization under the new legislation will be what the workers make it."

Swanson Asks $77,000,000 To Modernize Battleships

Washington. — Secretary of the Navy Swanson announced that he would ask President Roosevelt to allocate $77,000,000 for modernizing all units of the United States fleet from the $3,300,000,000 congress authorized in the industrial recovery act for emergency public works.

About 85 per cent of this and of the $238,000,000 already granted from this fund for construction of thirty-two ships in the three-year naval building program would be to labor, Secretary Swanson said. The modernization allotment, like the construction fund, would be spread over a three-year period.

Code Cuts Union Hours, Not Wages, Green Holds

Pay for 35 Hours Is to Be the Same As for the Longer Work Week, A. F. of L. Chief Asserts.

Washington.—Employers who have contracts with trade unions will be expected to reduce the number of hours for industrial workers to 35 a week, without reduction in weekly earnings, if they accept President Roosevelt's voluntary blanket code as an emergency measure to increase employment until specific codes are adopted, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared in discussing rumors of wage reductions for union members under Roosevelt's proposal.

Mr. Green pointed out that the code provides that clerical workers shall be employed no longer than 40 hours a week and shall be paid from $12 to $15 a week depending on the community, while mechanical employes are to be employed 35 hours a week during the emergency period until Dec. 1. A maximum work week of 40 hours may be adopted for six weeks, but the employe must not be worked in excess of eight hours a day.

Not Devised to Reduce Wages.

"My understanding of the blanket code is that it was never intended as a device for reducing wages," said Mr. Green.

"The primary purpose of the act is to reduce unemployment and to increase wages. If a reduction in the number of hours worked by employes in any line of industry is brought about under the operation of the blanket code, the wages paid for the reduced number of hours must be as great as those under the longer hours worked.

Code Forbids Cuts.

"This provision is sustained by Section 7 of the blanket code, which states as follows:

"'Not to reduce the compensation for employment now in excess of the minimum wages hereby agreed to (notwithstanding that the hours worked in such employment may be hereby reduced) and to increase the pay for such employment by an equitable readjustment of all pay schedules.'

"For example, suppose a contract between union workers and an employer in a shop provides for 44 hours a week. In the event that the employer agrees to the blanket code, he is expected to reduce his hours to 35 and 40 as provided in the voluntary code. The pay must be at least as much as that paid under the 44-hour week."

Shirt Factory Employes Paid $2 Per Week; Many Get $5.50; Half Get Less Than $7.40

Washington.—Sweatshop conditions in the shirt industry, with plants working overtime and half the employes earning less than $7.40 in a busy week, were revealed in a report made public by Miss Frances Perkins, secretary of labor.

The survey of the shirt industry, the first of a series of investigations which the department hopes to undertake in co-operation with state and industrial groups, showed median earnings ranging from $9 in New York to $5.50 in Delaware, with a record "low" of $2 a week in one Pennsylvania plant.

"If the earnings of the women, who constitute the bulk of the employes, are considered separately, each of the medians is 10 to 30 cents lower," the report stated.

"The men and boys employed in the shirt industry work mostly in the cutting rooms, cutters and markers being among the highest paid workers. Of the employes in the cutting rooms, 53 per cent earned $15 or more a week.

"But of the 18,378 women workers studied in the nine states only 10 per cent earned as much as $12 a week, and 35 per cent earned less than $6 a week.

"Machine operators averaged $7.30; pressers, who mostly use gas hand irons, $7.90; and miscellaneous occupations, including thread clippers, examiners, sorters, boxers and floor girls, earned the lowest pay, their median earnings being $6.60. Many of the youngest and older workers are employed in these latter occupations.

"Most of the plants visited were found to be busier than they had been for the past year or two. In a few cases plants were working overtime, hours ranging up to 57½ a week."

About 20,000 payrolls were investigated, but the report added that the industry keeps very poor records.

The survey included the following states: Connecticut, Delaware, Indiana, Maryland, Massachusetts, Missouri, New Jersey, New York, Pennsylvania.

Federal Labor Unions for All Mass Production Workers Urged by Green

A. F. of L. Chief Says This Form of Organization Is Necessary to Secure the Benefits of Collective Bargaining Protected by the Recovery Act.

Washington, Aug. 3.—A succinct and clear explanation of the set-up and purpose of the federal labor unions which the American Federation of Labor is organizing in mass production industries throughout the United States was made in a statement by William Green, president of the federation.

Pointing out that the federal labor union has been an integral part of the A. F. of L. organization plan for many years, he added that present emphasis on this form is necessary in order that hundreds of thousands of workers may now realize the benefits of collective bargaining, the free exercise of which, without interference from employers, is guaranteed by the labor section of the national industrial recovery act.

Text of Statement.

Following is the text of Mr. Green's statement:

"The American Federation of Labor is pursuing its traditional policy in organizing the workers in the automobile, rubber, steel and miscellaneous industries. The establishment of federal labor unions in mass production industries means that the American Federation of Labor itself will represent these federal labor unions as they are directly chartered by the parent organization.

Federal Labor Union Principle.

"Federal labor unions have been formed by the American Federation of Labor for many years. Through this form of organization the workers who do not come under the jurisdiction of national and international unions already formed become identified with the organized labor movement.

"The American Federation of Labor represents these federal labor unions just the same as national and international unions represent local organizations directly chartered by them. Through these federal labor unions the workers in mass production industries may become organized, may engage in collective bargaining and may be represented by men of their own choosing, as provided for in the industrial recovery act.

Plant Organization Approved.

"As a matter of convenience and practicability federal labor unions will be established at different plants if conditions seem to make it necessary so that the workers may conveniently conduct their business affairs.

"In considering industrial codes applicable to these mass production industries these workers will be represented by the American Federation of Labor and will be given the benefit of such expert, technical and trained service as the American Federation of Labor can supply.

"There is no way by which these workers may engage in collective bargaining except through the establishment of federal labor unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

Represented by A. F. of F.

"The officers and members of these federal unions will be free to choose American Federation of Labor representatives to speak for them and to represent them in wage negotiations at hearings where questions affecting their interests are considered under the authority of the industrial recovery act.

"In following such a plan of organization the American Federation of Labor is not in any way departing from the form of organization and the traditional policy which it has pursued from the beginning.

"This policy is the only one by which the workers can become organized and enjoy the benefits of collective bargaining as provided for in Section 7 of the industrial recovery act."

Two little words that make the world run more smoothly, that ease the hard places of life and absorb many of its knocks, are "Thank you."

ARBITRATION BOARD NAMED BY NIRA BOSS

Administration Aims to Prevent Strife.

KEEPING OF PEACE IS THE GOAL SOUGHT

Campaign Believed Highly Important to Success of Recovery Program.

LOCAL ARBITRATION BOARD APPOINTED

A local "arbitration board," which it is announced will meet every day to hear complaints under the National Recovery Act, was named this week, with T. Pope Shepherd, attorney, as chairman, and the following assistants: George H. Patten, vice-president of the Chattanooga Medicine company; John J. Mahoney, capitalist; Mark Senter, capitalist; Harry Miller, proprietor of The Vogue; Neil J. Crowley, proprietor of the Intertype Composing company, and George Forbes, postal clerk. Messrs. Crowley and Forbes are members of organized labor.

By CHESTER M. WRIGHT

Before this week ends there will be the healthy beginnings of a national network of local, state and regional arbitration boards which will function under a board of seven to be known as the National Board of Arbitration, brought into being by the joint action of the Labor and Industry committees of the Recovery Administration and approved by General Johnson and President Roosevelt.

Hereafter, it is expected, the minute trouble breaks an arbitration board will jump into the situation.

It should be pointed out that the policy and purpose of this enormous arbitration machinery—the greatest any nation ever had—will not be to prevent strikes, but to cure them at once.

Strikes Remain Legal.

Strikes remain legal, but continuance of strikes for any length of time becomes extremely improbable.

Actually, the administration is aiming at a strikeless nation.

Labor, it can be said, is looking for a chance to have its grievances brought before a proper tribunal in such cases as the Pennsylvania coal situation, where hitherto anti-union mines have now agreed to arbitration with men who are union men. The coal case will be handled by a separate board of three, including George L. Berry, Louis Kirstein and Gerald Swope, all named by General Johnson before the big board of seven was named.

Two Labor Members.

Of this board of seven, labor is represented by William Green and John L. Lewis. The other members are: U. S. Senator Robert F. Wagner, Dr. Leo Wolman, Walter Teagle, Gerard Swope and Louis E. Kirstein.

Perhaps no step taken under the Recovery Act has had more significance for labor. There is a good deal of feeling that, even though the legal status of strikes remains unchanged and even though there may be MORE strikes in newly organized industries, the strike as a general thing and as a weapon for the winning of battles, is probably out of the picture for the duration of NIRA. The strike, it is apparent, will be a weapon for securing attention and for getting arbitration.

There can be no question but that, with a veritable network of subordinate arbitration boards, such as is planned, it is the hope and plan to catch every dispute in its infancy and settle it quickly. The administration point of view is that this will keep the flow of purchasing power continuous.

Contract Hours, Wages, Need Not Be Changed

Washington. — Donald Richberg, general counsel of the national recovery administration, in an interpretation of President Roosevelt's voluntary blanket agreement, declared contracts reached by collective bargaining and which specify a definite number of hours' employment per week, may be maintained unimpaired by those who subscribe to the N. R. A. program.

County Court Formally Commends Co-Operation of School Teachers Through Federation Organization

Hamilton county school teachers were highly commended for "intelligent co-operation" by a resolution which unanimously passed the county court Monday morning following its introduction by Squire Kelso Rice. Attention is called by the resolution to the active and intelligent interest in school affairs, through the medium of the American Federation of Teachers, Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and the American Federation, and the teachers are invited to "continue their good work."

The resolution follows:

Whereas, the teachers of Hamilton county have during the past year taken an active and intelligent interest in the affairs of our school system; and,

Whereas, they have done this through the medium of the Chattanooga Hamilton County Teachers' association affiliated with Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and the American Federation of Labor; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Hamilton county court, in session Aug. 7, 1933, That we commend the teachers of this county for their intelligent co-operation and suggest that they continue their good work.

Aymon Resumes Work on Staff American Federation of Labor; Hester Named State Fire Marshal

Paul J. Aymon, who has been deputy fire marshal for the state of Tennessee since February, resigned that post this week to again join the staff of southern representatives of the American Federation. A. C. Hester was named to replace Mr. Aymon by Commissioner of Labor W. E. Jacobs.

Mr. Aymon served for some time as southern organizer for the federation, but was temporarily laid off about a year ago. He had been unusually successful in organization work, and when the great wave for unionization began to sweep the south, President Green recognized the need for his services again. Mr. Aymon expressed himself this week as pleased to receive the new assignment.

Mr. Hester, who succeeds Mr. Aymon as deputy state fire marshal, has a fine record of service to the local labor movement. For the past two years he has been proprietor of the Broadway barber shop, and previous to that time had for several years been an active worker in the ranks of union labor. He is a former vice-president of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council. He had the indorsement of his local union and of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council for membership on the state board of barber examiners.

122 New Charters Issued By American Federation of Labor

New Local Unions, Located in All Sections, Indicate Rising Tide of Sentiment for Organization.

Washington, Aug. 10.—The rising tide of bona fide labor organization is thoroughly emphasized by the fact that the American Federation of Labor has issued 122 charters since July 3, Frank Morrison, secretary of the federation, announced.

The new locals are located in all parts of the United States, and are especially numerous and active in those cities where the employers, despite the mandatory provisions of the national recovery act, have endeavored by direct and indirect methods to force the workers to join the notorious company union—a form of organization which Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, told Robert P. Lamont, president of the American Iron and Steel institute, had no place in the institute's fair competition code for the iron and steel industry.

A survey of the charters in automobile workers in Michigan, rubber workers in Ohio, sawmill and timber workers in the northwestern states, radio and television workers in Philadelphia, steel workers wherever the iron and steel industry is located, cleaners and dyers, aluminum workers, aircraft workers, and dozens of other trades in which working men and women feel the urge of joining with their fellow workers to secure shorter hours, higher wages, and an increasing share of the wealth which their labor largely produces.

Officials of the American Federation of Labor do not anticipate any material let-up in the demand of the workers for bona fide organization and are continually extending the federation's activities to every section of the country.

RECEIVER NAMED FOR BIG ANTI-UNION IRON CONCERN

Denver, Colo., Aug. 10.—The anti-union Colorado Fuel and Iron company, a $50,000,000 corporation and one of the largest industries in the state, was placed in federal receivership following a default in the company's general mortgage bonds.

The big concern, in which the Rockefellers have a large interest, has a 600-acre plant at Pueblo with a capacity of 600,000 tons of steel a year. Since the company's organization in 1872, it has fought organized labor and its mines have frequently been the scene of labor troubles. A strike against the company and other coal operators in 1914 culminated in the famous Ludlow massacre, in which many union miners and members of their families were killed when their tent colony was attacked by state militiamen. The massacre led to the intervention of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in the strike and picketing of the Standard Oil offices in New York by Upton Sinclair and other radicals.

The application for a receivership was filed in federal court by the Bankers' Trust Company of New York, as trustee for a large block of defaulted bonds. The company admitted that interest on the bonds had not been paid and consented to an equity receivership. The board of directors had previously voted to default the company's general mortgage bonds and also those of the Colorado Industrial company, a subsidiary.

Arthur Roeder, president of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, was appointed receiver. He said its business would be carried on as usual, "under direction of the court, with strict economy methods."

COLONIAL NOT INTERESTED IN BAKERS' LABEL

Would Not Recognize Union, Says Wasson.

ORGANIZATION OF WORKERS CHECKED

Movement Progresses Satisfactorily in Other Local Plants, Says Report.

The Colonial Baking company does not care for the use of the Union Bakers' label, and would not use same even though the bakery was 100 per cent. organized, according to report of executive officers of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council following a conference this week with Hu C. Wasson, president of the baking company.

The interview with Mr. Wasson was the outcome of rumors of opposition to the organization of bakers employed by his company, and the alleged discouragement of workers in the plant who were considering affiliation with an American Federation of Labor unit.

Executive board members declared this week that some time ago a committee from the bakery called upon them and asked that assistance be given in forming an organization. At a subsequent meeting, it was said, practically every baker employed at the plant was present, and all were enthusiastic in their desire for organization. Other sessions were called, to which bakers from other local plants were invited, and although these latter responded employes of the Colonial were conspicuous by their absence.

Efforts to learn the reasons for sudden cooling off of sentiment for organization among the Colonial bakers developed the statement, first, that they had been told if they organized, within three months union bakers would be brought from other cities to replace the members of the local union employed at the Colonial. This, however, Mr. Wasson denied. It was later reported that one of the most enthusiastic supporters of the movement for organization had been given a title of assistant superintendent, or something, with the provision that he immediately cease all activities for unionization. This was also denied by Mr. Wasson.

Concluding that the movement had been discouraged by the management of the bakery, Central Body officials sought and finally secured a conference with President Wasson this week.

Mr. Wasson also told the labor officials that whereas he is now using "hand labor" on certain work in his bakery, if the plant is organized and a union scale placed in effect, he would be forced to purchase machinery which would result in displacement of half the bakers now employed. He stated that he had notified his employes to this effect.

The committee reported Mr. Wasson had been very courteous, stating that he himself was a former member of the bakery workers' union, but was firm in his statement that he would not recognize a union in his plant, and would not use the union label even though he was forced to unionize his plant.

Organization of the bakery workers is progressing nicely in other local plants, it was said Thursday, although there are none at the Colonial.

E. C. MEETING TO BE HELD AT LATER DATE

Washington, Aug. 10.—Meeting at the A. F. of L. executive council, scheduled to have been held at Atlantic City Aug. 8, has been postponed to Sept. 6, without specifying the places of meeting. Best available information is that the meeting will be held in Washington, due to the fact that the recovery administration is demanding the almost constant presence of many labor officials in Washington.

Correspondent Suggests New Board Investigate "Home Stores" Plan For "Observing" Recovery Code

A reader of The Labor World, who, incidentally, is a well-known local barber, suggests this week that, in view of widespread rumors that Roy McDonald, operator of the so-called "Home Stores," baker, dairyman, printer, publisher and self-styled "individualist," is not exactly living up to the letter or spirit of the industrial recovery act, it might bring interesting facts to light if the new arbitration board should begin a probe into "system" under which McDonald's various interests are working.

The Labor World's correspondent points out that the grocer-baker-dairyman - printer - publisher - individualist disagreed with the recovery policies of President Hoover so radically the average citizen is justified in concluding it will be hard for him to fall into line with a "new deal" which is opposed to his own philosophy as expressed only recently to a committee of working people who called upon the merchant, etc., in an effort to induce him to employ Chattanooga people, at decent pay, in the operation of his weekly throw-sheet.

The letter follows:

Editor The Labor World:

I notice in last week's issue of The Labor World that reports persist of "juggling" hours by Roy McDonald, manager of the "Home Stores," and the story of a young man (or young men) who was laid off part time and then paid so much per hour for actual time employed. It was reported this week that at least one of these men was reinstated on full time following your last issue; the others I have heard nothing from.

A new and very interesting story which is going the rounds is that, in at least one case, McDonald's "system" works this way: A young man who works in the warehouse of the chain grocery concern is employed the full number of hours five days per week, after which he is sent to one of the stores on Saturday and labors for a long day. It is presumed that he draws two pay envelopes, one from "headquarters" and one from the individual store.

In view of such reports, and considering the fact that McDonald expressed such strong differences of opinion with President Hoover's plan to return prosperity, because that plan provided for no reductions in pay, wouldn't it be a pretty good idea to have this new arbitration board appointed this week look into the manner in which the Home Stores are observing the code?

Of course, we all want to give full credit for co-operation where credit is due, but I think it is too much to expect any man to change his entire economic views over night, particularly where such views are as radically "individualistic" as are those expressed by the "Home Stores" boss. N. I. R. A.

Chattanooga, Aug. 9.

Labor World readers will remember that McDonald told a committee which called upon him that he was an individualist, and that anyone who works for him will come to work at such time as he orders, and will quit by the same sign.

President Hoover, he said, made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders to keep wages up as an aid to prosperity. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer-baker-dairyman - printer - publisher-individualist averred, we would now be out of the depression, and further, he held, we will never be out until wages are further and further cut.

Will Watch for "Chiselers"

Special N. R. A. Boards to "Police" Industry; Unions Big Aid in Recovery Program; How Some Bosses Are Cheating

(From "Labor")

Complaints received by the national recovery administration emphasize the fact that one of the big tasks confronting the government in connection with its industrial code program is going to be the "policing" of industry—the job of keeping "chiseling" bosses from breaking code provisions and profiteering at the expense of decent employers, labor and the nation itself.

As fast as codes are adopted, each industry will have a special board to investigate complaints. These boards, as explained by Administrator Hugh S. Johnson, will consist of one member nominated by the labor advisory committee of the N. R. A., one named by the employers, and the third appointed by Johnson.

First Board Named.

The "trouble shooters" for the textile industry were named this week. It is the first board of this nature to be formed. The importance of the "policing" job is exemplified by the fact that Johnson "appointed" himself to represent the administration. Leo Wolman, chairman of the labor advisory committee, and Nelson Slater, of the employers' group, are the other two members.

N. R. A. officials say that only a minority of employers are trying to cheat, and that these will be brought to time. Conviction of violation of an approved code carries with it a penalty of $500 fine or six months' imprisonment, or both, for each day's offense.

The most frequent complaint received is that employers are discriminating against employes who are members of organized labor.

Another abuse is an outlandish attempt to evade payment of minimum wages by classifying old and skilled employes as "apprentices." The latter are exempted from minimum wage provisions of the textile code. Cases are reported where men with twenty years' experience have been "reclassified" as "learners."

There are numerous other ways in which the "chiselers" are violating the spirit and letter of the recovery law. Certain hotel and restaurant employers signed the blanket agreement to pay $12.50 a week to employes who had been receiving $5. The bosses then forced each employe to pay $7 a week for meals.

Unions Aid Uncle Sam.

The unionized industries, of course, will provide the least work for the government "policing" boards. Where the workers are organized not many bosses will try to get away with such cheating devices. Those who do make the attempt will be halted promptly by the union.

"The biggest service the workers of the nation can render to America now is to organize in bonafide labor unions," one government official declared this week. "Where an industry is unionized and questions of wages, hours and working conditions are settled by the employers and union representatives sitting around a table, a large bulk of the work will be taken off the government's hands and a real contribution made toward the president's plans for industrial recovery."

Held Will Attend National Convention

Fred Held, representative of the American Federation of Full Fashion Hosiery Workers, who has been in Chattanooga for the past four or five weeks in the interest of his organization, will leave Chattanooga Saturday for Philadelphia to attend the annual convention of his organization, which opens in the "Sleepy City" Monday morning.

Mr. Held expects to return to the city in about a week, to again take up the work of assisting members of his craft locally to perfect the organization which has been placed upon a solid foundation during the past few weeks.

As long as a man and a woman like to be together there is no danger of a divorce suit—provided they are married to each other.

STATES, CITIES CAN HAVE CASH FOR THE ASKING

Money Ready to Put Idle to Work.

MORE THAN BILLION ALREADY ALLOTTED

Public Funds Are Available Upon Application to Federal Authorities.

(By Staff Correspondent)

Washington, Aug. 10.—Following the announcement that the public works administration had already allocated more than a billion dollars for construction projects throughout the nation, it was revealed to International Labor News Service that no further allocations would be made from the funds until the various states have applied for financial aid to promote such projects, subject to careful investigation and approval by state boards of regional advisors, respectively.

The exact amount of the allocations for construction projects throughout the nation is $1,023,966,201, Secretary of the Interior Department and Administrator of the Public Works Administration Harold L. Ickes said, adding that indicated speedy action on the part of the administration, which has been in existence only six weeks.

Moreover, Administrator Ickes pointed out that while delay has been eliminated, safeguards were preserved in making the allocations. He expressed his satisfaction that the cumulative effects of this great work will be felt throughout the nation in a very short time. He pointed out that the indirect benefits of these allocations would prove far greater, even than the direct circulation of money involved in the promotion of the construction projects, inasmuch as nearly every phase of the economic structure would be stimulated by demands for material needed in the work, which in turn means more work for miners, railroadmen, draymen, laborers, mechanics, river and lake boatmen, etc., while the payrolls for those actively engaged in these construction projects will stimulate the demand for clothing, shoes, foodstuffs, farm and dairy products, and the minor luxuries of life, such as radios, autos, etc., which in turn will broaden the circle of industrial and commercial activities throughout the nation.

This billion-dollar job-creating allotment will give quick employment to thousands of men who have been idle. It also will benefit many other thousands in almost every branch of industry. Likewise there will be a marked stimulation in all lines of business resulting directly from public works activities.

The billion-dollar mark was crossed when the special board of public works made allotments of $63,000,000 for the Grand Coulee dam project, previously approved by the president, $15,982,745 for the forest service of the department of agriculture, $2,600,000 for the coast and geodetic survey of the department of commerce and $2,500,000 for the geological survey of the department of interior.

The forest service allotment includes many construction and repair projects, fire prevention in the national forests, improvements of public camping grounds, erosion control work, white pine blister rust control work, timber stand improvement and eradication of poisonous plants. Most of the money will be spent directly for labor. Thousands of jobs will be created as a result.

The $2,600,000 for the coast and geodetic survey will be spent in a number of states for surveys and mapping. The geological survey was given $2,400,000 for topographic surveys and $100,000 fo ra survey of underground water resources. This work can be undertaken at once.

The $1,023,966,201 allocated thus far has been almost entirely for federal projects which were selected first because they provided work at once for large numbers of men. The decentralized state public works boards had to be set up before non-federal allotments could be made with safety.

Another reason for selecting federal projects first was because there was earmarked in the public works act

Wake Up, Uncle Sam

(Editorial in The News)

We learn with surprise that the Nira sign could hardly be displayed on our local postoffice. About 200 postal workers in this city have had their pay cut 15 per cent. More than this, the cut has lately been extended to Jan. 1, and a furlough of three days a month—substantially a new 10 per cent cut—imposed. And all this at the very time Uncle Sam was putting Nira into the homes and factories.

We hear charges, also, that the postoffice is using the "stretchout" system; that when a man is off, his route or work is given onto the shoulders of a regular, instead of a substitute. The substitutes have thus been thrown out of work, and the regulars have to double up.

Of course, local postal officials are not to blame. The policy is national in scope. Nonetheless, we think it too bad that Uncle Sam himself cannot consistently display the Nira sign.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—When did the American Federation of Labor make its first declaration on prison contract labor?

A.—At the first convention, in 1881, prison contract labor was denounced as a species of slavery in its worst form, as "it pauperizes free labor, demoralizes the honest manufacturer and degrades the very criminal whom it employes."

Q.—What is the oldest international union affiliated with the American Federation of Labor?

Codes, Gentlemen, Codes

They come, one by one and in droves, bringing codes. Codes are agreements—nothing more. These codes say in effect, "We agree with Uncle Sam," etc. And what do they agree to, these associations of business? First, to one tremendous new idea—that business of every kind is no longer the sole concern of the man who happens to be boss. Let the enormous significance of that single, simple fact have time to work its way into the deep places of thought.

An age has passed and an age dawns. Further, these men say, "We agree with Uncle Sam (not with you and me, but with Uncle Sam), that workers shall have the right to organize and to bargain collectively without any interference or coercion." What a great new fact that is!

They come bearing codes of agreement like that. What a day. What an hour! Uncle Sam has taken on a new stature and a new dignity. Uncle Sam stands before the whole world in a new role, garbed in new raiment, his face alight with a new inspiration and radiant with a new hope.

Uncle Sam has handed to his people a new freedom and a new kind of future. They can make that future just as good as they are capable of making it. If they fail now they can blame only themselves—they cannot blame Uncle Sam. He who, having freedom, will not avail himself of its blessings deserves no sympathy.

Easing Labor's Burden by Machinery

Of course it is an axiom that those who own and control industry do not install machinery for the benefit of the workers. They put in the iron slaves because they can make more profit out of them than they can by employing men and women.

Nevertheless industrial engineers and machine-mad employers continue to harp about the consideration for the workers which animates them when they introduce "labor-saving" machinery in wholesale amounts in order, they say, to "relieve" working men and women from the arduous toil of hand production. But if one reads far enough one will usually find that this professed altruism is submerged by the profit motive swinging into the picture.

This is illustrated by a recent article in the Railway Age which carries the suggestive title, "Easing the Burden of Labor." The article describes various forms of machinery used by the owners of our railways to eliminate thousands of railway employes and tells what the railroad owners have accomplished in "reducing the burden on labor" performed by section gangs in keeping the tracks free of weeds. The article states:

> Weeding was formerly a hand operation, slow and expensive, which required from 300 to 800 man-hours a mile and cost from $80 to $200. Today through the perfection of suitable equipment, the same track can be cleared of weeds in two or three hours by means of chemical applications or burning for as little as $3.50 to $20 a mile.

The same sort of "easing the burden of labor" has been applied with such revolutionary thoroughness in other work like rail laying and ballast cleaning that "the section gang is being gradually reduced to a policing unit."

The author of the article grows grandiloquent over his theme that this labor-displacing machinery was designed primarily "to reduce the burden on labor," but finally lets the real cat out of the bag. He says:

> * * * From an economic standpoint, few such machines can survive unless they are able to demonstrate savings of sufficient magnitude to pay a satisfactory profit on the investment they represent.

There you have it. Those who own and control the railway industry and every other industry substitute "labor-saving" machinery for working men and women, not from any altruistic desire to "ease the burden on labor," but solely because the dollars and cents cost of the work done by the machines is less than the cost of the same work done by men and women. The owners of industry by the introduction of machinery "save" themselves the cost of human labor and swell the size of their dividends, while the workers whose labor has been "saved" are thrown into the army of the unemployed and live on a near-starvation basis.

The Poor Come First

Observe in what stores the NIRA emblems first are shown. Mostly in the small stores. Many of the big fellows have come through, but the first rush was a rush of little fellows. Always it is so. It is among the poor and those who need help for themselves that America usually finds its first and readiest response to the call of duty. The first consumer's label observed by this writer was pasted to the windshield of a colored man's little auto.

But here the people have a potent weapon. They will not buy where they do not find the N. R. A. blue eagle. That bird is going to pack a grand old wallop and some of the profit-takers are due for a resounding, reverberating sock in the profit plexus.

Liberating the Workers from Toil

The editor of the Washington Post is greatly worried over the provision in the law appropriating $3,300,000,000 for public works that human labor instead of machinery shall be employed wherever practicable. Echoing the out-of-date views of the laissez-faire economists, he goes into ecstasies over the substitution of iron slaves for men and women in industry and sings this theme song to the machine:

> The machine has liberated millions of human beings from toil. Human labor is needed less and less as machine production progresses. No one can truthfully deny that machinery has been a great boon to the toilers of the world, yet in a period of distress they turn from it as the source of their difficulties.

This rhapsody about machinery having liberated millions of human beings from toil will not stand examination. In fact, the only persons who have secured freedom from toil by the substitution of machinery for human workers in the production and distribution of wealth are the few who own and control the machine. So far as the workers are concerned millions of them have lost their jobs because the employers can get the work done more cheaply by machinery. A considerable portion of the world army of 30,000,000 unemployed workers whose feet now pound the pavements in every country looking for employment, are jobless solely because those who own and control industry have installed iron machines to take their places.

Under production carried on solely for the private profit of those who own industry the workers receive practically no benefits from machinery and the only freedom from toil which millions of them do receive as the result of machine production is the freedom to live as best they can on the starvation rations doled out to the jobless by public and private relief organizations.

The burglar's wife was in the witness box and the prosecuting counsel was conducting a very vigorous cross-examination:

Prosecutor: Madam, you are the wife of this man?

Witness: Yes.

Prosecutor: You knew he was a burglar when you married him?

Witness: Yes.

Prosecutor: How did you come to contract a matrimonial alliance with such a man?

Witness: Well, I was getting old, and had to choose between a lawyer and a burglar.

The cross-examination ended.

June Bride—Lucifer cake, dear.

Hubby—But I thought you were making an angel cake?

June Bride—So I was—but it fell.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Sixty days, said General Johnson. Sixty days for trial. Sixty days in which to find out whether the recovery act can save the nation.

Sixty days isn't so very long. Let's say ninety. So, ninety days between the American people and either good luck or bad, life or death for the old economic order, jobs or no jobs for the millions. Ninety days for the life or finish of the old order?

That sounds a bit foolish, for the old order has gone anyway and nothing can bring it back. It passed out when NIRA came in. It had been crumbling a long while before that, getting into such a hopeless mess that its doom was sealed. But anyway, there we have that sixty—or ninety—day time of testing.

Will NIRA win or lose? A better question is: Will the people win or lose? Little the people care what name may be borne by the vehicle that bears them through a promised land of jobs and bread.

Well, where are we at today? The answer is simple, short. We are on the way. Moreover, NIRA will win, for the simple reason that it has to win.

History is filled with records made by men who made the records just because failure was out of the question. They had to win. But this winning will be at the cost of terrific effort. Big business, blind as ever and maybe blinder, is putting in the path every block it can think of. Those who heard Donald Richberg, NIRA counsel, make his magnificent radio address heard him excoriate the ten percenters—those whose only idea in life is to make 10 per cent off their fellow men, to give back as little as possible and to rule the roost. Well, those ten per cent boys are busy. In steel and oil and coal they are busy, trying the old game. Richberg said this war isn't to their liking, because it is a war against them.

The 10 per cent boys are going to get licked.

The ten per cent boys have to get licked. If they don't get licked, then the rest of us have no chance. And that's why there is a war on right now. The long, long struggle has come to its climax. It's a great experience to live at a time of such climax. It's a great thing to be in this war. It will be a great thing to see the 10 per cent boys get wiped out, their graft taken away.

Mr. Kipling ought to get back into his old-time stride and write us some poems about today's fuzzy-wuzzys. He ought to write us some "boots" poems about this tremendous conflict, in which strength of character and ideas are the weapons.

Meanwhile America watches such a spectacle as men never before observed—the great men of big business and high finance, walking up to a witness stand to confess the secrets and the ambitions and the little cheatings of their industry, bringing the whole mess into the light of day.

And, ladies and gentlemen of America, it is the light, after all, that will determine the issue in this great sixty days.

When Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins recently visited Homestead, Pa., in the course of an investigation of steel industry conditions, the mayor and the police openly tried to bar her from addressing a meeting and attempted to prevent certain workers from hearing her speak. It was perhaps the first time in the history of the nation that a cabinet officer had been the victim of such tactics and was a sensational incident of Miss Perkins' visit to the steel region. Yet not a word of it appeared in the newspapers until Miss Perkins returned to Washington, three days later, and the story was told by Father J. Haas and confirmed by the secretary.

Miss Perkins, asked where the reporters were while the Homestead authorities were "acting up," facetiously replied she supposed they must have been drinking coca-colas. Whatever they were doing, they were not telling all the news of Miss Perkins' visit to the bailwick of steel. It is plain that either one of two things happened: the newspapers and news gathering agencies suppressed the story or they fell down on the job. In either case, no credit is reflected on the newspapers and news services.

From June 1, 1932, to May 31, 1933, total local and international benefits paid by the International Photo-Engravers' Union of North America were $2,428,448.86. The total was made up of $2,105,394.52 local benefits and $319,053.93 international benefits. Of the local benefits, the largest was $1,959,617.96 to aid unemployed members. The largest item in the international benefits was $181,409.83 for strikes and lockouts.

The figures make a remarkable record, a record all the more remarkable when it is considered that the International Photo-Engravers' union is composed of less than nine thousand journeymen, of whom 36.9% were unemployed, an additional 41.4% working but part time, leaving 21.7% steadily employed on a full time basis for the past year, and that all of this money was contributed from greatly reduced earnings.

When the railroads came down from their high horses and agreed to drop their demand for an additional 12½ per cent wage cut, common sense scored a triumph. How they could have thought for an instant that cutting wages at this stage of the game would help them is beyond comprehension. With prices rising, men going back to work and the faces of the people turning toward recovery, to have cut pay further in the railroad industry might easily have nullified all recent gains and sent industry again on the downward path.

Joseph B. Eastman, newly appointed federal co-ordinator of transportation, performed a big public service in making the railroads see there must be no downward revision of wages. His action, which was taken in his capacity as a private citizen, means there will be no change in railroad wages until June 30, 1934. By that time the industrial and business situation may be so much better that the railroads will be unable to find even the shadow of an excuse for seeking pay reductions.

Criticism of the time spent by congress in debate is common. The criticism has often been justified, as congress has in too many cases been guilty of wasting time in useless talk. But the criticism does not hold good for the congress session recently ended, according to figures made public by Representative Martin F. Smith, of Washington.

Smith shows that only sixty hours of debate were consumed in the house in passing the twelve major bills comprising the administration's legislative program. In view of the tremendous importance of the legislation, this seems a surprisingly low figure and indicates that the house took its job seriously and did its work without unnecessary delay.

To the freezer which makes a continuous roll of ice cream has now been added a device which incorporates a fruit syrup in the center of the extruded bar. A hundred Cleveland dealers are now using the device which introduces the flavoring material through a tube in the center of the bar as it comes from the freezer. Five-cent bars are cut off automatically and wrapped in wax paper.

ON'T JOIN UNIONS, SAY LOW-PAY BOSSES IN EFFORT TO STOP DRIVE

Alarmed at the prospect of having to surrender their dictatorial powers over their employers, anti-union "company" associations are resorting to a widespread campaign of lies and misrepresentation in an effort to stem the tide of labor organization which is sweeping over the nation, says the current issue of "Labor."

Unionism, however, continues to move forward. The flood of membership applications is still pouring into practically every labor union headquarters in the land and is increasing every day.

Vast Army of Recruits.

The American Federation of Labor, alone, issued 116 charters to new, directly affiliated local unions during July. The significance of that gain is emphasized by the fact that for the 12-month period ending Aug. 31, 1932, charters of all kinds—national unions, central labor unions, local trade unions and federal labor unions—issued by the A. F. of L. totaled only thirty-three.

During the "boom" year of 1929 the total number of all charters in all four classes was seventy-five.

The actual and potential membership of the new unions chartered by the A. F. of L. during July runs into hundreds of thousands, Secretary Frank Morrison said.

The new A. F. of L. charters, however, are only a tiny portion of the picture of what is taking place in organized labor circles. Every national and international unio nis making similar gains. Those affiliated directly to the A. F. of L. are workers in industries where no international or national unions exists for them to join.

Where the latter organizations are available, the workers are joining them. Their figures on membership increases will not show in A. F. of L. records until reports for the next fiscal year begin to be filed. The A. F. of L.'s fiscal year always ends on Aug. 31.

Low-Wage Bosses Frantic.

Labor headquarters are also flooded with evidence of the march of workers into the bonafide labor movement.

At first these anti-unionists based their hopes on the "company union." They were sure they could slip it into the codes in some form. The decision on the "Steel Trust's" code scattered that hope.

Now the bosses are trying to put over a concerted drive to convince workers that they do not need unions to protect them. That the employers will see that they "get a square deal" and that the N. R. A. will also protect them.

The propaganda is nation-wide. Full-page advertisements are being run in daily papers by bosses' organizations. Hand bills are being distributed to workers by bosses' agents. All are highly misleading.

Workers Need Unions.

The workers now need unions more than ever before. The codes presented to the N. R. A. from non-union industries—all drawn up by the bosses—amply demonstrate this. One code formulated this week calls for wages as low as $3 for 54 hours' work. That's only one example.

The national industrial recovery act, itself, is sufficient answer to the bosses' claim that the act does "encourage or expect" workers to join unions. Section 1 of the law declares that one of the purposes of the act is to "induce and maintain united action of labor and management." It further says (Section 7B) that "the president shall, so far as practicable, afford every opportunity, to employers and employes in every trade and industry . . . to establish by mutual agreement, the standards as to the maximum rates of pay, and such other conditions of employment as may be necessary . . . to effectuate the policy of this title"—that is, industrial recovery.

Have "F. D.'s" Assurance.

And when the employers insert anti-union advertisements in newspapers, or circulate handbills, or in any way attempt to keep workers from joining unions they are violating Section 7A of the law. That section reads, in language so plain that it cannot be misunderstood by anyone, as follows:

". . . Employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing, and shall be free from the interference, restraint or coercion of employers of labor, OR THEIR AGENTS, in the designation of such representatives or in self-organization or in other concerted activities for the purpose of collective bargaining or other mutual aid or protection.

". . . No employe and no one seeking employment shall be required as a condition of employment to join any 'company union' or to refrain from joining, organizing, or assisting a labor organization of his own choosing."

American workers have the assurance of President Roosevelt, himself, that no one will be permitted to "whittle away" that guarantee.

A TONIC Laxative

CONSTIPATION, with the annoying symptoms that usually come with it, cuts down organic force and disturbs normal health and well-being. A thorough cleansing of the digestive tract is of great assistance in the removal of sickening constipation symptoms.

When excessive accumulated waste matter disturbs and strains the muscles of the large intestines, rendering them temporarily unable to perform their wave-like evacuating movements, Thedford's Black-Draught is useful in stimulating them to activity, which, again started, should continue regularly until some future disturbance interferes. In this way, Thedford's Black-Draught is one of the TONIC laxatives, tending, as it does, to establish a regular habit of evacuation.

funds for specific purposes. Included in this list were $400,000,000 for public roads, $50,000,000 for roads and trails on Indian reservations and other public lands, $25,000,000 for subsistence homesteads and $100,000,000 for the farm credit administration.

The president by executive order made available $238,000,000 for naval construction. In addition the president has drawn from the public works fund $50,000,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority, $20,000,000 for the civilian conservation corps, $20,000,000 for the purchase of land, $130,000 for industrial recovery administration administrative expenses and $100,000 for public works administration administrative expenses.

The $400,000,000 for roads already has been equitably distributed among the states and actual construction work putting thousands of men back to work will begin within a few days. Bids have been received for the naval vessels and contracts will be awarded soon.

Non-federal projects are to be presented to the state advisory boards, the personnel of which will be disclosed, Administrator Ickes said, indicating that the make-up of these state advisory boards would include representatives of labor.

The construction program is being administered through ten regions, each with a regional adviser. The advisers have been appointed, with one labor man in the list. The sole labor man is Daniel J. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs, with headquarters in Chicago. His region is No. 3, including Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Ohio and Wisconsin.

Functions of the regional advisors will consist of obtaining from the state boards within the region lists of projects under consideration by them, together with recommendations or rejections. Each regional advisor will from time to time visit the offices of the state boards within the region and advise and consult with those boards, to the end that action may be consistent with sound local and district planning.

The regional advisors will keep the national planning board in Washington advised of developments and accumulate, collect and submit to the Washington planning board all information useful to it.

The advisors will also serve the federal public works administrator in any manner that he may order for the purpose of speeding up the work, investigating and solving such problems as may arise.

Clemons Bros. Force Increased by Five

Clemons Bros., local furniture dealers, have increased permanently their forces under the new code, five people being added to the payroll under the "new deal," it is announced.

A representative of the firm told The Labor World Thursday the increase in number of employes was not for the duration of the "readjustment sale" which is now in progress at the store, but the new employes were added in an effort to co-operate with the president's program of re-employment.

BRICKLAYERS WIN BIG VICTORY BY ARBITRATION

New York Employers Lose Fight to Cut Pay and Subcontract Work, by Decision of Board of Three—Union Reveals Bankers' Grasp on Contractors.

Washington, Aug. 10.—Organized labor has just won a signal victory through arbitration.

Announcement of an award covering wages, hours, sub-contracting and working conditions giving the union complete victory on all except one or two minor points, has just been handed down in the case covering bricklayers in New York. Announcement was made at international union headquarters here.

Hearings in arbitration proceedings began June 15. James A. Beha, former New York state insurance commissioner, presided as umpire. Henry D. Sayer represented the Mason Builders' association, while John P. Frey, secretary-treasurer, A. F. of L. Metal Trades council and NIRA Labor Advisory Board member, represented the New York bricklayers' unions and the Bricklayers' Masons and Plasters' international union.

Employers Lose Big Points.

The employers sought a reduction in wages and sought the right to subcontract their work. They made their hardest fight on these two points and lost on both. They also made a desperate effort to deprive the new agreement of jurisdiction over Long Island. They lost on this also.

The wage rate remains at $1.65 an hour, the figure set by arbitration a year ago. The work day is one of eight hours, five days a week.

The case was perhaps the hardest fought arbitration case in years. Both sides presented voluminous briefs, including charts and graphs.

Key to Building Pay Rates.

It was generally felt that the award would serve as the key to other building trades wage rates.

In addition to local union officials, the unions were represented in the hearings by Acting I. U. President Harry C. Bates and I. U. Treasurer R. J. Gray.

Recovery Act Cited.

In the lesser provisions the award was signed by the three members of the board, though on the vital questions of sub-contracting, hours and wages the decision was by majority.

The award cites the Recovery Act and says that in view of the emergency and the efforts of the Recovery Administration "and the presentation and record established in this arbitration" practically no change is made in the terms of the old agreement.

Nevertheless, the victory is regarded as one of tremendous importance.

CENTRAL BODY MEETS MONDAY IN NEW HALLS

Chattanooga Trades and Labor council will meet Monday night, for the first time, in Roosevelt Hall, corner Seventh and Market street over Liggett's. The meeting comes after one of those rare three-week intervals, the schedule calling for sessions on the second and fourth Monday nights in each month.

Secretary Cuthbert Friday morning asked The Labor World to request all delegates to be present for this initial meeting in the new halls. "There are some delegates," he said, "who have not been in attendance in months, and some who appear only at occasional meetings. I believe the 'new deal' which is very much in evidence among the workers, in the matter of organization, should cause every loyal trades unionist to take a new lease on life and 'start from taw' in his efforts to assist himself and his fellows to better conditions for all."

Railroads Asked To Give Jobs to Additional Men

Federal Coordinator Urges Action, Following Labor Charge Carriers Are Not Doing Share in Work Drive.

Washington, Aug. 10.—Taking cognizance of railroad labor's charge that the railroads are not co-operating with President Roosevelt in the campaign to provide increased employment and restore prosperity, Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, urged that the carriers spend every available dollar in putting men back to work.

In a telegram to the presidents of all large railroads, Eastman pointed out that men could be given work on "long overdue repairs." He said reports had indicated that the railroads had put about 40,000 men back to work in the last two months and had extended the hours of part-time workers in many instances.

Must Pull Together.

"This is good," his telegram said, "but is it all that can be done?"

"A countrywide drive is on to increase employment, build up purchasing power, increase production and sustain it by consumption.

"If all pull together this drive will succeed, but it may fail if some hang back. The railroads will gain directly and immediately if it succeeds and they have much deferred maintenance work which sorely needs to be done. Money spent for such work will be well spent and consistent with economy."

Labor Criticizes Roads.

Labor's charge that the railroads are not doing their part in the re-employment drive was voiced by the Railway Labor Executives' association, meeting at Cleveland. The meeting estimated that 700,000 rail workers are now without jobs. A statement issued by the association, following the meeting, said:

"Member organizations reported that the railroads are continuing to throw employes out of work, thereby increasing unemployment at an alarming rate. The organizations view this action as contrary to the president's emergency re-employment program. It represents a complete disregard of the rights of railroad labor as defined in the emergency railroad transportation act. * * * "

Hedges-Walsh-Weidner Sublets Navy Contract to Concern in Germany and Fires Men for Joining Union.

(By International Labor News Service)

Washington, Aug. 10.—Hedges-Walsh & Weidner Co., a firm manufacturing boilers and cast iron soil pipe, who received a contract from the U. S. navy for drumheads on naval ships, has sublet this contract to a firm in Germany. The same firm recently discharged two men for joining the union, according to C. W. Wilkerson, representative of the Metal Trades Department of A. F. of L. The firm refused to come into the Cast Iron Soil Pipe association in submitting a code of fair competition for the industry.

Use of Manual Labor Directed On Public Works

Hand Work Must Be Employed Wherever Practicable, Advisory Bodies Told — 30-Hour Week Set.

Washington, Aug. 10.—Human labor instead of machinery must be used wherever practicable in projects built with money from the $3,300,000 public works fund, state advisory committees have been informed.

Direction for the employment of manual labor was contained in a new outline of purposes and policies issued by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who is administrator of the public works money.

The outline specified that a 30-hour week, "so far as practicable and feasible," should be established, with working time lost because of bad weather and unavoidable delays made up in succeeding days.

Other instructions included the following:

Jobs shall be equitably distributed among unemployed qualified workers.

Employment of convicts and use of materials produced by them is prohibited.

Local labor should, as far as practicable, be selected from lists of qualified workers submitted by local employment agencies.

Highly skilled or organized labor should be obtained through recognized trade union locals.

Wages should be "just and reasonable," "sufficient to provide . . . a standard of living in decency and comfort."

No deductions from minimum wages shall be permitted on account of goods purchased, rent or other obligations.

Preference shall be given to materials produced under codes of competition approved by the industrial administration, "if prices, quality and quantities available are satisfactory. . ."

1,000 EMPLOYES ON OKLAHOMA WORK RELIEF PROJECTS STRIKE

Tulsa, Okla.—About 1,000 men employed on work relief projects struck here and sent a committee to authorities demanding a five-day week and a minimum wage scale of 40 cents an hour.

Under the prevailing scale, the men worked seven hours daily, two to seven days a week, at 1.25 a day.

National Figures May Participate In Labor Day Program

Norris, McKellar, Bachman and McReynolds Invited to Chattanooga.

Central Body Will Co-operate With N. R. A. Officials in Morning Parade, Sponsor Great Program for Afternoon at Warner Park---Lines Out for Major Entertainment Features.

Senators George W. Norris, Kenneth McKellar and Nathan Bachman have been invited to take part in the great Labor Day program to be staged in Chattanooga on the first Monday in September, and if plans outlined by the special Labor Day committee of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council are carried out these three outstanding national figures will take part in the big N. R. A.-Labor parade in the forenoon and will deliver addresses at Warner Park beginning at about 2 p. m.

Wires were sent the three statesmen Thursday night, following a meeting of the committee at Roosevelt Hall.

Congressman McReynolds, who is in Chattanooga, was extended an invitation personally Friday morning.

An invitation to Central Body to co-operate with the N. R. A. local officials in a morning demonstration was unanimously accepted by the delegates present at Monday night's meeting of Central Body, although exact nature of Labor's participation has not yet been decided. Delegates from Local No. 80, American Federation of Musicians, announced, however, that this organization would be pleased to contribute a first-class band to the celebration.

Officials of Central Body Friday urged all local unions to make preparations for participation in the parade. It is the purpose of the committee, President A. C. Kamin said, to have if possible a number of floats representing local unions, and he asked that organizations contemplating such participation communicate their plans to the committee at the earliest possible time.

Due to unprecedented demands made upon the time of practically every trades union official in the county, plans for observance of Labor Day have been somewhat delayed, and the usual type of program will not be attempted. However, it was said Friday morning there will be plenty of entertainment offered as a sideline to the great speaking program which will be of itself a stellar attraction, even though all three senators are not able to be present.

Lines are out for a number of major amusement features, and really worthwhile prizes will be distributed free at stated periods during the progress of the afternoon program, spokesmen for the committee said.

General Meeting Textile Workers Called for Sunday Afternoon at 3 At Roosevelt Hall, Market at Seventh

A general meeting for all textile workers, union and non-union, has been called for Sunday afternoon at Roosevelt hall, Seventh and Market streets (over Liggett's), at 3 o'clock.

John Peel, representative of the United Textile Workers of America, announced Thursday that a cordial invitation is extended all workers in the mills in and around Chattanooga to attend and hear the present status of the president's recovery program, as it relates to this craft, explained.

At the conclusion of the open meeting, Mr. Peel said, a closed session will be held for members of the four local unions which have already been organized, and any desiring to affiliate may present their applications at that time.

Should Roosevelt Hall be inadequate to accommodate all comers, it is possible to connect with another hall, providing space for several hundred additional visitors.

Progress of the battle to force a "fair deal" for local textile workers under the codes will be related, and plans for further prosecution of the fight will be made, it was said.

The meeting will open promptly at 3 o'clock.

Peel Urges Textile Owners to Join In President's Program

Appeals to the Patriotism of Recalcitrant Bosses.

Union Representative Says Failure of N. R. A. Would Mean Neglect of Duty "to Our Government and to Civilization"---Organization Movement Progresses Satisfactorily.

"Thirteen million people are not going to be satisfied to remain public dependents, begging from house to house, sleeping on park benches and in doorways," says John Peel, representative of the United Textile Workers of America, who was called into Chattanooga several weeks ago to assist in organizing the workers in that industry under the banner of trades unionism.

"If the NIRA fails," the textile union official declared, "we will have failed in our duty to our government and to civilization as a whole."

In a prepared interview for The Labor World this week, Mr. Peel also pays his respects to the unfair employer, particularly those local mill owners who are crying their patriotism from the housetops and using every low trick of which they are capable to defeat the purposes of the national recovery act.

"We are not appealing to textile workers to join the union," he said, holding that if workers are not now convinced their only salvation lies in organization, an appeal of any character would be useless. "However," he continued, "I have no hesitancy in advising all workers in our industry to affiliate with the only organization which understands our problems sufficiently to insure proper protection against the combinations of employers who are in many cases endeavoring to circumvent the provisions and intentions of President Roosevelt's recovery program."

Mr. Peel's statement follows, in full:

"Organization of textile workers in this vicinity is progressing at a rapid pace. Each day we are receiving calls from new localities, requesting that some one connected with the labor movement come and explain the national industrial recovery act, and assist the workers in forming an organization. We are responding to these calls for assistance as rapidly as is possible under the circumstances. With a limited number in the field who are able to devote time and attention to the unorganized, it will require patience on the part of those outside the pale of the organized labor movement. However, we will get to them in time.

"The unfair employer in Chattanooga is making the problem increasingly hard for both the workers and the fair employer. Intimidations of the usual kind are being practiced by the unfair employer. Superintendents and overseers, and some of the 'higher-ups' are saying to employes, 'If you join the union you will be fired; we do not intend to have a union in this plant'. 'Sign a learner's agreement if you want to hold your job.' 'Why did you appear before the arbitration board? Don't you know you are fixing to close the plant down? If you had not appeared before the board we might have called you back to work.'

"In spite of all this the workers are rallying to the banner of trades unionism with an honest desire to cooperate with the fair employer under President Roosevelt's 'new deal,' as well as to assist in defeating the purposes of the unfair employer, whose policies are unethical, unsocial and economically unsound.

"The fair employer will not hesitate to recognize the rights of his employes to organize themselves into an organization of their own, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, an institution recognized by our government, and one that has, since its inception, fought for the betterment of humanity. It is to be expected of the unfair employer that he will fight any recognition of his employes. He is the type that has sunk us in the mire of degradation, misery and despair, a menace to his own locality, to his government, and to civilization as a whole. To the unfair employer may we ask this question: What plan have you to offer to prevent our nation from becoming embroiled in a revolution, if you defeat this plan with which we have been presented? Thirteen million people are not going to be satisfied to remain public dependents, begging bread from house to house, sleeping on park benches and in doorways. This army of unemployed represents approximately one-third of our entire industrial army. To feed them from the federal treasury for weeks, months or years means only that in the end the huge sums of money wasted in such manner must be repaid, all of us must share the burden of repayment; hence it is much better to provide jobs at decent wages that all citizens may resume their places among those who believe in the preservation of our present form of government and the ideals of Americanism.

"We do not appeal to textile workers to join hands with us in an endeavor to pull the textile industry out of the mire. If after almost four years of intolerable conditions in our industry, into which we put our capital (labor) and our lives, the workers are not yet convinced that organization is the only remedy, an appeal of any nature would be useless. If we are to correct the evils and abuses to which we have been subjected, we must organize. If the NIRA becomes void, and should we fail to co-operate with President Roosevelt and others of our federal administration in an honest effort to better our conditions, we will have failed in our duty to our families, to our government, and to civilization as a whole, and we will have no one to whom we can appeal for assistance, because we were not sufficiently interested in our own welfare to take advantage of our opportunities.

"I have no hesitancy, therefore, in advising all workers in our industry to affiliate with the only organization which understands our problems sufficiently to insure proper protection against the combinations of employers, who are, in many cases, endeavoring to circumvent the provisions and intentions of President Roosevelt's recovery program."

Roosevelt Hall 'Dedicated' With Great Delegation

New Quarters Enjoyed by Large Number at Busy Session Central Body.

Roosevelt Hall, new quarters of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, served a fine purpose Monday night, when first regular meeting of Central Body was held in that fine new auditorium provided for sessions of the larger labor organizations of Chattanooga.

Attendance was so large that had the meeting been held in the old halls the delegates could not have been accommodated. More than 100 were present, representing old organizations and new, and the clean, newly-overhauled quarters seemed to spur the delegates on to a more enthusiastic consideration of the many and varied problems which faced the union men and women for discussion.

Representatives were on hand from eight or ten new unions, and reports of the various officers and committees were followed by plans to further prosecute the campaign of organization which has swept the city for the past six or eight weeks.

Carter Lynch, member of the local N. R. A. organization, addressed the delegates, and was given a cordial hearing.

Under "good of the order," resolutions were introduced calling upon A. C. Hester, newly-appointed state fire marshal, to investigate the Chicago, San Francisco and Baltimore fires, and demanding that The Labor World furnish ice water for all visitors and, "in view of the fact that there is no back door in The Labor World office, and the financial condition of the editor being in uncertain state, an opening large enough for said editor to crawl through be cut in the back wall, for use in case it becomes suddenly necessary for him to leave the premises of said Labor World office."

BASEBALL MOGUL, LANE DRUG STORE CALLED "UNFAIR"

Central Body Acts on Complaints.

BUILDING TRADES CHARGE "RAW DEALS"

Allege Lack of Interest Shown by Drug Chain and Sportsman.

Chattanooga Trades and Labor council Monday night declared Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga Baseball club, "unfair to organized labor," and on the remaining three days of the week when the club played here pickets were placed in the vicinity of the park notifying the public in general that the attitude of club officials had been deemed unfriendly to working people.

The controversy arose, immediately, over the erection of a summer home, clubhouse, or something, by President Engel, near the Rod and Gun club, by non-union labor. Background of the break, however, dates to the time when Engel came here from Washington to look after the affairs of the local club. Non-union carpenters were used in the erection of the present stadium, and local union officials declare at that time Mr. Engel signed an agreement that at any time in the future when he, as president of the club or as an individual, had occasion to employ workmen, union craftsmen would be employed.

Early this spring, trade union officials relate, it was reported Mr. Engel contemplated some sort of building on his country estate, and he was waited upon by a committee which sought preference for union labor on the job. This committee was told, by Mr. Engel, it was said, that he was not at that time ready to start his building operations, but assurance was given that when the building work was done organized labor would be given every consideration. Recently it was established that the work was being done by cheap colored and white labor, and another conference was sought with the baseball club's president. Mr. Engel, however, was out of the city, and various moguls at the ball park professed to have no authority in the matter. When Mr. Engel did return, however, his attention was called to the matter, and he is said to have readily promised to discharge the non-union workers and replace them with members of organized labor. However, various and sundry efforts to contact him after that were fruitless, and the work continued as it had started.

Action taken by Central Body Monday night, declaring Engel "unfair to organized labor," has been communicated to the Washington club owners and to the Washington Central Body, as well as to central labor

Rumored Peace With 'Home Stores' Brings Strong Denial

Local Workers Have Little Hope Merchant Prince Will Change Attitude.

Vigorous denial of rumors that an agreement had been reached with Roy McDonald, operator of the so-called "Home Stores," was made this week by officials of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council.

"In view of McDonald's strange ideas about the position of workers in the scheme of things," a representative of Central Body told The Labor World this week, "it is too much to expect that he would have a change of heart even to such an extent that independent, free-born workingmen might discuss with him an agreement. The grocer-baker-dairyman-printer-publisher-individualist — or what have you—can hardly be pictured as agreeing to anything which would give his employes the right to an opinion about wages and working conditions. His philosophy as expressed to committees of local working people surely constituted 'rugged individualism' to the 'nth degree, and his employment of an out-of-town operator for his ambitious advertising scheme, a weekly throw-sheet, when local printers had long been unemployed indicated to us a general contempt for anything which would result in bettering conditions of Chattanooga working men. No, Mr. Editor, there has been no agreement with Roy McDonald, and if there ever is, you may assure your readers he has changed his mind to a great extent, and that a day's work for a 12-year-old will have been raised to more than two penny confections, such as was recently charged to the management of a 'Home Store.'"

Labor World readers will remember that McDonald told a committee which called upon him that he was an individualist, and that anyone who works for him will come to work at such time as he orders, and will quit by the same sign.

President Hoover, he said, made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders to keep wages up as an aid to prosperity. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer-baker-dairyman - printer - publisher-individualist averred, we would now be out of the depression, and further, he held, we will never be out until wages are further and further cut.

TEXTILE WORKERS WIN WAGE INCREASE FIGHT

McComb, Miss.—A one-day strike of 200 operators at the McComb Cotton mills sufficed to bring the management to terms.

The employes returned to work with a general wage increase and a pledge that the stretch-out system in force would be abolished.

About the best response one can get from a hog, unless it be kicked, is a grunt. And unkind as it may sound, that is about as much as one can get from some people.

Engineers Off To Splendid Start

Charter Received and Full List of Officers Selected Last Sunday.

Local 914, International Union of Operating Engineers, got away to a good start last Sunday afternoon at Roosevelt Hall, when officers were installed under the direction of W. M. Welch, international vice-president. The new local union will meet each first Sunday afternoon, according to present plans. The organization "begins business" with a membership of more than a half-hundred, and the officers expect this figure to be doubled within the next few weeks.

The following officers were elected:

President—Ira Sparks.

Vice-President — Herman Bridgeman.

Financial Secretary—Clyde Smallen.

Recording Secretary—John M. Divine.

Treasurer—T. T. Green.

Guard—W. R. Dykes.

Conductor—L. L. Trimm.

Trustees—W. M. Starkey, W. L. Case and P. T. Fitzgerald.

Delegates to Chattanooga Trades and Labor council will be named at the next regular meeting, it was announced.

15,000 IDLE WOMEN RIOT IN MAD STRUGGLE FOR JOBS

Chicago.—An advertisement for 1,500 experienced women workers by the Curtis candy plant here drew out 15,000 men and women applicants whose frenzied striving to be among the one in ten to obtain jobs resulted in a minor riot.

A. F. of L. to Aid Enforcement of Codes

Green Considering Plan Whereby Union Membership Will Check Violations.

Washington.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced that the entire membership of the federation will be recruited to check violations of blanket codes.

Joining with the consumers' drive, authorized by the NRA to help push the blanket code provision, the unions of the country would check establishments displaying the Blue Eagle to make sure they are living up to the president's agreement.

Mr. Green said details of the A. F. of L. plan were not in final shape, but predicted that the organization would act rapidly to publicize code violations and would recommend "drastic action" where the Blue Eagle was found being used incorrectly.

26,000 HOSIERY WORKERS LAND 25% PAY INCREASE

Philadelphia, Pa.—Goaded to desperation because of the militant strikes of the hosiery workers in this region and in a desperate effort to forestall a federal investigation of sweatshop conditions which are mainly responsible for the recent walkouts of thousands of factory employes throughout Pennsylvania, the board of directors of the Full-Fashioned Hosiery Manufacturers of America, Inc., voted a 25 per cent pay increase in piece work and daily wage rates.

The manufacturers said 26,000 employes would receive the wage boost. It was in line with the recent action taken by mill owners in eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey. The action climaxed heated debate at a special meeting hurriedly called by George Lang, president of the employer group.

Johnson to Make Labor Day Speech in Chicago

Washington.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator, will make the Labor day address at the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago.

The invitation to speak in Chicago on Labor day was extended to Gen. Johnson by John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, accompanied Mr. Fitzpatrick to Gen. Johnson's office and enthusiastically seconded the invitation.

Labor day is around the closing date of the crusade to line up America 100 per cent for President Roosevelt's blanket agreement to shorten hours and raise wages in the interest of providing work for millions of jobless and increasing mass purchasing power to stimulate business prosperity. It is expected that Gen. Johnson will have something important to say regarding the campaign and the principles underlying the president's program.

Plumbers Playful At All-Day Frolic

Members of Local 43, Plumbers and Steamfitters, together with the master plumbers and several invited guests, made merry last Saturday at Cummings Springs, on the Cummings highway.

Refreshments had been provided by a committee from the local, and various "stunts" enlivened the proceedings throughout the day. Prizes were given to the winners of various contests.

The affair was arranged by a committee consisting of Frank Watson, Harry Martin, Barney Walker, Joe Dobbs and "Sandy" Wheals, and "a good time was had by all."

10,000 SHOE WORKERS LAND PAY BOOST, 40-HOUR WEEK

Haverhill, Mass. — Some 10,000 Haverhill shoe workers who refused to accept a 10 per cent wage raise offered by the employers as an old union agreement ran out, won a victory here when arbitrators awarded them a 25 per cent boost effective Aug. 12, with a 10 per cent bonus for the time worked from Aug. 1, when the old agreement ran out.

About 150 factories, embracing the entire shoe industry here, are affected by the settlement. The new scale is based on a 40-hour, 5-day week, effective immediately.

LABOR QUERIES

Q.—What actors were first to organize in this country?

A.—Vaudeville performers, who formed a union chartered by the American Federation of Labor as Actors' Protective Union No. 6453.

Q.—Has European labor formed an organization to fight fascism?

A.—Yes. Organized by the International Federation of Trade Unions and the Labor and Socialist International, it is called the Matteotti fund and its primary purpose is to aid the labor movements of countries without democracy. Q.—What is the name of the airplane pilots' union?

A.—Air Line Pilots' association. Headquarters are at 3145 West Sixty-third street, Chicago.

Wisdom

The preacher of false doctrines working off his fervor from a soap box in the open is a comparatively harmless figure; but drive him to the cellar to plot overt acts and he becomes a real danger.—Albert J. Beveridge.

What Next!

Adolf Rohrback, famous German inventor, announces that he has designed a unique new airplane which he says will fly backward, forward, hover motionless or rise and descend almost vertically. He calls the new crafe a "umlauffluegel flugzeug." Locomotion and lifting power are provided by blade-like horizontal fins, three on each side, which revolves in a circle around two axial bars connected with the motor, which is inside the plane.

The optimist—Everything you give away in this world comes back to you twofold, you know.

The Pessimist—Yes, I've noticed it. I gave my daughter away six months ago, and she and her husband came back to live with us last week.

Got Over Weak, Painful Condition By Taking Cardui

"I was weak and run-down and suffered quite a bit with pains in my side," writes Mrs. Nick Barranco, of Beaumont, Texas. "I was nervous. I did not rest well at night, and my appetite was poor.

"My mother had used Cardui with beneficial result, so I decided to take it. I surely am glad I did, for it stopped the pain in my side and built up my general health. I took seven bottles in all."

Cardui is sold at all drug stores.

Arbitration Means Arbitration

There is a fear that the new national arbitration board may be used to stop strikes. Unqualifiedly, this is not the case.

Think a moment: There can be no arbitration until there is a dispute. On its face, the national arbitration board is not to stop strikes, but to END them, to SETTLE them, after they have started.

The Great Hour to Organize

This is the time for the organization of new unions and for the strengthening of old ones. Today labor has the FREE OPPORTUNITY to organize.

Perhaps even more important than that, labor can take part in the new control of industry, ONLY IF IT IS ORGANIZED.

More than ever, the lone and lonesome non-union worker is OUT OF THE PICTURE. This is the great day of organization. We are entering an age of industrial control, THROUGH ORGANIZATION. America is laying the plans for a nation of organized intelligence and organized determination to create a nation GOOD FOR PEOPLE.

If you are not in a union, you are behind the parade. You are out of it. You are on the sidelines, merely an onlooker. Get into a union today. If there is none in your trade or occupation, call on officers of the Central Labor Union for advice.

Today there is, or will be formed, a union for every kind of worker.

GET INTO A UNION. GET WHERE YOU COUNT FOR SOMETHING.

Mr. Roy McDonald, merchant prince-baker-dairyman-printer-publisher-individualist, recently announced that his payroll has been increased $700 per week by the code. Whereupon a sarcastic and unrefined union agitator injects the opinion that "300 per cent. is too much." Whaddya mean, brother, those printers (?) down there may get as much as $15 per week. Two fig-bars was not the pay scale for all employes of the "individualist."

Some of those now proudly displaying the blue eagle should replace that honored bird with a vulture. Perhaps it was too much to expect that certain mill owners would co-operate with their government. "A leopard cannot change his spots," and the old selfish gang of highbinders remains the old selfish gang of highbinders.

Letter from a local school teacher, who is visiting in a nearby city, says: "I'd rather be present at the opening of the new labor hall than go to the World's Fair." No power on earth can kill a spirit like that. All honor to the young lady who has intelligence enough to understand what organization will do, and who has stamina enough to affiliate with the organization of her fellows!

Our enterprising dailies are engaged in a hectic controversy over the question of whether the flight of "Nira," an eagle released from the Times building roof this week, was successful. Possibly the old bird took one look over the manufacturing district, became nauseated at the manner in which she had been outraged, and refused to fly. Incidentally, those gentlemen of the press sure know their poets.

Local trades unionists are speculating on the length of time which it will take "Home Stores" managers who cashed "cold checks" recently to repay for their gullability. It is held that inasmuch as these managers are called upon to ante up their pro rata for a "cold paper" in the form of a throw-sheet, it is reasonable to assume they will be required to pay for "cold paper" in other forms.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Now take this Blue Eagle bird. Blue Eagles everywhere. More today than yesterday, more tomorrow than today.

There were those that laughed at the Blue Eagle when they first laid eyes on the bird. They didn't take this thing seriously. There still are those who do not take the Blue Eagle seriously. They'd better.

It's this way: The power of the United States government is behind the Blue Eagle—in all the old forms and in a new form. All of the traditional power is here, plus the power of the sentiment of a public aroused to the determination that there must be change.

Those who think to duck the Blue Eagle or to play tricks on the bird had better take counsel and think again. As Abraham Lincoln once said, you can't get away with it for long.

The dinosaur didn't understand that his goose was cooked, in a way of speaking, until they were playing the funeral march for him. Bourbons, four-footed or two-footed, have never in the world been able to see the crack of doom, or hear its echo, until they were hit and bowled over. That's the queer thing about those that look backward. They are unable to see what's in front.

Back of us today is the thing that made unemployment, that made thousands go hungry while the food and the clothes and all of the necessary supplies and machinery lay in wait for action. Ahead of us is some other kind of a day. Just what kind remains to be seen. But a tremendous avalanche of change is on the way and the Blue Eagle is one of the signs of it—it is an insignia of progress.

The Blue Eagle is no weakling. It may be printed on ordinary paper, but it is a symbol of more power than America has ever in her life mobilized in a cause.

Trade unionists, raised and nurtured on a glorious symbolism, ought to understand the Blue Eagle. Mostly they do and they know the terrific power of the idea for which it stands. They will not monkey with this cyclonic bird. They'll help lead the parade of support.

The Blue Eagle stands for those who conform to a new idea—it fights those that oppose; fights by the strangulation of boycott, which once was an offense for which men were sentenced to prison.

Never again can America frown on the boycott. It has come to be a supreme weapon in a time of great national need.

Let those that will do the looking backward. All they will be able to see is the wreckage of worn-out ideas. The great multitudes in America will look forward, again leading the whole world in making life good for human beings, making machinery serve man, making those who would live by exploiting live hard.

Get your Blue Eagle, stick to those who have the Blue Eagle and leave to themselves, in the solitude of boycott, those that will not give shelter to the Blue Eagle and honor to the great idea for which it stands.

Increased buying is the most urgent need of the hour in the recovery program. If those who can buy now, will act without delay they can give immeasurable help to the recovery campaign and help themselves by getting goods that in all probability will be higher in price in the near future.

Many will say, "Yes, that's true, but who has the money to buy now?" The answer is that plenty of folks still lots who can. If they will put their fears behind them, "loosen up" and buy as they need now or for the months to come, they will do both themselves and their country a service.

A danger in the recovery program is that many employers will not faithfully maintain their agreements under the blanket code to shorten hours and increase pay. There is no way of checking on all of them and some undoubtedly will evade the code, while at the same time displaying the "blue eagle." "Even more serious," the Labor Bureau, Inc., asks, "Will they really add no more to the prices of their products than the increased cost makes necessary?"

"Nobody can check up on that," the bureau adds. "The best we can hope for is some improvement pending fuller and more detailed control which may be worked out under the industry codes. If the cost of the goods to the consumer increases as much as the money paid to consumers we shall merely be chasing our tails. But if prices are held down, and the enlarged amount of money in consumers' pockets leads to larger sales, the country may benefit."

Announcement that the American Federation of Labor has begun a big organization campaign in the south under the leadership of George L. Googe, capable southern labor executive, is good news. The drive has already brought results, giving 1,700 rayon workers in Rome, Ga., increased wages, fewer hours and a union agreement, won after a short strike.

Adoption of the blanket code and the cotton textile code is raising wages in the south and increasing consuming power in that great region, where buying power for years has been very low. But the codes, though they mark progress, are not enough. There must be strong trade union organization, to back up the recovery program, to insist that the codes be observed, to give workers a direct voice in the conditions under which they work and in general to bring a greater measure of freedom and a better life for the toilers, both white and black.

"If President Roosevelt wants to save the world he will close the New York Stock exchange."

Who do you imagine said those words? A red, a radical, you instantly anewr. Wrong again. It was Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, Canada's chief delegate at the London economic conference.

Wife (to husband upon leaving a swell eating place)—I hope you gave the waiter a big enough tip.

Husband—I did, but it wasn't.

LARGER BUYING POWER NECESSARY FOR CODE

Washington, Aug. 10.—Drastic increase in purchasing power and broad use of collective bargaining are stressed as essential for the success of the president's blanket code in the business survey of the American Federation of Labor. The survey says, in part:

"Purchasing power must be created, but how?' If wages are to be raised enough to create the needed buying resources, employers must postpone profit increases. To invest in wages and employment now means higher profits in time. It is the only sound long-run policy. This means: Raise wages, shorten hours, take on more workers, keep prices to the lowest possible levels. For buying power must rise faster than prices.

"The president's blanket code calls for a 35-hour week, with 40 cents an hour minimum wage in industry and a 40-hour week with a weekly minimum wage of $12 to $15 for clerical workers, salesmen, etc. The code is established by a voluntary agreement between the president and individual employers.

"If the nation joins wholeheartedly in this move to create buying power, the unbalance of the last few months can be speedily corrected. It will require the highest type of patriotism on the part of every employer of labor to carry out the president's program and lift us finally out of this depression. The July price collapse warned us what is ahead if we fail.

Collective Bargaining Essential

"The success of the president's program depends on the conscientious observance of the code by millions of employers. A small group of selfish exploiters can jeopardize the entire program.

"Even the consumers who buy Blue Eagle products cannot see behind factory walls to discover the employer who abuses code privileges for selfish ends. Union organization equips the workers to see that codes are carried out in their plants: The shop chairman can keep daily check on hours, employment, pay.

"Separate codes for individual industries are to be developed while the blanket code is in operation; the administration has just established the requirement that every code provide a continuing committee to enforce code provision, study the needs of the industry, suggest additions or changes. It is essential that organized workers be included on this committee, as partners, both in supervision and formation of policy. Only thus can we be sure of balanced progress.

"Organized labor is the only group capable of seeing that wages are increased as prices and earnings rise, that hours are adjusted, employment maintained. Distribution is the greatest problem we face today; organized labor's function is to see that incomes are high enough to provide for the purchase of goods manufactured."

THEIR SALARIES SOARED . . .

Pay of Utility "Big Chiefs" Didn't Follow General Trend

New York City, Aug. 16.—While the pay of most folks was rapidly falling, the salaries of officers of five electric utility companies in this city increased from 17 to 77 per cent, Assistant Corporation Counsel Frank E. Carstarphen told the public service commission.

Carstarphen said officers' salaries in the New York Edison company, which totaled $193,500 in 1927, had risen to $230,800 in 1932, an increase of 19.31 per cent.

The Bronx Gas and Electric company's total of administrative salaries had increased 17.1 per cent in the five years, he declared.

The New York and Queens Electric Light and Power company's officers salary total showed an increase of 43.1 per cent in the five years; the Brooklyn Edison company's 29 per cent, and the United Electric Light and Power company's 77 per cent, the city's attorney's figures revealed.

Chicago Central Body Signs Roosevelt's Code

Washington.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, made public a telegram from John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, announcing that the Chicago Federation, which owns broadcast station WCFL and the Federation News, a weekly paper, has signed President Roosevelt's blanket code bringing under the agreement all the office, studio, mechanical and editorial staff of these activities as well as the office force of the federation. Mr. Fitzpatrick added that this is the largest group of workers employed by any city central body in the United States.

In a telegram to Mr. Fitzpatrick congratulating him on the action of the Chicago Federation, President Green said: "Your active co-operation in this matter I am sure will be appreciated by the president and those in charge of the administration of the industrial recovery act."

VIRGINIA STATE WORKERS DEMAND FIVE-DAY WEEK

Richmond, Va.—Declaring that the state should comply with work and wage codes private employers are compelled to accept, Virginia employes are petitioning Gov. Pollard, due to return here soon from his bridal tour, for a five-day, 40-hour week.

Spokesmen for the employes say clerical workers are having a difficult time and that the state can help solve their problems and those of private employers and the government by co-operating with the national recovery administration.

JACKSONVILLE CENTRAL LABOR ASSEMBLY RE-ELECTS SOUZA

Jacksonville, Ill.—Charles E. Souza was re-elected president of the Jacksonville Trades and Labor assembly for the twenty-first time at the annual election of officers of that body. Mr. Souza is also an official of the Typographical union, secretary of the local Red Cross chapter, and a member of the Morgan county emergency relief committee.

HARRY MORRISON, LAUNDRY UNION OFFICIAL, IS DEAD

New York.—Harry L. Morrison, president of the International Laundry Workers' union and a member of the New York state minimum wage board, died here suddenly in his room in the Hotel President. His body was found lying beside the bed. He was 54 years of age. His death was attributed to overwork and heat prostration. His home was in Troy, N. Y.

CUBA LIBRE!

By CHESTER M. WRIGHT

Gerardo Machado has fled from ba and a new man sits in the eat palace. He is surrounded a cabinet picked from among n who but a few days ago uld not call their lives safe om forfeit.

An eight-year tyranny has me to an end.

The new liberty avenges the aths of hundreds of Cuban pa- iots, hundreds of union men ho were shot and hanged and cked to pieces and thrown into e harbor of Havana.

Cuba's troubles are not ended. ot in a day, or a month, or a ar, can the island wipe out the oes of eight years, which came a combination of war's after- ath and political oppression.

I merely record a fact when I et it down in this record that in 27 I went to Cuba and came ck to write the first expose of e terror and the misrule of this an. With the facts in my pos- ession I did three things:

I reported to President Green, f the American Federation of abor.

I wrote a series of articles or the Scripps-Howard newspa- ers.

I wrote a series of articles hich went to the labor press of merica through International abor News Service.

When my first article appeared now this can be told) Orestes errara, then the Cuban ambas- ador and now a refuge, tele- honed to the office of the Pan- merican Federation of Labor to sk whether there was not some ay of stopping those articles. I as asked whether I would see errara. Why not? I took with e Oliver E. Carruth, assistant ditor of International Labor ews Service, and I went to see errara. He was horseback rid- ng when I arrived. I waited. He ame in. He beamed. He had ine wine brought out and for an hour he assured me that I was all rong. I named the names of dead men. He assured me those men lived. He offered state- ments; no facts. I was all wrong. He and Machado were all right.

Well, today the Cuban people have driven him out and he is all wrong and I am all right. I knew in 1927 that he and his gang were doomed. He didn't know it. I could see further than he. He boasted that in his youth he had been a radical. He was. He had been an anarchist. But his youth was long since gone, and with it his convictions.

I brought back with me from Cuba in that long ago a list of more than 200 union labor men who had been killed or who had "mysteriously disappeared." I had the facts, gruesome, damning, terrible. And I had discovered a reeking, filthy political corruption that was bleeding a fine people to desperation.

The suffering has grown in Cuba since 1927. Others have gone there, to come back with more proof of what I had found. Slowly the American people began to wake up. The American government woke up. President Roosevelt sent his best "trouble shooter" to Hanava and there in as beautiful a diplomatic chess game as was ever played the old tyrant was forced out of his king row into exile.

American labor may well rejoice in the new freedom of the Cuban people. A Cuban federation of labor had been shot to pieces just before I landed. A new one will grow up, to enter into a Latin American fraternity.

The exiles of New York and Miami can go back. The old is done; the new must be built by hard work and with patience.

Wherever liberty is achieved there hope is raised for all others who yet remain in bondage. It is a great day for Cuba. I look back to 1927 and I know that tyranny was then creating its own undoing; it is so always. Once again Cuba is free. Hail, Cuba. Guard well this new liberty and see to it that economic slavery passes whence political oppression has gone.

Suitor—Well, since you don't want to marry me, perhaps you will return the ring I gave you.

Aim Is General Acceptance Now, Changes Later

As Nation Rallies Behind Law, Four Big Industries, Backed by Wall Street, Band to Fight NIRA Program.

Washington, Aug. 17.—This week witnessed a tremendous sweep of American industries toward the shorter work week and higher wages. Dozens of industries were brought under the president's blanket code, with modifications.

The question that has arisen in relation to the modified blanket code is whether modifications have not so modified it as to leave it insufficiently effective. The original schedule of hours has not been adhered to.

It is said the administration view is that the great objective is to bring industries under the code, leaving further adjustments to be made after they have accepted the law and come under its jurisdiction voluntarily.

Big Industries Fight NIRA.

But while industries have continued to flock under the blanket code, to wine the Blue Eagle, four great industries are understood to have banded together for war against the administration. These are Motors, Oil, Steel and Coal, each agreeing to oppose every item opposed by the others. Back of this quartet of industries stand the great financial houses of Wall Street, including the Mellons and Morgans.

In this set-up, this alliance of great wealth and power, there may be the making of a test that will rock the whole scheme. That it must end in victory for the government and for the recovery administration program seems certain. At this moment the administration's plan seems to be a campaign to build up a powerful public sentiment. A strike, for example, in steel, at the right moment, forcing the national labor board into the situation, might help the administration.

George L. Googe Leads Drive From Office in Atlanta

Workers in Large Rayon Plant Organize and Win Strike for Higher Wages and Shorter Hours.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 17.—The big southern trade union campaign is now under way, directed by George L. Googe, special representative of the American Federation of Labor, from headquarters just opened here in the Hurt building.

As announcement was made of the opening of the new headquarters and inauguration of the organization drive, word was received of the winning of a four-day strike in the Tubize Chatillion rayon plant at Rome, Ga. The 1,700 employes of the plant were organized by Mr. Googe. They won wage increases ranging from 10 to 88 per cent and a reduction of hours from 56 to 40.

A union agreement signed by the management of the plant is said to be the first union contract in the rayon industry, as well as the first signed union contract in a southern textile plant. Googe is confident that it is the forerunner of many such agreements under the provisions of the national industrial recovery act.

In announcing opening of the southern campaign, Organizer Googe said:

"The organization staff will consist of direct field representatives in each district augmented by hundreds of local labor officials and committees in all sections of the southern states. Our representatives and leaders will refrain from spectacular activities or rash statements. In this campaign of organization we are appealing to the judgment and conscience of southern people. The American Federation of Labor intends to oppose and prevent, as well as wipe out present class hatred, strife and industrial warfare. We shall utilize our combined resources to organize the southern workers so that they may deal collectively, speak collectively and bargain collectively.

"It is our purpose to elevate the masses' standard of living and to improve their condition of life and labor. We shall promote co-operation between employers and employes by developing and setting up machinery through which the common problems of industrial relations may be settled at conference tables through the application of fairness, good judgment, sound reasoning and logical conclusions.

"We shall assist all workers and wage-earners in their desire to form permanent organizations for their mutual protection. We shall give particular emphasis in this campaign in organizing the so-called white collar workers of the south. The policy of the American Federation of Labor is to assist workers in their particular problems through organization irrespective of race, color or creed and this shall be adhered to in accordance with southern traditions.

"Instructions are being issued to all leaders and representatives of labor to consecrate all of their activities in line and behind President Roosevelt's great program of recovery. The president's new deal will be the yard stick governing all of our activity and quite naturally we shall take the lead throughout the communities of the south in assisting the president, his agents and all patriotic citizens in preventing the short-sighted, selfish and recalcitrants from getting out of step with labor and the 'new deal.'

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

Declares American Workers Should Kill The Company Unions

Editor Hewitt, of Machinists' Journal, Urges Employes to Join Real Unions and Escape Employers' Control.

Washington, Aug. 10.—A trenchant denunciation of the notorious company union comes from the pen of Fred Hewitt, editor of the Machinists' Monthly Journal, the official organ of the International Association of Machinists, in an editorial on "The Right to Organize" under the national industrial recovery act. He says:

"That these nondescript organizations dubbed company unions are impotent and incapable of securing any benefits for those they assume to represent has been proven times without number. Company unions are, and always have been, just what the name implies — inactive groups controlled by the company, or companies, by which they are employed."

Pointing out that under the recovery act workers are not only free to join bona fide unions without interference from even the most violent anti-trade union employers, Mr. Hewitt continues:

'Of course, the workers are not compelled to join labor unions, but it would appear that having the right to do so they would, in order to reap the benefits of united and concerted action in any movement to protect or advance their interest, hasten to file their application for membership in the organization having jurisdiction over the craft, or industry, in which they find employment. If they do so, company unions will cease to exist and labor control by employers will be a thing of the past.

"At last the workers have the right to organize. Will they exercise this right is the all-important question which remains to be answered?"

bodies throughout the southern league circuit.

Officials of Central Body announced following the meeting that a standing committee will be appointed following the close of the present season to plan a publicity program during the winter which will acquaint every baseball fan in the southern circuit of the attitude of the president of the local club.

The custodian of President Engel's page in the morning paper, obviously having heard "his master's voice," Wednesday penned the following in defense of the club president: "Chattanooga Trades and Labor council paraded two of those 'unfair to organized labor' signs in front of Engel stadium yesterday as a result of Engel's decision to use whom he pleased in doing some work on his country estate."

Local working men, however, were inclined to look with tolerance on this sage comment of the young sports writer, realizing that in the rush of compiling and printing a daily paper many trifles are overlooked by seasoned newspapermen whose duty it is to scan the output of the younger members of the staff.

NEW CHAIN DRUG STORE ALSO HIT.

What was regarded by local trades unionists as insufficient interest in appeals for employment of organized workers in remodeling of a local store building resulted in the Lane Drug company, chain concern with headquarters in Atlanta, being declared "unfair to organized labor" by Chattanooga Trades and Labor council Monday night.

The matter of the Lane company had been before the council for some time, executive board having reported several weeks ago that the chain store management had been advised that organized labor here expected them to favor local organized workers if the drug company expected the patronage of union labor locally.

Headquarters of the Lane company in Atlanta was wired some time in June to the above effect, but the only "consolation" received by the Central Body was a letter stating that the company had nothing to do with the building until it was turned over to them for occupancy.

Work on the storeroom, on Market street, was done by non-union labor, however, and Central Body delegates took the position that the Lane company had not shown enough interest in the matter to warrant the patronage of Chattanooga union workers.

Speaking of Chattanooga workers, an official of Lane Drug company remarked that some five or six of his employes from Atlanta were already in this city, awaiting opening of the store to take jobs in it.

Efforts of disinterested parties this week to adjust the matter proved fruitless, and it is announced that pickets will be placed in front of the store on opening day, and will be continued for enough time to acquaint every working man and woman and their friends in Chattanooga with the situation.

The local branch of the Atlanta concern is expected to open for business within the next few days.

Three States Plan Aid For Transient Jobless

Washington.—Three states have responded to the nation-wide appeal of Federal Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins and submitted programs for aid of homeless and transient jobseekers within their borders. They are Delaware, Ohio and Louisiana.

Three others, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, are whipping plans rapidly into shape for submission, officials have announced. California notified Mr. Hopkins that a meeting had been called to formulate a program.

Delaware's application, the first to be approved, asked for federal aid at the rate of $2,000 per month. Both Ohio and Louisiana asked for federal funds to help carry out their programs.

A census taken last spring showed transient homeless aided in nine states ranged from the low of 11,700 in Missouri to a high of 49,082 in California. Illinois reported 43,215; New York, 32,143; Ohio, 29,333; Texas, 26,515; Michigan, 18,157, and Washington, 18,096. Relief workers are agreed that the number of boy and girl wanderers far exceeds any reported figures.

Success comes to the man who does not fear failure. . . Many a marriage contract has been ruined by hot bread and cold feet. . . A man ought to love his home ties, but that doesn't mean he has to wear home-made ones. . . It's a poor lawyer who can't get a postponement. . . A beautiful woman never has to argue with a hotel clerk. . . Bald-headed friends find it difficult to part.

GREEN ASSAILS DISCHARGE OF WORKERS FOR JOINING UNION

Labor Head Declares Toilers Do Not Foment Industrial Strife by Exercising Right to Organize, Which He Points Out Employers Must Recognize and Respect.

Washington, Aug. 18.—Employers who discharge employes because they have joined a trade union are provoking industrial unrest and fomenting strikes, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared in pointing out that the right of workers to organize, bargain collectively and be represented by men of their own choosing must be maintained, recognized and respected.

"No employer can justify his action in discharging working people because they voluntarily organize into trade unions for mutual helpfulness and protection," Green said. He continued:

"It is the purpose of the American Federation of Labor to accept into membership all workers who desire to become organized, to assist them by counsel and advice and to extend to them all possible help and assistance. Such action will tend to allay industrial unrest because if workers are permitted to enjoy rights to which they are entitled to make real and vital their desire to unite with their fellow-men, a state of mind will be created favorable to the promotion of industrial peace. It is when they are persecuted, discharged from their employment and compelled to lose their jobs merely because they organize that the flame of unrest, of resentment and hate is fanned to the point where strikes occur.

"Employers exercise the right to organize as completely as possible in order to promote their financial and economic welfare. They cannot deny the exercise of the same right to working men and women.

"These are days when all reasonable men and women should unite for the purpose of overcoming unemployment by making the industrial recovery act function in a satisfactory and successful way. In order to achieve this purpose the national labor board has been created for the purpose of settling industrial disputes and for the purpose of applying the remedy to the causes of industrial conflict.

"Working men and women will not foment strife and industrial unrest by merely exercising their right to organize. Employers can, however, provoke strikes by discharging workers because they organize.

"Industrial peace can be promoted and advanced through organization, co-operation and understanding on the part of those associated with industry. If the employers of labor expect the workers and the public to respect their rights they must respect the rights of the workers to safeguard their interests through organization and collective bargaining."

WCFL BACKS NIRA.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—John Fitzpatrick, president, and E. N. Nockel, secretary, Chicago Federation of Labor, have notified the recovery administration that labor's radio station, WCFL, is backing NIRA, with broadcasts by Barratt O'Hara, former lieutenant governor of Illinois, and by Joseph A. Wise, representing Chester M. Wright and associates in co-operation with INLS. The letter, pledging also the co-operation of the Chicago labor movement and of the Federation News, said further:

"You are hereby assured of the support of the Chicago Federation of Labor and its affiliated organizations and we place at your disposal the facilities of our radio broadcasting station and uor weekly publication, the Federation News.

"We will be pleased to co-operate with a committee of business leaders assigned to carry on the committee's re-employment drive."

Checkweighmen Rule Issued by Coal Board

Washington.—President Roosevelt's board to arbitrate the labor dispute in the bituminous coal fields of Pennsylvania, which resulted in thousands of coal miners going on strike, issued a ruling on how checkweighmen should be chosen.

The board consists of Gerard Swope, president of the General Elstric company, and Louis Kirstein, general manager of William Filene's Sons company, Boston, Mass., representing the industrial advisory board of the national recovery administration, and George Berry, president of the International Printing Pressmen's and Assistants' Union of North America, representing the NRA labor advisory board.

Checkweighmen are representatives of the miners who see that their coal output is counted accurately. The election of checkweighmen was one of the major sources of controversy of the miners at the plant of the H. C. Frick company.

The primary points in the ruling are:

Notice shall be posted at the mines, giving at least two days' notice of the election of a checkweighman.

The meeting must be held at the mine entrance at the close of the day's shift.

Any person who pays to maintain the checkweighman shall be entitled to vote. Anyone may be nominated as a candidate for checkweighman, voting by secret ballot, or show of hands, or aye and nay vote, as the majority of the meeting determines.

CHIEF OF WORK BUREAU CUTS HOURS, LOSES PAY

Complying with the NRA code, he announced that the 2,400 outdoor workers on his payroll would now work 35 instead of the former 40 hours per week and be paid at the rate of 46 instead of the old 40 cents an hour.

Simultaneously, the county board of supervisors announced that Mr. Heydecker's salary had been cut from $600 to $400 per month, overruling the recommendation of the work bureau commissioners that his pay be maintained for two months at the higher rate.

PLANS SHAPING FOR OBSERVANCE OF LABOR DAY

Mammoth Parade Will Open Celebration.

PARK PROGRAM FOR AFTERNOON, NIGHT

Various Attractions Booked for Public Entertainment at City Playground.

All local unions are urgently requested to communicate as early as possible with A. C. Kamin or T. R. Cuthbert regarding the nature of their participation in the Labor Day parade. It is the hope of the Labor Day committee that each and every local will take part by entering a float, as well as all members possible.

The matter will be finally acted upon at regular meeting of Central Body Monday night, at Roosevelt Hall, and delegates are asked to be prepared to give full information at that time.

Although the program for Labor Day, 1933, will not be so elaborate as some which have been sponsored by the Chattanooga workers in the past, indications are that the day's festivities will probably be the most enjoyable and thoroughly satisfactory in years, and if the weather man will do his part by furnishing clear skies, Chattanoogans will join as one in celebration of Labor-NRA Day from early morning until late in the evening.

At 10 a.m. what will probably be one of the most pretentious street processions in the history of the city will move through the downtown streets, local officials of the N. R. A. and of organized labor combining to urge participation by all groups of local citizens.

Each and every one of the forty-odd local unions are urged to have representation in some form, and it is probable that at least a majority of these will participate. Central Body, Local 226, Painters, Chattanooga Typographical, Movie Operators, and the newly-organized Paper Makers' union are some which have already announced their intention of entering floats, while others will be content with attractive banners.

Central Body officers said Friday they hoped each local would have a good turnout of its members, and it is expected some of the old established unions will endeavor to have every member in line.

The celebration thus begun in the forenoon will be resumed at 2 p.m. at Warner park. Invitations have been extended to Senators Norris, McKellar and Bachman and Congressman McReynolds, but it is, of course, not known at this writing whether any or all of these gentlemen may be in position to accept the invitation, although it is said the latter expects to be in the city for several weeks, and that Judge Bachman has written a personal friend to the effect that he hopes to be here for the big day.

A band concert, afternoon and evening, by a twenty-piece band, selected from the members of Local 80, American Federation of Musicians, may be one feature of the day's festivities. A baseball game between the Crane and Peerless teams, which represent the finest of local amateurs in this line, will be an interesting feature of the early afternoon, while later a soft ball game will be put on under auspices of the Industrial Y. M. C. A., with Director Sims in charge. From 4 to 6 a track meet will be sponsored by the "Y," with prizes for the winners of various contests. Another soft ball game will be put on at night, although the championship contest for the local league will take place at McCallie field at the same time.

Other features are being arranged for, which will insure that something will be going on at all hours of the morning, afternoon and evening, and it is expected that attendance records will be broken at Warner park.

WELCH MINERS ON STRIKE.

London.—A serious coal strike situation is developing in South Wales with 17,000 anthracite miners out and other thousands expected to follow.

Youthful "Prof" Rules Blanket Code Changes; Workers Not Consulted

Washington, Aug. 24.—A most amazing situation is just coming to light in NIRA in relation to modifications of the president's re-employment agreement, commonly known as PRA in official parlance.

Modified PRA means the blanket code, with modifications made on the plea of industries which oppose the terms laid down in the blanket code, which surely was an easy document to swallow by any portion of industry not hog-tied to tradition or sunk in the mire of past economic sins. It sought to blanket the country under a 35-hour week for mechanics and laborers and a 40-hour week for white collar workers, who always get it in the neck.

But many industries refused to sign and get the Blue Eagle and it became necessary for the administration to either dicker or use a doubtful force. It chose to dicker.

W. J. Woolston Big Figure.

A young man named W. J. Woolston was assigned as labor adviser in most of these cases, while as industry adviser William J. Barrett signs most of the modified blankets. Robert T. Stevens, chairman of the policy board, signs all of them, while Ray D. Smith signs for and in the absence of T. S. Hammond, the high-power general who was brought on from the Illinois Manufacturers' association, but who seems now to be in the process of disappearing from the picture.

Of this group the youthful Woolston seems most powerful.

When the modified PRA's leave his hands they go to Gen. Johnson and Gen. Johnson signs them, bingo, like that.

If labor has opportunity to protest, it is by freak of chance. The industry does have a chance, because it doesn't have to sign unless it agrees to sign and industry's signature is the first necessity. But labor is left at the post. It is an ex parte.

Thus it was when the hotel and restaurant workers got a 56-hour week slapped on them in a modified PRA and when the bakery workers got a 50-hour week in the same way. In the latter case bitter protest was made, to not the slightest avail.

Now who is this youthful commissar? He is a Wharton School of Finance graduate and a University of Chicago professor in economics, which seems to be a science for class room edification having little if any relation to industry. In any event, this extremely youthful professor cannot possibly have the slightest practical knowledge of the vast army of industries with which he must deal. By his own admission, there is practically no effort to find a statistical basis for the hours and wages fixed in the modified PRA documents that roll across his desk every day and often far into the night.

No Chance to Protest.

Moreover, agreements, as they are miscalled, frequently go from Woolston to Johnson at night, when labor and business naturally assume all offices are closed and when there is not a chance in the world for protest. Nor is work always done in the offices to which men have been assigned. It is literally done "all over the place."

But there is another point, perhaps more vital. It is that Prof. Woolston signs himself a labor adviser, when no labor member of the labor advisory group had any knowledge of his appointment or in any way approved the appointment, which was made by Dr. Leo Wolman, chairman of the labor advisory committee. It requires no second sight to discover that the labor group, including President Green, is extremely wrought up over this situation.

Labor agreed, tacitly at least, to support the blanket code, as a temporary matter. It did not agree to support a series of modifications which have robbed the blanket code of much of its original meaning and a great deal of its benefit. It is pointed out that there is no progress in establishment of a 50-hour week and tragically insufficient progress in the 40 and 44-hour week found in almost all of the modified PRA's. But Prof. Woolston, the youthful and extremely class room lecturer, who knows nothing of the practical affairs of the industries involved, slides modified agreements along through the mill, with much of the power of a commissar and with all of the aplomb of a Babe Ruth lamming one out over the fence. In this situation there is danger of real hot friction and perhaps a good deal of bitterness that may affect future relations. Some men are on the war path, proving they intend to find out "why" and their language is much more emphatic than that.

MODIFIED BLANKET AGREEMENT RAISES STORM OF PROTEST IN OPPOSITION TO LONG WORK-WEEK

Washington, Aug. 24.—Modifications of the blanket code, or president's re-employment agreement, in which through a long chain of industries hours have been set at 40,044 and more a week, have raised a storm of labor protest that promises to flare even higher during the coming week.

That the range of work-hours per week stipulated in the modified codes is far from the original 35-hour week set by the president for industrial employment, and that it will not play any appreciable part in breaking down the unemployment total, is labor's feeling.

Moreover, there is a feeling that this whole chain of modified codes with long work-weeks is the work of a group of young men who have been named as labor advisers and industry advisers by the chairmen of the respective committees, without any consultation with the labor and industry members of those committees.

A real hullabaloo is on the cards in relation to the appointment of these youthful advisers, most of whom are said to have precisely no knowledge whatever about the industries in which they "advise."

Labor, straining every nerve to help make the recovery program a success, is growing more resentful each day at the "adviser" business.

Meanwhile the building trades are more or less fuming because no construction work is being made available. It can be said that a presidential order will issue within the next few days fixing wage districts and announcing a wage for each district. This will be a minimum wage, with the stipulation that where collective agreements provide higher wage the collective bargain shall prevail.

The minimum wage set by the president will apply on all federal, state, municipal and private work in any way financed by government funds under the recovery act.

One of the notable appointments of the week was the appointment of Victor A. Olander, of Chicago, as labor adviser on the shipping code, which has not yet been presented, but which is expected soon.

The battle over the basic industries ranges at this moment, with every prospect of government victory. In the group including steel, coal, oil and automobiles, the issue is recognition of the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively. These industries have banded together to fight for their "open shop."

Indications are that the president told steel exactly where to get off at and that the recovery act labor provisions will go into the four codes, without any qualification. Labor regards this as an essential unless the government is to admit that the act is a dead letter.

President Green is labor adviser in the automobile code hearing now opening. He has expressed a feeling of optimism in regard to the labor provisions of that code. The chances are that whatever may be the decision in any one of these four cases will be the decision in all. With these in line 80 per cent of all industry will be under permanent codes or modified blanket agreements.

"HOME STORES" MANAGERS GET BIG PROMOTION

Title of "Sole Owner" Assumed by Sixteen.

GROCER TO ENTER TIRE BUSINESS

Report Says Another New Venture Scheduled by "Individualist."

Managers of sixteen of the so-called "Home Stores" were removed from the possible requirement of $35 per week salaries under the code, and may henceforth labor as many hours per day as they see fit, it is reported this week, all by the simple transition of position from a modest managership to the status of "sole owner."

Following telephone calls and personal visits to The Labor World, bringing information that various "Home Stores" managers were spreading the "news" that they had individually purchased their particular units, this paper endeavored to learn the exact nature of the big "sale." Having no entree into the councils of the great institution, however, our reportorial force was compelled to gather such information as was available from "second hands," and the only definite news which could be developed was that the transfer affected sixteen of the units, so far.

Another interesting item developed by the inquiry was a well-authenticated report that the "Home Stores" are planning the immediate addition to their various and varied enterprises in the form of a tire business. It was said that this had been definitely decided upon, and a tire salesman formerly employed by a leading concern would be placed in charge of the new "Home Stores" tire department. Whether the tires will be handled at the grocery units was not stated.

Some doubt existed in the minds of labor men this week as to whether Roy McDonald, self-styled individualist, grocer, baker, dairyman, printer, publisher, etc., is still publishing his weekly "Home Stores" advertiser, a number having stated they were unable to find a copy of the "throw sheet," which is supposed to be distributed free to several thousand front yards in Chattanooga. In view of the fact that the "throw sheet" has been practically without advertising, with the exception of McDonald's enterprises, passing of the experiment would not be surprising, it was held.

Labor World readers will remember that McDonald told a committee which called upon him that he was an individualist, and that anyone who works for him will come to work at such time as he orders, and will quit by the same sign.

President Hoover, he said, made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders to keep wages up as an aid to prosperity. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer-baker-dairyman - printer - publisher-individualist averred, we would now be out of the depression, and further, he held, we will never be out until wages are further and further cut.

Mother of Ed Tucker Goes to Her Reward

Mrs. Belle Tucker, 77, mother of Ed Tucker, well-known member of Local 74, Carpenters, passed to her reward Thursday morning at a local hospital. The deceased lady is survived by four daughters: Mrs. Clarence Johnson, of Anson, Texas; Mrs. Henry Warren, of Hillsboro, Tenn.; Mrs. Werner Schaerer, of Chattanooga, and Mrs. Mary Carl Partin, of Monteagle. Two sons also survive, Fred, of Monteagle, and Ed, of Chattanooga.

Remains were forwarded Friday to the family home at Monteagle, services being held at 2:30 Friday afternoon.

The Labor World joins with a host of friends in extending sincerest sympathy to Brother Tucker and the other surviving relatives in their great loss.

Green Calls Upon Organized Labor to Name Code Chiselers

Washington, Aug. 24.—The officers and members of forty-eight state federations of labor, 1,000 city central bodies and 30,000 local trade unions were called upon to mobilize their forces for the complete enforcement of President Roosevelt's voluntary agreement and the national recovery act by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

Both the voluntary agreement and the specific fair competition codes contain important provisions relative to the maximum length of the work day and the work week, minimum wages, employment of child labor, and various other matters vital to the re-employment of millions of jobless and the increase of mass purchasing power, which are the essential features of the entire recovery program.

There is no provision in the recovery act for government inspectors to watch over the enforcement of the codes. In this contingency it is necessary for organized labor to step into the breach and keep a careful and thorough check on all who display the NRA insignia to find out whether they are violating any code they have signed or the rules and regulations relative to the display of the Blue Eagle.

In his instructions sent to the state federations of labor, city central bodies, and local trades unions, Mr. Green said:

"It is highly important that all who sign either temporary or permanent industrial codes and who are granted the right to use the Blue Eagle emblem shall comply with all the provisions of said industrial codes and observe both the spirit and the letter of the industrial recovery law.

"It is my opinion that only such employers of labor and such merchants who observe the provisions of the blanket and permanent codes which they sign, providing for minimum rates of pay and maximum hours of work, and who observe Section 7 of the industrial recovery act guaranteeing the workers the right to organize without discrimination, are entitled to either use or display the Blue Eagle emblem or the insignia of the national recovery administration.

"Great dependence must be placed upon organized labor and its friends to see to it that there are no violations of signed temporary or permanent codes in the cities and towns throughout the nation.

"All must be alert and watchful in order to prevent the perpetration of fraud and the use of the Blue Eagle emblem by those who are not entitled to either display or exploit it.

"I am therefore calling upon the officers and members of organized labor as it is represented in state federations of labor, local organizations and city central bodies, to investigate each case where employers of labor and merchants display the Blue Eagle emblem in your respective communities and find out whether they are entitled to the exercise of such a privilege and whether or not they are violating any code they have signed or any of the rules and regulations relating to the display of the Blue Eagle emblem drafted and promulgated by the administrators of the industrial recovery act.

"Let this investigation be made a matter of special action on the part of your central body or state federation of labor.

"Report all violations to the office of the American Federation of Labor, together with supporting facts and information which can be used in submitting complaints to the proper government authorities in Washington.

"We will submit all complaints filed, with a demand that said complaints be investigated, and if the complaints are sustained that the Blue Eagle emblem be withdrawn from any and all who fail to conform to industrial codes and who violate the law or the rules of the national recovery administration in any way whatsoever.

"Please give both the request and the recommendation herein made special consideration and attention."

ELECTRICAL WORKERS DECLARE CODE HOURS NOT IN ACCORD WITH SOUND PUBLIC POLICY

Washington, Aug. 24.—The hours of labor set by the electrical manufacturing industry code are not in accord with sound public policy, President Dan W. Tracy, of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, declares in a letter to Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, administrator of the national industrial recovery code.

Tracy's letter to Johnson said:

"We have read with amazement, and not a little dismay, the code for the electrical manufacturing industry now issued and published as properly approved by the national recovery administration. This code sets a maximum hour schedule of 36 hours a week for processing workers, and 40 hours a week for all others, with certain exceptions.

"You will recall that the brief filed by the International Brotherhood of Electrical workers at the public hearing on the proposed electrical manufacturing code, showed beyond doubt that the maximum hours for that industry had to be fixed at a point below 30 hours a week in order for the industry to reabsorb workers unemployed since 1929.

"Conferences of our research department with your own research department developed the fact that figures of your research department were not much at variance with the figures of our research department.

"In short, arithmetical fact indicates that the decision of the national recovery administration to submit to the original demand of NEMA for a 36-40 hour week is not in accord with sound public policy. We, therefore, emphatically protest this feature of the electrical manufacturing code in particular; of course, without surrendering our right to protest other features of the code at such time as may offer.

"And may we also on this occasion point out that a policy of setting maximum hours of labor in codes via what may be properly designated as the political route, when this policy is at variance with the research data and arithmetical fact, is dangerous and prejudicial to economic recovery; and defeating the purpose for the recovery legislation and contrary to the policy and purpose of President Roosevelt's administration, it will not create employment or purchasing power."

In reply to President Tracy, E. H. Dahlberg, assistant to Peputy Administrator Allen, of the recovery administration, acknowledged receipt of the letter, declared that the electrical workers' brief and evidence which were presented at the hearing were given "careful consideration" and said the code has been approved by the president and became effective on Aug. 15.

Officials of the International Brotherhood of lectrical Workers said that they considered that the reply of Assistant Dahlberg did not meet the issue, and that the reply represented additional evidence that the course of action pursued in the case of the electrical manufacturing code was prejudicial to economic recovery.

Painters Enjoy An Open Session

Members of Local 226, Painters, Decorators and Signwriters, and their friends enjoyed another open meeting Thursday night at Central Labor hall, as a sort of celebration of the fine progress which has been made in the matter of enlisting local craftsmen in the organization during the past few weeks. Addresses were delivered by T. Pope Shepherd, Martin A. Fleming, Gordon Smith, T. R. Cuthbert and George Forbes.

Beer and sandwiches were served, and "a good time was had by all."

LANE DRUG CO. EMPLOYES COME FROM ATLANTA

Announcement Says They're "Glad to Be Here."

LOCAL CITIZENS ALL OUT OF LUCK

Dispute With Chain Store and Baseball Boss Creates Wide Interest.

Announcement that the Lane Drug company, chain organization with headquarters in Atlanta, and Joe Engel, president of the Chattanooga Baseball club, had been declared "unfair to organized labor" by Chattanooga Trades and Labor council, created considerable interest during the past week, and the action of Central Body was a matter for wide comment.

Decision of the chain concern to come into Chattanooga was not hailed with particular delight by the average citizen, particularly when it was learned that employes are to be brought from the Georgia city. Whether or not these employes will reside in Chattanooga, or will "commute" over the week-ends is not known.

An advertisement in the daily papers announcing the opening of the branch store Friday contained the following paragraph:

"Proud? Sure we're proud. . . of a good-looking, shiny new store, complete fresh stock, well-trained sales force, who are happy to be in Chattanooga. Proud to become part of this progressively alive city that's 'going somewhere.'"

Local citizens pointed out that while every loyal Chattanoogan is at all times glad to welcome newcomers, there are thousands of residents here who are and have been unemployed, and possibly quite a few who might be classed as "well trained salesmen." However, it is admitted, the Atlanta citizens possibly needed the employment also.

The "dispute" with the baseball mogul has created less interest than ordinarily would be the case, due to the fact that to all appearances the management of that institution "quit" the people of Chattanooga before any part of the citizenship had an opportunity to indicate resentment of alleged bad treatment. Showing of the baseball team this year, and particularly during the last-half season, together with apparent indifference of the management to the standing of the club, has created a feeling radically different from that which obtained for the past few seasons.

However, when the club returns, it is announced, picketing will be resumed, and plans will be continued for a publicity campaign to be carried on during next summer.

Dairy Employes Receive Charter

Charter for local Dairy Employes and Milk Wagon Drivers was received this week, and a new local union of these workers was installed Tuesday night by T. R. Cuthbert.

The new organization starts out with a splendid and enthusiastic membership, and includes members from practically all local dairies. Next meeting will be held next Tuesday night at 7:30 o'clock at the labor halls, Mr. Cuthbert said, and those who have not already become affiliated are invited to come up at that time and join with their fellow workers.

Cigar Machinery Forbidden.

Washington.—Though only about 15 per cent of the total cigar production in Germany has been by automatic machinery, introduction of new labor-saving machinery in the cigar industry has been forbidden by the German government. The prohibition represents an attempt by the government to combat unemployment among cigarmakers, a report to the department of commerce points out.

Coin-in-the-slot typewriters, which may be used for periods of 10 minutes upon the deposit of a coin, are proving popular in the postoffices in Berlin, Germany. In connection with each typewriter is a desk drawer containing paper and envelopes. MEMORIAL TO ALBERT THOMAS.

London.—The British Trades Union Congress general council has decided to co-operate in the effort launched by the International Federation of Trades Unions to raise a fund to commemorate the work of the late Albert Thomas, the first director of the International Labour office. It was agreed to contribute, on the basis proposed by the I. F. T. U., a sum equivalent to one French franc per thousand members. Albert Thomas devoted his life to the cause of trade unionism and socialism and by his energy and vision made the I. L. O. a powerful factor in the development of international labor legislation. The form which the memorial will take has not yet been decided.

Can't Please Them All

The Washington Daily News weeps because of its sad discovery that the American labor movement "has failed during the last few weeks to take advantage of its unique opportunities under the recovery law to organize unions."

On the other hand, the editorial sleuth of the New York Times sheds copious tears because organized labor has taken such emphatic advantage of its organizing possibilities as to embarrass Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator. After referring to President Roosevelt's achievements in settling the coal strike and in setting up a board of arbitration to adjust disputes arising under the codes, the Times laments:

> "But there remains the trouble which has been caused Gen. Johnson by the eagerness of certain labor leaders to take advantage of the 'blanket code' and the several industrial codes in order to win for themselves a share of the benefits, which may or may not be unfair, but which were certainly not within the intention of the recovery act."

Confronted with the positive declaration of the Washington Daily News that organized labor has failed to take advantage of the opportunities for organization given in the National Recovery Act and the equally positive declaration of the New York Times that organized labor has forgotten the equities of the situation and been altogether too zealous in mobilizing the workers in bona fide trade unions, the American Federation of Labor is quite convinced of its inability to win universal approval.

But one thing is certain. Wherever employers continue their unpatriotic hostility to legitimate trade unions, wherever they impose the notorious company union on their employes, wherever they attempt to violate the labor provisions of either the President's blanket agreement or the fair competition codes, wherever the workers are without the protecting fold of the trade union movement, there the organizers of the American Federation of Labor and its affiliated national and international unions will be found. In one hand they will carry uinon charters, in the other the right-to-organize guarantee of the National Recovery Act. With these two constructive weapons they will carry on an incessant crusade until every workers in the United States has received the emancipatory message of militant trade unionism and been accorded the right to join a bona fide union without interference from employers.

Of course this policy will cause both the Washington Daily News and the New York Times to weep from emotions as far apart as the poles of the earth, but the American Federation of Labor just can't please everyone.

Coming Out of the Fog

Some day some bright person is going to write a song about the Eagle that Nests in Nira's Halls and it ought to be a wow.

Everyone except the song writers and the march writers has had a crack at Nira, either to knock or to popularize—and mostly to popularize.

It doesn't seem likely that the musical minds can be kept out of the picture much longer.

Gen. Johnson has tried to put the kibosh on use of the word Nira, because, so 'tis said, some wit or half-wit wise-cracked about "Nira, my God, to Thee," which the general didn't like so well. So he knocked the "i" out of Nira and made it the unpoetical NRA, which has neither validity nor euphony back of it. Now who can get very steamed up about NRA? But when you say, Nira, ah, there's a word to conjure with, a word to put on a flag and a word to weave into rollicking songs, to the music of which they will go places, heedless of consequences.

These thoughts are passed along to Gen. Johnson with the suggestion that psychology is a good thing to have some of.

Changing the subject a bit, here is something to think about. If we take it for granted at this writing that steel is to be brought under the recovery act, that it is going to lose its fight to prevent organization of labor, then the entire industrial field in America will be open to labor. For, as goes steel, so goes the nation in this conflict.

It is perhaps not easy to visualize a nation in which the great corporations at last stand back, keep off their company thugs and put their blacklists away in mothballs, while men walk up openly to sign union membership application blanks.

There is no funny language in the recovery act—no tricky words.

Of course this goes tough with such men as Schwab and Morgan and Rockefeller and the little band of wilful men who have been running the big union-hating industries, including the barons of coal in the Pittsburgh and West Virginia districts. Mr. Mellon, home from the Court of St. James, doesn't like it and it chokes him. Let it.

Stirring days—great and grand days—days of change, with the towers of ancient battlements falling into the river, or the moat, or what have you.

Why not a song to Nira's halls, and to Nira's banners and to the whole works?

Ancient privilege is going to the junk heap. They still talk about the invisible government and they do say that the "men who really run the country are sitting in the kay places of Nira" and all that. Maybe there's some truth in it, but we see the big shots of steel capitulate, then we can know that a new power rules, a new principle is imbedded in the life and practice of the nation.

Once upon a time a man wrote a poem like this: "Up Grand Avenue capital rides; down Grand Avenue labor strides," and he thought it was a swell piece, expressing civic pride. It's that kind of thing that is, perhaps, presently to be all washed up. So be it—and right away.

No Place for Rich Dilettantes

Once Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, as head of the consumers' advisory committee of N. R. A., has been in a row with Prof. Ogburn, and the row goes much deeper than a personal difference.

The big issue is whether this important organization shall be run as a society woman's show, on a hit or miss basis so long as it never misses the front page, or whether it shall be run on a basis of statistics, with sound policies and a direction.

Gen. Johnson has temporized with the situation, which is understandable, because Mrs. Rumsey is co-guest with Frances Perkins in the home of Mrs. J. Borden Harriman, not so rich but allied with a great many strong political figures.

The whole thing is, at present, on a basis of expediency which fits badly with the general recovery program.

It is a nasty mess and something ought to be done about it. This is no time to play around with a situation that involves the pocketbooks of millions of wage-earners. Gen. Johnson, who has shown so much vigor and courage in every other direction, should not let this situation go by default.

Latin-American Unity

With the ousting of Machado in Cuba there is a prospect of an American policy designed to cement Latin-American relations on a basis of mutual respect, fair dealing and unity of idealism.

There are whispers that President Roosevelt intends to appoint a super-ambassador to help work in that direction. And Welles, after his Cuban job is finished, is to have charge of all Latin-American affairs in the state department.

This is mighty good news—good news for labor and for the whole American people. Nothing should be allowed to sidetrack that program.

Responsibility of Directors

Directors of corporations who by long-continued habit have come to look upon their jobs as sinecures created principally to enable them to pocket handsome fees for attending board meetings will do well to follow the course of proceedings in the case of the bankrupt Insull Securities corporation.

Garfield Charles, referee in bankruptcy, after a hearing on the petition of the receivers of that sadly deflated concern, whose stockholders were left apparently holding the bag after the great debacle, has authorized them to file suit to recover from the directors $37,000,000 alleged to have been lost because of their failure to exercise proper care and judgment in supervising the work of their executive officers.

The contention, if sustained by the courts, will put a period to the laissez faire attitude of directors who have been content to draw their pay for rubber-stamping the activities of company officials, often no more than ex post facto approval of undertakings already a fait accompli when brought to the attention of the boards.

Mr. Admiral Swanson

Secretary of the Navy Swanson struts his departmental quarter deck like the grand admiral of a musical comedy, one of the weakest links in the present cabinet.

With a flourish he chops off a day's pay per week from all navy yard workers. He cuts their work time only four hours. It's a trick of government.

Well, this grand admiral can for the present fly in the face of the whole government policy and philosophy laid down by congress in the recovery program, but even for grand admirals there can come a day of political reckoning.

Praise for Secretary Ickes

For Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes and his cast iron determination that honesty must rule in the whole public works program every American must feel a debt of gratitude. But it is not quite so easy to understand why the whole public building program is held at a standstill, while roads are being built and while other nonconstruction projects go forward. Are there to be no buildings? Are the building trades workers not to share in returning prosperity?

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

The number of child workers between the ages of 10 and 15 in the United States decreased 66 per cent in the 20-year period from 1910 to 1930, dropping from 1,990,225 in 1910 to 667,118 in 1930, a decrease of 37 per cent, the census bureau reports. School attendance for the same age group increased from 9,203,671 in 1910 to 13,495,044 in 1930, an increase of 21 per cent, the bureau says.

The census figures indicate that child labor was on the way out, though the demand for cheap labor since 1930 may have resulted in some increase in the number of child workers. But public sentiment seems to have at last turned decisively against the "ancient atrocity," as President Roosevelt so truthfully described child labor.

The public feeling is reflected in the progress made toward ratification of the child labor amendment this year and even more by the general approval of the prohibition of child labor by the national industrial recovery act codes, which seems to be giving child labor the finishing blow. But it is well to remember that the opponents of child labor must not relax their fight. Just as constant vigilance is the price of liberty, so constant vigilance is necessary to prevent the return of evils such as child labor.

State boards of health in North Carolina and other states have insisted that it is false economy to sacrifice public health work in response to popular clamor for reduction in the cost of government.

A famous English statesman said that the protection of the public health is the most important duty of any government. To cripple public health work would be equivalent to going back to health conditions of forty years ago, with epidemics of smallpox, yellow fever, dysentery and other rapidly fatal diseases. It is shortsightedness of the worst kind that would hamper public health activities and other vital social services.

Enactment of minimum wage laws for women in seven states this year gives effective backing to minimum wage provisions of NIRA codes. The codes have not the permanence of the state laws, which tend to establish for "keeps" the principle of the wage necessary for health and decency.

All Textile Mill Owners Violate Code, Googe Says

Washington.—Cotton textile mill owners in the south have resorted to wholesale violation of the labor provisions of the code for that industry promulgated by President Roosevelt, according to a report received by the national recovery administration from George L. Googe, in charge of the American Federation of Labor organizing campaign headquarters in Atlanta, Ga.

Mr. Googe transmitted about 500 complaints of violations of the code to Edward F. McGrady, assistant recovery administrator.

The violations complained of included the classing experienced men as learners, the use of the "stretch-out" system, discrimination against union workers, and failure to pay overtime for maintenance employes.

"No mills that I know of are living up to the code as signed by the president," Mr. Googe said.

BIG LABOR DAY CELEBRATION.

Los Angeles.—Organized labor of Los Angeles and Pasadena will combine this year with the Mount Sinai home for a big Labor day celebration at the Pasadena Rose bowl. Prior to going to Pasadena, labor plans an automobile parade in Los Angeles. At the Rose Bowl there will be games, speeches, races and entertainment for all.

Clergy Ask Prompt Aid for Idle.

New York City.—Nineteen leading clergymen and social workers have issued a public protest against any further delay in providing adequate relief for New York City's unemployed. The protest declared the city's financial condition is "bearing down with intolerable weight upon the unemployed."

The larger the bluff, the smaller it looks when called.

UNION LABEL

What is the objection to union-labeled products?

There would appear to be some objection or else there would be greater general demand for them.

Why not go into this matter now? The time was never more propitious for cooperative effort to popularize union-labeled products. Unionists are usually willing enough to lend aid to efforts to create demand for the label representative of their own craft. Why neglect union-made products of other crafts? Other organized craftsmen are asked to see that your label is on what they purchase. Isn't it only fair to see that their labels are on what you buy?

The union label on products of any description is indisputable evidence the goods were made by union workers, in a union shop and under union conditions. This is the main point in their favor.

By purchasing union-made products with union-earned money unionists are aiding each other. If all union-earned money were spent only for union-made products there would be no enforced idleness among members of organized labor.

Argument is heard that union-labeled products are not easy to obtain. Why aren't they? It is idle to assert that dealers will refuse to stock union-made products if shown sufficient demand exists. Why not create that demand?

Once in a while unionists declare this or that nonunion product is better suited to their taste than union-made goods of a similar kind. Is taste a matter of principle? Isn't it a cultivated sense? Did the founders of organized labor consider taste when formulating the principles upon which the movement is predicated?

No unionist can justify his attitude of noncompliance or indifference unless and until he has exhausted all reasonable efforts to obtain for himself and his home products that bear the symbol of fair labor. There are, perhaps, times when a certain article is unobtainable, but a quest for it may arouse sufficient interest among dealers to make it easy to find the second time inquiry is made.

Labeled hats, shoes, cigarets and other goods are easily obtained in most sections simply because demand for them has been so great dealers have realized the wisdom of stocking them. The average merchant has slight regard for sentiment in business. He wants to handle goods that move. Move the first consignment for him and he will order the second at once.

A demand must first be created. And if organized labor does not create the demand for union-made products, who will?

United and consistent effort to create and maintain a demand for union-made products will lessen unemployment, increase wages and decrease working hours to the glory of the organized labor movement.

ORBES HITS ROOSEVELT'S NATIONAL RECOVERY PLAN

itorial Ballyhoo for Big Business Claims the Presi-lent's "Revolutionary" and "Un-American" Experi-ments Jeopardize Dividends and Should Be Radi-cally Changed to Promote Higher Profits.

ew York, Aug. 24.—The giant in-ect of B. C. Forbes, advisor-ex-rdinary to big business, clearly uns the combined intelligence of ident Roosevelt and his far-her-d "brain trust."

his is revealed by an editorial in August 15 issue of Forbes Mag-e. For while President Roosevelt kly admits that much he is at-pting is experimental, Mr. Forbes s boldly into the spotlight to pro-m and appeal:

Some, doubtless many, of the sures already taken will inev-ly prove to have been mistakes.

Beware of Revolution!

horoughly aroused by his fear of ossible flood of "un-American" in-utions emanating from the White se in the president's patriotic de-ination to put the workless to k and increase the buying power living standards of the millions perform most of the useful labor the production of wealth, Mr. rbes screams:

"Of what avail Revolution if it be-s only Receiverships?"

"Dictators must not kill dividends: t would decree defeat."

he peculiar capitalization and ctuation is Mr. Forbes's, and we'll odds he didn't get it from the ecographer.

taggering badly from his vision of tatorships, revolutions and fur-leighed dividends as the alleged re-t of President Roosevelt's plan for oviding jobs for millions by shorter rs and raising living standards by reasing wages and thus boosting s purchasing power, Mr. Forbes ps:

"Now what? What next?"

With trembling words he answers own double-barreled tautological stion by begging a breathing spell business and demands that Pres-nt Roosevelt stop fiddling with her wages and shorter hours for masses and immediately proceed inject some life-saving profit elixir the sagging underpinning of a ected and badly flabbergasted in-stry, brought to its lamentable state the mismanagement of the very ustrial overlords, whom Mr. rbes claims are wobbling terribly der what he implies is the Amer-anization of the "dictatorial decrees Stalin, Mussolini and Hitler."

Go to it, Mr. Forbes! You are fight-one of the greatest efforts ever augurated in the United States for benefit of the masses and the servation of our social structure. t is your responsibility. But as you attack the president, please re-mber that we have around 12,000,-00 unemployed with millions of them and their dependents suffering the pangs of near-starvation.

Under this condition increasing em-ployment by shortening hours and raising mass purchasing power by boosting wages are the major immed-iate purposes of the National Recov-ery Act, with dividend checks delegat-ed to the background.

"Sound Your A"

Which, Interpreted, Means Here's the Latest Dope on the Musicians

By GEORGE RODGERS

Hello, everybody, back again after a short layoff. Things have been pop-ping the past two weeks. In all the years of my membership I have never seen quite as much interest in our own organization as has been shown recently. The board can meet and they will all be there, and the meetings of the local have shown pretty fair at-tendance. It behooves you and you and you to be there, because after all is said and done, it is your local, and you certainly have a voice.

It is indeed with a great deal of pleasure that I report the washing away of the non-union bands. Brother I mean they are done for in this town. A nice piece of work on the part of everybody. So let's all keep our shoul-der to the wheel and keep up the good work and we can get real money once more for our services.

Cooper Null has taken unto himself a wife. . . Needless to say, the com-ments have been so and so and so. . . Frank Worthy is still married and 37? Could anybody tell me why he has his hair cut so high? Couldn't be get-ting gray, could, it, Frank? . . . Neal Peake was at a rehearsal last Sunday afternoon and the going got so rough he had his shoes off . . . Jim Buchanan remains the same. I'm sorry he shows no improvement. . . Ralph Miller is getting up a band to open Bel-Air under the management of Frank Worthy. . . Good luck, Ralph. . . The Signal Mountain Club orchestra re-mains intact and are doing a nice piece of work on the mountain. . . The local is assured of a good at-tendance next meeting, as they vote on raising the scale. Tommy Tomlin-son plays sax, fiddle and doubles elec-trician. Is that versatile or is that versatile? . . . Everything running along fairly well, and will see you at the meeting. . .

NAMED TO ADVISORY COUNCIL.

Chicago.—Mrs. Florence Curtis Hanson, secretary-treasurer of the American Federation of Teachers, has been appointed a member of the fed-eral advisory council of the United States employment service.

SCHOOLS FACE MOST SERIOUS CRISIS, U. S. OFFICIAL SAYS

Washington, Aug. 24.—Present industrial recovery will probably be of little immediate benefit to the schools and curtailment of educational facilities will reach its most serious proportions in the school year beginning in Sep-tember, in the opinion of Dr. George F. Zook, United States commissioner of education.

School appropriations have been sharply cut from the low levels established in 1932 and the situation in many schools is far more serious than generally real-ized, Dr. Zook said in discussing the school situation.

Dr. Zook declared that in many communities, assessments on which school incomes depend were based on real estate values of the years before the depres-sion. For the coming year, he pointed out, assessments have been made on greatly reduced values, resulting in severe slashes in the funds available for school use.

Though funds will be shorter than ever, schools will need larger funds for the 1933-34 school year than at any time in the last four years, Dr. Zook said. He added that reports to his office show school equipment is in serious need of replacement and that virtually no repairs to buildings, fixtures or other equip-ment has been made in recent years.

14 STATES ACT TO PROMOTE WELFARE OF WORKING WOMEN

Washington, Aug. 24.—A wider acceptance of responsibility by state governments for the welfare of wage-earning women is indicated in a re-cent summary of labor legislation in the six months ended June 30, pre-pared by the federal women's bureau. At least fourteen state legislatures enacted new labor laws for women or passed amendments to existing laws during that period.

Seven states provided machinery for the setting up of minimum wages, according to the report. Six of these —New York, New Jersey, New Hampshire, Connecticut, Ohio and Illinois—passed laws that are essen-tially similar, being patterned on a standard bill advocated by the Na-tional Consumers' league. The law of the seventh state, Utah, is modeled on that of California. These laws all ap-ply to women and minor employes and are broad in scope, their coverage including practically all occupations.

In addition to the new minimum-wage statutes enacted, two amend-ments to the existing Massachusetts act on this subject were passed, both designed to make the law more effec-tive. In Rhode Island, where a mini-mum-wage bill failed of passage, a legislative committee was appointed to investigate working conditions.

Six states enacted changes in hour laws affecting women. New Mexico and Wyoming joined the group of progressive states that guarantee le-gal maximum hours of eight daily and forty-eight weekly to women workers. Connecticut reduced the working hours of women in certain employments, from fifty-eight hours weekly to fifty-two weekly and nine daily. Other changes in existing hour laws were as follows: Minnesota made its 54-hour provision statewide for the employments covered; North Carolina supplemented its existing 11-55 hour law in manufacturing with a 10-55 hour law for stores and pub-lic eating places; Texas brought addi-tional employments under the 9-54 hour law.

Amendments were made to two night-work laws. For manufacturing plants operating two shifts of not more than eight hours a day each, and not more than five days a week, Indiana extended the 10 o'clock limit to midnight. In Massachusetts the law that prohibits women to work in textile factories between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. was amended to include leather manufacturing in this prohibition.

Peel Called Into Greenville, S. C.

John Peel, representative of the United Textile Workers of America, who has been in Chattanooga for the past several weeks assisting in the organizing campaign in local mills, left Thursday for Greenville, S. C., his home city, where he will take charge of a situation there for the present, at least.

Protests of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council against the removal of Mr. Peel at this time were without avail, officials of the national organ-ization holding that his services were required in the South Carolina city. He had rendered invaluable service both in the matter of assisting in the organizing work and in representing local mill workers who are the vic-tims of a warped conception of pa-triotism practiced by certain local tex-tile mill owners—"code chiselers."

Mr. Peel expressed his intention, however, of keeping in close touch with the local situation, and of carry-ing out plans which he had laid dur-ing his stay in this city.

T. R. Cuthbert, secretary of Cen-tral Body, who holds an organizing commission under the national textile organization, will have charge of the campaign locally, temporarily, at least.

Mr. Peel made scores of warm per-sonal friends during his brief sojourn in this city, his ability and sincerity having been recognized by citizens of all groups with which he came into contact, and his removal particularly at this time, was a matter for general regret.

Builders Increase Wages.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Thirty-five general contractors in Atlantic county have announced a new scale of wages for building workers involving in-crease up to 100 per cent over the hourly rates now prevailing.

Teachers' Congress Expels German Fascist Delegates

San Sebastian, Spain.—The Inter-national Congress of School Teach-ers' Associations, having delegates from nearly all sections of the world, expelled from its sessions the German Nazi representatives, among whom was the Bavarian minister of educa-tion.

Other delegates whistled the "Rogue's March" as the Nazis pa-raded from the room. The motion to exclude was made by a French dele-gate and forcefully supported by an Austrian, while a Briton pleaded for "peace and concord." A note had previously been read from the Ger-man Federation of Teachers saying their association had been forcibly dissolved.

UPHOLSTERERS VOTE TO CONTINUE STRIKE

New York City.—Because the em-ployers refuse to recognize the union, 4,000 striking upholstery workers re-jected proposals made by the employ-ers for ending a three weeks' strike. President James H. Hatch, of the Up-holsterers' International Union of North America, advised the strikers not to return to work until the em-ployers agreed to recognize the union.

TWO RIVAL GARMENT UNIONS END LONG STANDING DISPUTE

Washington, Aug. 24.—President William Green, of the American Fed-eration of Labor, on Aug. 18 an-nounced the settlement of the long-standing union jurisdictional difficul-ties in the men's garment industry. As a member of the NIRA labor ad-visory board and the national labor board he issued the following state-ment:

"An understanding was reached be-tween T. A. Rickert, of the United Garment Workers, and Sidney Hill-man, of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers organizations, which termi-nated the jurisdictional controversy which heretofore divided the two or-ganizations into two separate groups. This means future peace and co-op-eration between the organizations which exercise jurisdiction in the men's and boys' clothing manufactur-ing industry."

Congratulations of the national la-bor board on the settlement were ex-pressed by Acting Chairman Leo Wolman. He explained that the mat-ter had come before the board in connection with the strike of shirt workers in Pottsville, Pa. Confer-ences were arranged between the two garment unions with the result an-nounced by Green. Dr. Wolman said that the board felt a long step had been taken toward bringing peaceful conditions and orderly government to the industry.

Terms of the agreement between the two garment workers' organiza-tions were not made public, but enough was learned to indicate that each will hold the shops it now con-trols, with something like a 50-50 split on shops now unorganized.

WINTER UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF TO REQUIRE BILLION DOLLARS

Jobless Will "Take Beating" Unless States Supply Half of Fund, Federal Relief Administrator Declares. Drop Reported in Number of Families Receiving Aid.

Washington, Aug. 17.—One billion dollars must be spent for unemployment relief next winter, and the unemployed will "take a beating" unless the states supply half, Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, declared in talking with reporters on the relief situation.

Hopkins, who has charge of the distribution of the federal government's $500,000,000 relief fund, expressed confidence that state and local agencies would do their share, but he warned those who held back that federal aid would not be forthcoming.

Declaring the states must match the federal appropriations, Hopkins said:

"If we don't raise that half billion, then the unemployed will lose out. I want the states and cities to raise it and I think we will get it.

Not "Hard-Boiled."

Hopkins termed "absurd" reports describing him as "hard boiled" and a "tough bird" so far as giving out money is concerned.

"If we can't get the money out of the states, the unemployed are going to take a beating," he said. "It's no fun going around threatening states about spending money."

West Virginia, Texas, Ohio, Kentucky, Alabama and Michigan, he added, already have been "put on notice" to increase relief expenditures or else not to expect any more federal grants.

By Oct. 1, he continued, he expected all states to be going full speed with relief work. That is the date when all remaining money in the federal fund may be allotted on the basis of need without being matched by the states.

Decline Is Shown.

The relief agency's monthly family relief report showed a drop both in the number of families receiving aid and expenditures of all public funds in July compared with June.

Covering forty-five representative cities, it showed 1,150,750 families were helped in July, compared with 1,165,276 in June, a decrease of 1.2 per cent.

Expenditure of federal, state and local money amounted to $24,801,845, against $27,087,639, a decrease of 8.4 per cent.

New Relations Of Labor And State Emerging

NIRA Offshoot and NIRA Itself Taking Upon Themselves Functions Never Before Attempted by Government.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Labor has been plunged into a new relationship with both employers and government and a new type of state is rising amid the ashes left from the great fire of 1929, when paper titles to tangible profit were so sizzled by the flames that in many cases all value was wiped off the map.

That offshoot of NIRA, so quietly launched that it causes scarcely a ripple on the waters—the national labor board—is doing something most profound to industrial relations. It is changing the industrial map.

And NIRA itself has begun to decide jurisdictional conflicts. It has rendered a decision in at least one case, deciding that the workers in one industry must, under that industry's code, belong to a certain union.

Performs New Function.

But the national labor board, which will constantly broaden its sphere and functions, is performing at this hour a function new in American industry, new to the government and productive of a new state of things, it seems.

In Reading, Pa., Fred M. Wilcox, representing the national labor board, is supervising an election to determine who shall represent the workers in collective bargaining. The workers had selected representatives. The employers rejected them. A strike followed. Then came the government's order for an election. If the union ticket wins, that settles it. If a company union ticket wins, that settles it.

U. S. Holds Labor Elections.

In Philadelphia and in several New Jersey cities disputes are in process of similar settlement. The United States government is conducting labor elections, just as it has supervised elections in Nicaragua and other Latin American nations. It has gone into the business of seeing to it that labor gets a chance to function in an organized manner. But it has not gone into the business of seeing that unions are formed under any particular banner.

However, a new relation of the state to labor and to industry is being built. This new relation may soon have many variations. In one case the government made an agreement with the employer, another agreement with the employes; the employer and employes made no agreement between them, but both accepted and are abiding by the separate agreements with the government.

Big Industries Surrender.

This week in the oil and steel codes all company union provisions were stricken out. Labor has the right to organize and in these great industries there can be no more yellow dog contracts, no more enforced company unions. Heavy penalties can be inflicted if the rights of labor are violated. The same is true of the lumber industry and will shortly be true of the coal industry. The great anti-union and company union industries are surrendering their citadel in the face of the law of the land, enacted by congress as it was written by organized labor. The labor movement won this charter of freedom. But the new relation of the state to labor and to industry is something that is now in the mold.

And then there was the Scottish father of twins, who only had one of them photographed.

$7,200,000 Insurance Increase For Sears, Roebuck Employes

Chicago, Ill.—The 7,000 employes of Sears, Roebuck & Co. throughout the United States received an increased insurance coverage of $7,200,000 under the group insurance plan. The personnel of the firm are now insured for approximately $35,000,000.

The entire program, which is underwritten by the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, is co-operative. The employer and employe share the cost. The plan includes visiting nurse service and frequent distribution of health and conservation and disease prevention literature.

STRIKE AGAINST 'STRETCH-OUT'

Newberry, S. C.—Employes of the Kendall Textile mills here struck in protest against a "stretch-out" system of distributing work. The walkout involved 2,500 workers.

Laborers' Pay Should Be Cut 50%

That's What ROY McDONALD, Owner of the HOME STORES, Wants

Can You Afford to Spend Your Money with a Man Who Wants YOUR Pay Cut in Half?

McDonald is now publishing a weekly "throw-sheet," and employed an out-of-town operator in preference to a Chattanoogan.

McDonald says: "President Hoover made a mistake in 1929 when he asked that wages be maintained. If he had cut wages 50% in 1929 the depression would now be over."

Monster Parade, Park Events Promise Thrills

Polo, Baseball, Music Among the Many Features.

INDUSTRIAL "Y" SPONSORS CONTESTS

Field Events Scheduled, With Worthwhile Prizes for Contest Winners. Afternoon and Evening Program Filled With Entertaining Features.

The stage is set for a great co-operative celebration of Labor Day Monday, and from the time the great parade forms in the morning until the program of events scheduled for Warner park ends near midnight, there will not be a dull moment.

The procession will probably be the most elaborate affair of its kind ever staged in Chattanooga, hundreds of floats having been entered and scores of merchants, manufacturers and business firms having announced their intention of having representation in the line.

At least fifteen floats will be entered by various local unions, led by Central Body, and thousands of marchers will take part in the labor section. It was announced Friday morning that organized labor's position in the parade will be designated as Section 3, and will form on Chestnut street south from Ninth. Floats must be in line at 9 a.m., and marchers at 9:30. The procession will move promptly at 10 o'clock. The line of march will be east on Ninth to Broad, north on Broad to Fifth, east on Fifth to Market, south on Market to Main, countermarch to Sixth, east on Sixth to Georgia avenue, to McCallie and disband. W. E. Eckenrod will be marshal for the labor section.

The general committee asked The Labor World to urge upon the public to remain at a safe distance from the line of march, and not crowd in upon the participants.

PARK PROGRAM LOOKS PROMISING.

Program at Warner park, which will begin shortly after the parade disbands, includes some interesting features. Beginning with a polo game which starts promptly at 1:30, events of various nature will be staged throughout the afternoon and evening. Baseball game between the crack Crane and Standard teams will be called at 3, and an elaborate program of track events, under direction of the Industrial Y. M. C. A., including events which will be divided between four groups — men, women, boys and girls—and worthwhile prizes will be given to the winners of each contest.

All of these events will be called up from the field, beginning promptly at 3 o'clock. Spectators must remain in the grandstand, and participants will only be allowed on the track and field as they are called up from their particular event, and must leave the field after participating. All of these events will be held directly in front of the grandstand. Softball games will be played throughout the afternoon, the championship of local leagues, however, to be contended for at McCallie field in the evening.

A picked band of twenty pieces will give selected programs in the afternoon and evening, and the various park concessions will be augmented by several special features.

Plenty of eats and drinks will be served throughout the afternoon and evening, and upon the whole it is believed that the program, although not as elaborate as some which have been staged formerly, will furnish an unusal amount of entertainment for the throngs which are expected to visit the park throughout the day.

Barbers Urged To Participate

President George W. Perry, of Local 415, Journeymen Barbers, Thursday asked The Labor World to notify all members of that local to appear at Ninth and Chestnut streets promptly at 9:30 Monday morning, to participate in the great parade. White shirts and white pants is to be the official uniform, Mr. Perry said.

Notice was also given by Secretary Gaston Helms that regular monthly meeting of Local 415 has been changed from Monday to Tuesday night, at Roosevelt hall, the regular meeting place.

Northside Church To Hold Special Labor Services

Central Body Accepts Invitation to Hear Address of Dr. Gabbard—Forbes Also to Speak.

All members of organized labor are invited to attend church services Sunday morning at the Northside Presbyterian church, when the Rev. Elmer E. Gabbard will deliver a special sermon to Labor, and George Forbes will speak on behalf of the workers.

The Rev. Mr. Gabbard sent a cordial invitation to Secretary Cuthbert, and Central Body Monday night voted to accept and urge as many as possible to attend the service.

Not in several years has a local minister volunteered to preach a special Labor Sunday sermon, and the courtesy of Mr. Gabbard is therefore highly appreciated. Trades unionists recalled that the only concerted effort to hold a general service for the workers on Labor Sunday occurred several years ago, when the Rev. Raymond G. Sherrer, pastor of the Highland Park Christian church, occupied the pulpit at Centenary Methodist church.

Those who will have room for one or more passengers in their cars are asked to meet their less-fortuate brothers at the courthouse at 10:30, and transport them to the Northside church.

Charity Ball Game Carded for Sept. 11

Annual charity ball game between the Lookouts and a picked nine from the city leagues will be staged at Engel stadium on Sept. 11, one day after the regular Southern league season ends, and spokesmen for the Chattanooga Valley club announced Friday that a fine program of entertainment is being arranged to supplement the baseball game, which will, of course, be the main feature.

Proceeds of the affair, it is stressed, will all go to charity, and trades unionists and their friends are urged to purchase tickets in advance of the event.

The program will have no connection whatever with the baseball association, the club merely using the stadium and the Lookouts donating their services. Boxing, softball and other entertainment features are being scheduled for the program, it is announced.

Organization Movement Adds Many Hundreds

Cuthbert Reports Ranks of New Unions Rapidly Swelling.

Organization and installation of new locals continued the past week at the usual steady pace, according to T. R. Cuthbert, local A. F. of L. organizer. Calls for visits by organizers in such places as Dalton, Trion, Chickamauga, South Pittsburg, Daisy, Soddy, continue to come in to The Labor World office, and such appeals are being met whenever local schedules will allow.

Discussing the purpose of the campaign, Mr. Cuthbert said:

"The recently installed Bakers and Confectioners union, after the slight setback caused by the Colonial bakery affair, has rebounded, and this week saw some dozen or more additional applicants taken in, with others yet to be passed upon by the committee. It is predicted that present plans for securing a union-labeled bread will mature in a short while. Although Colonial has said that even though organization in their plant should be successful, the union label is not wanted, indications are that other bakeries may soon be proud and profitable possessors of the bakers' label.

"There are at present two dairies that are practically 100% organized into the new Milk Wagon Drivers and Dairy Employes union installed last week. At the first regular meeting after installation, this local obligated twenty more members, and other dairies promise to be completely in the fold in just a matter of a few weeks. However, up to the present time, one of the most widely advertised dairies seems to frown on the organization, but with all the rest of them in it is not believed this particular dairy can long hold out.

"From inquiries for an organization of garment workers, it is believed that this craft only needs a called meeting, if the organizers can ever get around to it, to start themselves off. The same condition exists in the waiters and restaurant employes trade, with employers expressing themselves as favoring it.

"After a few weeks of furious and determined taking of affidavits in the textile and hosiery industry, discriminations seem to be on the wane. It is known for a fact that one superintendent has been given a severe calling down by the owners of the mill, and already an increase in membership in this particular mill has materialized, and the feeling of safety and security is noticeable among the employes.

"Furniture workers in one of the largest plants in the city are now 100 per cent with an organization of some three hundred.

"A charter for a branch of the retail clerks has already been applied for. This does not take in the department stores, however, and it is presumed that these workers will eventually feel the need for their own local. Especially in the five-and-ten stores is the need apparent when one realizes that they are not yet under any code at all. Let it be known, however, that whenever any of these clerks decide that they wish to better themselves, they may receive the same aid and help by applying to The Labor World office, and an organizer will meet with them to discuss the matter with them.

"The first wave of discriminatory discharges and threats experienced in all trades and crafts have lost their effect on workers in general now, and the bogey man of 'straw boss' rule is being ridiculed by the workers and they are gradually becoming more independent in action and more open in their search for freedom in industry.

"One serious walkout in the last two weeks in a large plant was narrowly averted, and after a conference with the management of the plant it is hoped that occasion for such defensive tactics on the part of the workers will not become necessary.

"It is reported that one of the organizers among a branch of industry in the utilities is being shadowed constantly for fear he may 'contaminate' employes of the corporation.

FIVE-DAY WEEK AIDS PRINTERS IN RELIEF WORK

Plan Adopted When Papers Refuse to Co-operate.

ADVERTISING SHOWS INCREASE IN SPACE

All Members Do Not Confine Themselves to One Day Off Each Week.

By John H. Crump
Member Chattanooga Typo Union No. 89.

Foreseeing the need of ultimately shortening the work-week, and after trying to negotiate the five-day week into contracts with employers for several years with little success, the International Typographical union voluntarily put the five-day week into effect in all union-operated newspaper plants on January 1, 1933, assuming all expense of doing so, thereby causing a sacrifice of 16 2-3 per cent in the weekly pay of all regularly employed members.

For years the union made efforts to get employers to assume a part of the financial sacrifice of the five-day week, but met with organized objection to any form of a shorter work-week. Realizing that some effort must be made to distribute the existing work among the over-supply of craftsmen, the union put it up to the membership as to whether the shorter work-week should be tried at their own expense, and they voiced their approval with an overwhelming majority.

In an article in the Sunday magazine section of the Chattanooga Times last February I made the statement that the five-day week would probably fail to take care of the unemployment situation existing among the union printers of Chattanooga. I was partly right. The five-day week would not, in itself, have taken care of the unemployment situation.

It was mainly through the willingness of a number of those regularly employed to lay off an extra day a week frequently that Chattanooga Typographical union averted having to return to its former plan of paying out-of-work benefits. Even so, there has been a number of weeks when some of the unemployed members fared quite badly, financially.

Another factor which has helped the five-day week to be the success it is was the various schemes both daily newspapers resorted to in order to get advertising, such as special editions, special co-operative pages and city-wide sale days, thereby creating extra work.

A year ago merchants seemed to think "nobody is spending," and advertised accordingly. In recent months, however, their advertising indicated their line of thought has changed to "there is money hoarded which should be spent," and many bargains were offered to entice money from its hiding place. Chattanooga printers benefited by the slight increase in advertising.

The five-day week, as adopted by the Typographical union, has not increased purchasing power of printers. It was not intended to do so. But it did enable more printers to buy the necessities of life. More beans and bacon and fewer automobiles and radios.

Chattanooga union printers are proud of the fact that not one of their fellow members has had to call on any charitable organization for relief during the depression. And that with their membership nearly 30 per cent unemployed. The local union has spent, directly, more than $4,500 during the depression in unemployment relief work, which, under various plans, benefited the unemployed members more than $6,500.

To which may be added a sacrifice in pay of regularly employed members of more than $12,000 during eight months of the five-day week (not counting additional days regulars have laid off during the past eight months), making nearly $20,000 spent directly and indirectly in relief work during the depression.

McDonald's Plan Is "Explained" to Daily Newspapers

"Transfer" of Store Management Described as "Dream of Years."

Sudden rise to affluence in the business world by managers of Roy McDonald's so-called "Home Stores" continued as a matter for discussion on the downtown streets during the past week.

Citizens were undecided in some cases, however, whether to attribute the decision of the grocer-baker-dairyman-printer-publisher-tire merchant-individualist to a generous surge of philanthropy, or to the business sagacity of the respective managers, who are represented as being in position to buy the stores after having been mere salaried workers. Particularly are these gentlemen to be congratulated, it is held, when the statement of one former manager is recalled, that he was paid $3.81 for one week's work. There will be a general hope that these boys will be able to count above that figure when Mr. McDonald's payments are taken out, at the conclusion of each week's business.

The transfer of ownership of the "Home Stores," which had doubtless been thought by some "enemies and competitors" of McDonald to be an effort to dodge the operation of the code of fair competition, was explained thoroughly by the grocer-baker-dairyman-printer-publisher-tire merchant to the daily papers. He said it was partly because of difficulties arising out of the adoption of the code that caused him to adopt the new deal for his employes and make them "sole owners" of their respective stores. However, the transfer was described to the Times by McDonald as "an idealistic sort of dream I have been thinking about for years," which statement, of course, dispels any possible thought that the code is being "chiseled on."

Mr. McDonald admitted, according to the morning paper, that some of the managers would have a "hard time," but gave assurance that the Home Stores wholesale company stood ready at any time to "relieve" them by "buying out the purchaser's interest." The boys will be given a long time to "pay off" their debt—in fact, "forever, if they need that long," according to the Times' quotation of McDonald.

The "sole owners," having become executives, may now, of course, put in as many hours as they choose for a day's work, and the percentage of their "profits" from the stores is none of the N. R. A.'s business, maybe.

Citizens were speculating this week on the possibility of McDonald stocking up the various units with automobile tires, as an adjunct to their grocery line. However, it is believed the tire business will be operated as an independent unit, along with the wholesale grocery, dairy, creamery, bakery, printery, publishing plant and such other lines as may be added from time to time. Incidentally, no announcement has been made public with respect to a rumor current a few weeks ago that the grocer-baker-dairyman-printer-publisher-tire merchant-individualist would add a line of housefurnishings to his many business enterprises, and it is presumed that the report was premature, at least.

Labor World readers will remember that McDonald told a committee which called upon him that he was an individualist, and that anyone who works for him will come to work at such time as he orders, and will quit by the same sign.

President Hoover, he said, made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders to keep wages up as an aid to prosperity. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer-baker-dairyman - printer - publisher-individualist averred, we would now be out of the depression, and further, he held, we will never be out until wages are further and further cut.

Traveling is to become more dangerous for men. An eastern railroad will employ young ladies to be waitresses on the dining cars.

Lane Drug Company Protests News Story

Brewery Workers Sign Last Holdout; Again '100 Per Cent'

Textile Company to Distribute Hauck's Product---Non-Union Beer May Be Forced From Local Market.

Officers of Local 79, Brewery and Soft Drink Workers, reported Friday morning that the celebration of Labor Day Monday will have an added "kick" for their members, due to the fact that on Thursday an agreement was signed with the last of the local beer distributors to come into the union fold.

The Textile Warehouse and Cold Storage company, which has handled the non-union Graupner beer, under the agreement, will abandon the agency for that product and will in future distribute the output of Hauck's Brewery, which, of course, is 100 per cent. union.

Whether or not the Graupner outfit will be able to prevail upon any one locally to take a chance with their non-union beer is not known, but it is presumed the persistence of the concern in operating a non-union brawery has made the sale of its product on this market unprofitable, and it is doubted that any one will care to try it again unless and until the policy of the management is changed.

Local 79 is to be congratulated on the businesslike, conservative manner in which the advent of beer, with all its new and difficult problems from the standpoint of the union, has been handled, and that the local is again boasting a 100 per cent. membership speaks well for the ability of its officers.

Pickets Again Work at Ball Park

Pickets notifying the public of action of Central Body declaring President Engel, of the baseball club, "unfair to organized labor," were placed in the vicinity of the ball park last Sunday, and reported many expressions of sympathy with the workers when the case was explained to scores of people. Attendance was said to be about 1,300, although a Sunday double-header usually brings out several thousand fans.

Owner Clark Griffith, of Washington, has been notified of the dispute with the local president.

CHAIN CONCERN MUCH AGGRIEVED

President Naylor Declares Only Two Employes Sent Into Chattanooga—Reply of Labor World Sent to Morning Paper for Publication.

Controversy between the Lane Drug company, Atlanta concern which has opened a branch store in Chattanooga, and organized labor, became a live issue this week, particularly following publication in the Chattanooga Times of a letter addressed to The Labor World by President Naylor, in which exceptions were taken to an article printed in these columns last week detailing the progress of negotiations with the chain store for employment of organized labor on the remodeling of a local store room, and the subsequent failure of these negotiations to bring an agreement as to whether the concern had displayed a friendly attitude in the matter.

The Lane company's letter, together with the reply, which has been furnished the Times, follow:

Labor World,
310 W. Eighth Street,
Chattanooga, Tennessee.

Dear Sirs:

We are in receipt of your issue of Aug. 25 and are particularly interested in noting the valuable front page space you have given our entry into the Chattanooga market. However, it is apparent you have been misinformed as your statements are quite erroneous and it is our thought that you endeavor to be absolutely fair at all times and, frankly, you have given us a very sorry picture to the labor world, which I am sure you will be glad to correct.

A misunderstanding, no doubt, arose because the owners of the property we leased did not see fit to use union labor. We leased the building at 714 Market street as of a finished job. We had nothing to do with the preparing of this building, consequently, we cannot be blamed for the action of the owners.

We did endeavor and specified union labor on such work as we did in setting up our equipment after the building was turned over to us. However, labor refused to co-operate with us and naturally, we did the best we could under the circumstances.

You state that Lane Drug company employes came from Atlanta in your edition of the 25th. It is quite true that our manager was transferred from Atlanta to Chattanooga. It is also true our manager of the soda fountain was transferred. It is absolutely necessary to have well-schooled managers in charge of business of this character. The thirty-odd additional employes came direct from applicants in Chattanooga itself and we understand they were all without connections prior to our putting them on our payroll.

All of these statements can very easily be verified, if you care to ascertain the facts, not only from ourselves but from the officials of the Chattanooga Times, who have an intimate knowledge of our personnel and know to what extremes we went in our efforts to work with the Union Trades and Labor council.

We feel you will be glad to run on the front page of your able publication these corrections which we feel are our due.

Assuring you of our desire to co-operate at all times, we are,

Very truly yours,
LANE DRUG STORES, INC.
H. C. NAYLOR,
President.

Aug. 31, 1933.

Mr. N. C. Naylor, President,
Lane Drug Stores,
20-30 Fifth Street, N. W.,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:

We have your letter of the 28th, in which you complain of a front-page story in our issue of the 25th noting the controversy between your company and organized labor in reference to the remodeling of a store

What Next!

Newest use of the photo-electric cell or "electric eye," as it is popularly called, is to tell whether water is hard or soft, and how hard, or how soft. The device is used in connection with water softeners in industrial plants. At regular intervals, the machine takes a sample from the soft water supply, sucks it into a tube, injects a chemical, looks through the sample at the light and if the water is too hard, gives notice by ringing a bell or flashing a red light, or both.

DIZZINESS
relieved by Black-Draught

"I decided to take Thedford's Black-Draught, as I had been having bilious spells," writes Mr. Charles E. Stevens, of Columbus, Ind. "When I get bilious, I feel sleepy and tired and do not feel like doing my work. It is hard to tell how I feel, but I do not feel good. I get awfully dizzy. I know then that I had better take something. After I found how good Black-Draught is, that is what I have used. I guess it rids me of the bile, for I feel better—don't feel like I am dropping off to sleep every time I sit down. That, to me, is a very bad feeling."
Now you can get Black-Draught in the form of a SYRUP, for CHILDREN.

All Aboard for Some Place

Plenty of croakers today. Plenty ready to say, "It won't work." Plenty to say, "It can't be done." But the great masses of the people are so filled with hope and renewed faith and courage as to believe that it can be done and that we are going some place. They're ready to say, "All Aboard for Some Place," even though they don't exactly know where we're going.

Nobody, for that matter, knows just where we're going, but when a people is as determined and as hopeful as the American people now are, it can be taken for granted there is going to be a parade and that it will wind up some place plenty far enough from where it started.

There is nothing the people of the United States can't do, if they are sufficiently determined. Today they are determined. Those who are croaking had better find some occupation. Those among them who are croaking to confuse the public mind might as well save their breath. It is too late for that. America is on its way and it does not intend again to be the helpless victim of an exploiting plutocracy.

Still on the Target

Bedeviled, probably as few men have been, by business, big, little and medium, to swing off the straight track, Gen. Hugh S. Johnson this week promised an "interpretation" of collective bargaining. There was plenty of reason to expect some modifying language, something that would tend to weaken the labor section of the Recovery Act.

But when the "interpretation" came it left the law right where it was and it left the union haters more disconsolate than ever, for here their last chance was gone. They were given a final and definite ruling that section 7A of the act—the labor section—must stand as it is, that it cannot be changed or modified and that no "company union" provision can remain in any code.

For labor this is magnificent. The charter of industrial freedom remains unimpaired. Moreover, there now is an administrative ruling that never can be changed, because it is too definite and clear-cut to be changed.

Perhaps more valuable to many people than even the content of the ruling itself is the renewed faith they have in the man who made the ruling, by no means forgetting Donald Richberg, who joined in making it and in signing it.

The ruling supports precisely the position Gen. Johnson has taken from the very first. He has stood by his guns. He has not wobbled or wavered. And that he has been hounded and bulldozed and menaced in many ways no one can doubt.

Most of the important codes now awaiting hearing contain company union provisions. All will come out. The company union is as dead as a door nail. Of course workers can keep their company unions if they want to and history records that there have been slaves who did not know how to drop their chains even when they were unlocked. But we need have little fear today on that score. Trade unionism will not neglect its opportunity. And let it be hoped it will not forget that there were men who knew how to stand up straight at a critical time.

Unemployment Forty-six Years Ago

The social menace of the substitution of iron slaves in industry for men and women workers and the necessity of reducing the length of the work day and work week to prevent wholesale unemployment were seriously considered by the American Federation of Labor in its early years.

In his report to the 1887 convention of the Federation, President Samuel Gompers declared that the "displacement of labor by machinery in the past few years has exceeded that of any like period in our history," and said it was "one of the most important facts with which the labor movement has to grapple." Commenting on the statement by the U. S. Commissioner of Labor Statistics that nearly a million workers were out of employment, Mr. Gompers said:

> It is now time that something should be done to reclaim from misery the many thousands of good and true men whose only fault is that they have stomachs to fill, with ready and willing hands to supply their wants, but continually receiving the stereotyped reply in answer to their appeals for work, "No job open."
> Much can be done by the trade unions to relieve the distress caused by the displacement of labor by machinery. Within the past few years the trade unions have sought and in many instances secured a reduction in the hours of labor; for a brief period there has been a stagnation in this direction.
> I appeal to the trades unions of the country to go on in this work. The answer to all opponents to the reduction of hours of labor could well be given in these words: "That so long as there is one man who seeks employment and cannot obtain it, the hours of labor are too long."

From 1887 to the present organized labor has reiterated its demand for a reduction in the length of the work week and work day proportionate to the increased production of working men and women with machinery, without reduction in weekly earnings. By the fair competition codes which President Roosevelt is establishing under the National Recovery Act that demand is being realized in part. Thorough organization of the workers will make possible its realization in full.

Working men and women everywhere should enroll in the trade unions and thus mobilize their strength in a practical way for higher wages, shorter hours and the complete abolition of unemployment.

Ratify the Child Labor Amendment

Great progress is being made in eliminating child labor by means of the fair competition codes established under the National Industrial Recovery Act. The cotton-textile code, signed by President Roosevelt on July 9, barred from employment children under 16 years. A similar prohibition has been included in other codes approved by the President and will probably be incorporated in the rest of them as they are adopted.

But these codes exist only for the two-year period covered by the Recovery Act. When employers are once more free to fix their own wage scales and work conditions, they will undoubtedly discover that child labor is again profitable and will undertake to re-establish it with all of its sinister results.

The labor movement has always condemned child labor as an evil at any time and under any conditions. During the depression the economic fallacy of employing children while adults are jobless has been stressed. But when the depression is over it will still be repugnant from the humanitarian standpoint.

With the welfare of the children both in the immediate present and the future at heart, the American Federation of Labor is working for the inclusion of a child-labor prohibition section in every one of the emergency fair competition codes. At the same time, it is using its best efforts for the ratification by the states of the child labor amendment to the federal constitution as the only method of making permanent the improved child labor standards set up in the codes.

Fifteen states have already ratified the amendment. Nine states have ratified it during 1933. Twenty-one more states must ratify it by 1935 so that when the codes expire a federal law can be enacted and child labor forever dropped from our economic system.

The American Federation of Labor militantly sponsored ratification in the fifteen states which have adopted the amendment. It will not relax its efforts until the twenty-one additional states join the ratification crusade and confer upon the Government of the United States the authority to ban children from industry for all time and place them in the schools from which they should never have been taken.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

For kings in general, these are parlous times. The big powerful men of finance and industry are being taught that there is going to be such a thing in America as industrial law and order and that human welfare counts in No. 1 position.

It is true that some of them are squawking mighty hard and some are trying to throw stones in the machinery. They hate to give up their ancient powers, but little by little they are giving up and a new day is rapidly coming around the corner.

As a matter of fact, one of the things that helped make the new day possible—that helped to create the sentiment for it—was the terrible failure of the big bankers, the boys who had posed as guardians and keepers and repositories of all knowledge. When they went into their famous nose dive they sacrificed the respect built up by generations of propaganda and the people came to see what they have always seen when an idol toppled over.

The fact that some of the powerful gentry have been and are bucking in the traces doesn't mean a great deal, except that they are suffering with the usual astigmatism of their type. The cars are coming and the cars will keep coming. Plenty fast, too. Plenty fast.

If NRA should by any chance fail, the chances are the next congress would come across with a law creating an absolute dictatorship and wouldn't that jar the financial monarchs?

But that isn't likely to be needed. Behind the scenes clever moves are being made by a set of government officials whose diplomacy is just a shade better than that of the Bourbons, who never were particularly bright anyway.

The nation has somehow managed to reach the conclusion that the time has gone for rulership by the failures and so public sentiment climbs day by day for this new process of law and order in industry, with a change in the point of control. It is good!

SHIRT FACTORY GIRLS WIN RIGHT TO ORGANIZE

Pottsville, Pa.—Some 4,000 striking shirt factory girls have returned to work in the H. D. Bob company plants here, under a truce arranged by the national labor board, at Washington.

Under the agreement the company permits the girls to organize unions in each factory and these may affiliate with any national unions they desire. The workers will name representatives to negotiate hours and working conditions with employers.

Pending result of these negotiations, wages and conditions will remain as they were on the day girls walked out, under the guidance of officials of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers.

Some folks that were raised on a bottle still carry it around with them.

TYPO UNION FINDS LOYALTY AND FINANCIAL STRENGTH ENABLES IT TO WEATHER PERIOD OF STRESS

Annual Reports of Officers Show That Union Has Paid More Than Twelve Million Dollars in Benefits During Past Three Years of Depression.

Written for the Labor Day Edition of The Labor World
By JOHN H. CRUMP
Member Chattanooga Typographical Union, No. 89

Should you ever visit that wonderful territory railroad advertising literature calls the "scenic west," don't fail to stop at Colorado Springs, Colo., and see what the natives of Colorado proudly refer to as "the show place of the state." It is none other than the Union Printers Home, maintained by the members of the International Typographical union for the care of their sick and indigent members.

From this beautiful place may be seen a wonderful view of the snow-topped Pike's Peak, and other surrounding mountains. To see the Home in the summertime when flowers are at full-bloom and shrubbery at its greenest is a never-to-be-forgotten pleasure.

Members of the I. T. U. have spent nearly $825,000 in constructing this home for their sick and aged members, and $5,554,000 in maintaining it since it was opened in 1892, and are proud to exhibit it to the world to show what may be accomplished when a humanitarian impulse causes thousands of loyal unionists to contribute small amounts to a worthy project.

Probably no other single act of the International Typographical union has created so much good will and favorable comment from the public as the erection and maintenance of the Union Printers Home. It shows the public that loyal union printers will take care of their fellow members, refusing to let charitable organizations and state institutions do their work for them.

A glance at the report of the secretary-treasurer of the Union Printers Home for the past year as published in the August issue of the Typographical Journal gives some interesting facts about the Home.

Receipts of the Home fund, including interest on bank deposits, garage rental, sale of hogs, cows, old material, and dues from members of the I. T. U., totaled $381,083.07. Maintenance and permanent construction costs were $428,959.96. The net maintenance cost was $255,616.39.

There were an average of 315 residents per month at the Home during the year. The average cost per member per month was 67.62.

A new dormitory has been constructed and furnished at a cost of $100,000, and reconstruction and refurnishing of the main building dining rooms and kitchen cost $118,000.

Three dining rooms are operated at the Home. One for the main building residents, one for hospital and sanitarium patients and one for bathrobe patients who find it pleasant to leave their rooms for meals but for whom the task of dressing is too fatiguing. Bed patients receive tray service in their rooms.

A cafeteria has been installed between the main and hospital dining rooms with double service arrangement for serving both dining rooms at the same time. A resident has only to take a tray and select his food, and a waitress carries it to the table for him. Those patients whose physical condition prevent them taking a place in the cafateria line are served by waitresses at the tables.

The cafeteria service makes it possible to offer a greater variety of food and has proven very popular with the residents.

The dining rooms, which are bright and cheery, offer an unparalleled view of the mountains through large clear windows, and provide a pleasant atmosphere for the serving of meals.

A menu picked at random, served on June 5, 1933, is as follows:

Breakfast: Stewed prunes, hominy grits, minced ham and scrambled eggs, hot biscuits, preserves.

Dinner: Cream of tomato soup, grilled pork chops with apple sauce or braised sirloin of beef-brown gravy, mashed potatoes, buttered carrots or peas, creamed cold slaw, custard pie or peaches.

Supper: Browned beef hash with chili sauce or corn fritters with crisp bacon, American fried or baked potatoes, buttered green beans, hearts of lettuce and tomatoes, chocolate eclairs.

Groceries, meats, fresh fruits and vegetables purchased the past year cost $48,472.69. The Home farm furnished food valued at $24,708.54, making the total cost of food supplies for the year $73,181.23.

There were 453,113 meals served at the home the past year, of which 3,797 were served to visitors. Bed patients were served 95,358 meals.

Various forms of amusement are provided for the residents of the home. Many residents derive much pleasure from playing croquet, for which there is an abundance of room. The recreation room provides cards, chess, checkers, billiards and pool. A library of 12,000 volumes and numerous magazines and papers for lovers of literature. The Lyceum offers many lectures, musicales, plays, etc., during the cooler months. Weekly moving picture shows attract many residents.

The Home farm produces much of the foodstuff used at the Home. There are 80 milch cows, 53 dry cows and heifers and 27 calves; 5 horses; 11 sows, 27 shoats, and 79 young pigs; 1,000 chickens and 2,600 baby chicks on the Home farm.

The entire milk supply of the Home is produced and prepared in the same manner as that which dairies call "special," and charge about 25 per cent extra for. There is an abundant supply and no resident is limited as to the amount he may have.

The dairy produced 104,257 gallons of milk the past year, of which 62,680 gallons were fed to the hogs as skim milk. The dairy furnished 9,877 pounds of butter for Home use.

The total cost of farm maintenance was $3,011.19.

The Home has been fortunate in securing the services of Dr. Charles O. Giese, one of the foremost doctors of the United States, as medical director. He is in charge of a very competent staff of resident physicians and nurses who provide the Home residents with the best of medical care.

AMERICAN FEDERATION UNIONS FOSTER INDUSTRIAL RECOVERY AND OFFER LABOR'S ONLY HOPE

Labor Day Message of Secretary Morrison Recalls Opportunity Given Workers by National Recovery Act—Widespread Interest Aroused Among Unorganized.

Written for the Labor Day Edition of The Labor World
By FRANK MORRISON
Secretary American Federation of Labor

The national industrial recovery act, recognizing the right of workers to join a union of their own choosing, has aroused widespread interest among unorganized workers to establish membership in the federation.

In no other type of labor organization has the worker greater freedom to deal with questions relating to conditions of labor of immediate concern to himself than is afforded in the trade union. Trade unions organize within their ranks, workers following the same trade or occupation. In these unions, workers have full opportunity for self-expression in dealing directly with questions which affect the immediate character of work in which they are engaged. The practices and policies of the trade union movement are based on the principle of trade autonomy; in other words, the recognition of the right of workers in the same trade to decide for themselves questions affecting conditions of labor in their own particular line of work. These workers have the right of extending control over their trade or occupation throughout the country through the functioning of a national organization. This type of organization is a natural development out of the demand of the workers for the operation of methods which satisfy their needs and meet with their general approval. The members of trade unions are free to chart their course in whatever way appeals to them as promoting their best interests so long as there may be no encroachment upon the equal rights of other trades. They may join with members of other trades to act unitedly in a given situation, or they may amalgamate with other organizations as the wisdom of these acts may suggest.

Canada Continues Back-to-Land Movement for Jobless Workers

Montreal, Can.—The Quebec government announced that it will continue its back-to-the-land movement for the unemployed, started last year. It will be aided by the federal government and the Quebec municipalities.

The promoters of the scheme hope that the idle workers who have been refused employment by those who own and control industry will be able to eke out a precarious existence as amateur farmers.

The provincial government plans to establish at least 250 jobless families on farmettes in rural districts of the province. They will be recruited from cities where the three-party arrangement is in force. Under the scheme the provincial government will give each colonist a grant of $600, of which $500 will be paid the first year of settlement on the land and the balance the second year. About 10 acres will be rented to each of the settlers.

WHAT John Smith thinks about the extravagance of national, state or city government matters little to those in charge of disbursements. What 100,000 John Smiths think, as reflected by the newspaper representing this group, is important and demands attention.

Are school busses safe? Are health safeguards lagging? Are traffic rules placed for public protection? Are taxes too high? Is there corruption in high places? John Smith wants to know—and John Smith, reinforced by the sentiments of a goodly supply of his neighbors look to this newspaper to present the case.

Think back over the past few months—or years—and consider the multiple abuses that have been brought to the attention of proper authorities through the medium of The Chattanooga News. Unlicensed mid-wives—fire hazards in a hospital—over-spending of city and county funds—under-paid teachers—the uncovering of unethical and illegal practices in textile mills—these and hundreds more—all because John Smith and his neighbors DEPEND upon The News to see that the people of this community get a square deal in life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

You expect a modern newspaper to bring you the news of the world, nation, state and city. The News does this, quickly and accurately. You expect the latest news of sports, the most entertaining and instructive features for women and children in stories, comics and special articles. The News brings them to you. But the thing that has tied this newspaper inseparably into the lives of its readers—and made it a great newspaper—is the simple fact that it has stood out courageously and fearlessly for the things that make for better living for you and your neighbors—and that make this community a better and finer place in which to live.

Written for the Labor Day Edition of The Labor World
By JOHN H. CRUMP
Member Chattanooga Typographical Union, No. 89

This article, together with an article about the Union Printers Home on another page by Mr. Crump, is presented to readers of the Labor World to show how members of the International Typographical Union have progressed and taken care of their fellow members despite the period of economic stress it is hoped we are now emerging from. The fiscal year of the I. T. U. dates from June 20 to June 20, and in the following article any reference to "past year" means the period from June 20, 1932 to June 20, 1933.

...rough a referendum vote a spe... one per cent assessment was placed on the membership on March 1, 1933, for the maintenance of a defense fund. This assessment put $233,-158.47 into the fund, of which $122,-271.06 was paid out in strike and lockout benefits, special assistance and other necessary expenses for the protection of the union.

From June 20, 1932, until the creation of the defense fund $232,322.71 was spent from the general fund in this work, making a total of $354,-593.77 spent for defensive purposes during the year.

Since 1891 defensive and organization work has cost the international $23,558,346.19, every cent of which came from the dues paid by the members.

The annual convention, which was scheduled to be held in Chicago this year, was postponed by a referendum vote of the union, and will be held in that city next year. It was felt that the expense of a convention was unnecessary in such a depressing time as the present.

During the year dues paid into the various funds amounted to $2,402,-746.76, while benefits drawn from the international were $2,841,881.24, or about $439,000 more than dues paid in.

There are 766 local typographical unions with a total membership of 74,492 journeymen and 3,544 apprentices.

During the year $1,041,278.52 was paid into the pension fund, and $1,-688,248 was paid out in pensions. This made a deficit of $647,000 for the year, and because of this deficit the executive council submitted three propositions to a referendum vote recently calling for drastic changes in the pension laws. The results of this election have not been announced, but it is probable that still another referendum election will have to be held before the pension fund is properly taken care of.

During the twenty-five years existence of the pension fund $17,553,-949.67 has been paid into it by the membership, which, together with interest, bequests and registration fees, brought the fund up to $18,716,101.33. From this fund $16,629,875 has been paid to pensioners during the twenty-five years.

In 1909 there were 542 pensioners on the roll. Now there are 4,431, of which 147 are women. The average age of members placed on the pension roll during the year is 65.36 years.

There are ten members who have been drawing the pension for twenty-five years. Seventeen have been on the roll twenty years; twenty-eight have been on it fifteen years; 133 ten years, and 312 five years. The average time on the roll of each pensioner since the inception of the fund is 8.2 years.

The average dues per member per month paid into the pension fund was $1.04 during the year. The average monthly dues per member paid into the mortuary fund was 35c.

During the past year the receipts of the mortuary fund totaled $425,-632.86, including interest.

There were 1,065 death claims paid, amounting to $482,135.27. The average continuous membership of the 1,-065 members who died during the year was 30.02 years.

During twenty-one years of mortuary fund experience $10,999,218.44 has been paid into the fund, from which $7,793,644.11 has been paid in death benefits.

The average age at death of union printers has increased from 41 in 1892 to 60.77 years now, due to the steady fight of the I. T. U. to better working conditions and shorten hours. This figure is a slight decrease from last year's figure of 61.10. Probably an unusual number of out-of-work printers starved to death during the past year.

The Home fund's portion of the per capita tax collected during the past year amounted to $372,595.20. There has been a total of $6,289,752.02 paid into the Home fund since 1891.

The average number of residents per month at the Home during the past year was 315.

During the past year construction and building repairs at the Home cost $168,934.86, which, with net maintenance cost of $255,616.39, made gross expenditures at the Home of $428,-959.96.

The average monthly cost per resident has decreased from $94.85 in 1926 to $68.62 this year. While this figure may seem high to the uninformed, it should be considered that this includes the best of medical services and supplies, clothing, dental and tonsorial services, nurses and attendants.

Subscription and advertising receipts to the Typographical Journal for the year amounted to $50,747.54, while the cost of publishing the Journal was $53,973.54. The total circulation of the Journal for the twelve issues was 837,000 copies, making the cost per copy 6.44 cents, or 1.44 cents in excess of the subscription price.

The cost per copy of the Journal has decreased from 10.26 cents in 1928 to the present cost of 6.44 cents.

The I. T. U. maintains a statistical department which furnishes valuable data to local unions for use in negotiating contracts. The expenses of this department during the year were $3,996.90.

The cost of maintaining the bureau of education during the year was $18,614.65. Lesson subscriptions amounted to $20,189.52. For the past five years the bureau's receipts have been larger than expenditures.

Eight thousand two hundred and sixty diplomas have been issued by the bureau of education. There were 41,163 lessons graded during the past year. A series of lessons on unionism is being prepared.

Total earnings of union printers during the past year were $123,053,-546, or an average per member of $1,661.49. These figures are based on the receipts of the pension and mortuary funds.

The average full-time weekly wage rate on Dec. 1, 1932, was $48.66, while the average actual earnings per member were $33.36 per week, or 68.55 per cent of full-time earnings. This indicates that members of the I. T. U. were 31.45 per cent unemployed during the year.

In 1928 the full-time rate was $49.31, and actual earnings were $46.23 per week, or 93.76 per cent of full-time. If 1928 be accepted as a normal year, then in normal times the membership of the I. T. U. is 6 per cent unemployed. Considering 1928 as normal, then employment among the membership of the I. T. U. the past year was nearly 27 per cent below normal.

There were 130,183 pieces of mail sent from the office of the secretary-treasurer during the past year. Mail from the president's office totaled 148,201 pieces. This is exclusive of mail sent out from other departments at headquarters.

Maintenance of headquarters property, Typographical Terrace, at Twenty-eighth and Meridian, Indianapolis, cost $10,316.44 for the past year, or $859.70 per month. No taxes are paid on headquarters property, as the supreme court of Indiana has ruled it exempt from taxation.

HISTORY OF LABOR DAY GIVES DRAMATIC BACKGROUND TO HALF-CENTURY OF STRUGGLE

Monday Marks Fifty-second Anniversary of First Local Celebration—National Government Passed Bill Declaring Day Legal Holiday in 1894.

Labor Day, 1933, is the fortieth annual celebration of Labor Day as a legal holiday, and the fifty-second anniversary of the first local Labor Day celebration.

P. J. McGuire, the founder of the Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners and for many years a member of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, originated the Labor Day idea.

At a meeting of the New York City Central Labor union held on May 8, 1882, McGuire stressed the propriety of setting aside one day in the year as a general holiday for the working people. He suggested that it be called Labor Day.

The Central Labor union adopted this idea and organized a Labor Day parade and festival on the first Monday in September, 1882.

The 1884 convention of the American Federation of Labor indorsed the proposal for a national Labor Day holiday by unanimously adopting the following resolution introduced by A. C. Cameron, a delegate from the Chicago Trades and Labor Alliance:

"Resolved, That the first Monday in September of each year be set apart as a laborers' national holiday, and that we recommend its observance by all wage workers, irrespective of sex, calling, or nationality."

Organized labor carried on its demand for Labor Day so effectively that soon many municipal councils and state legislatures made it a legal holiday.

Oregon was the first state to make Labor Day a state holiday; the Oregon Labor Day law was signed by the governor on Feb. 21, 1887. During 1887 the legislatures of Colorado, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York also made Labor Day a state holiday. In 1889, Connecticut, Nebraska and Pennsylvania enacted Labor Day laws; in 1890, Iowa and Ohio; in 1891, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kansas, Maine, Montana, New Hampshire, South Carolina, Tennessee and Washington; in 1892, Alabama, Louisiana, Utah and Virginia; in 1893, California, Delaware, Florida, Minnesota, Rhode Island, Texas and Wisconsin.

In the meantime the officials of the American Federation of Labor endeavored to have the congress of the United States make Labor Day a national holiday.

Shortly after the Fifty-third congress convened in 1893, Senator James H. Kyle, of South Dakota; Representative Amos J. Cummings, of New York, and Representative Robert E. De Forest, of Connecticut, introduced bills making Labor Day a legal holiday.

The Cummings bill was reported favorably by the house committee on labor, of which Lawrence E. McGann, of Illinois, was chairman. The committee did not report the De Forest bill.

The Kyle bill was reported favorably by the senate committee on education and labor, of which Senator Kyle was chairman. Following is the text of the Kyle bill:

"A Bill Making Labor Day a Legal Holiday.—Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the United States of America in congress assembled, That the first Monday in September in each year, being the day celebrated and known as labor's holiday, is hereby made a legal public holiday, in the same manner as Christmas, the 1st day of January, the 22d day of February, the 30th day of May and the 4th day of July are now by law public holidays."

The senate passed the Kyle bill on June 24, 1894, the house passed it on June 26, in place of the Cummings bill, and President Cleveland signed it on June 28.

In his annual report to the 1894 convention of the American Federation of Labor, Samuel Gompers, president of the federation, announced labor's victory with the following brief statement:

"National Labor Day—It affords me pleasure to be able to report that the demand made by the American Federation of Labor for making the first Monday in September of each year a legal holiday passed congress and was made a law on June 28, 1894."

All hail to Labor Day, 1933!

MARRIAGE SUBSIDY PLAN FOR UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF

Berlin, Germany.—The Nazi government includes a scheme for subsidizing marriages in the unemployment relief law. It is designed to remove working girls and women from the status of employes to that of wives and mothers.

The law provides for a marriage loan without interest up to 1,000 marks if the marriage license has already been obtained and if the bride-elect has been employed at least six months of the last twelve and undertakes not to go to work again unless the husband earns less than 125 marks a month.

The loan will not be made in cash, but in coupons for the purchase of furniture or household equipment, which the merchant can cash at the tax office. The funds for the loans will be provided by a marriage-aid tax to be paid by bachelors and spinsters in place of the additional income tax hitherto paid by single persons. The government expects to finance around 150,000 marriages within the next year.

The loan is redeemable at the rate of 1 per cent a month.

ORGANIZATION ORDER OF DAY; GREEN APPEALS TO ALL LABOR TO UNITE FOR PROTECTION

President American Federation Calls Upon Every Group of Workers to Take Advantage of Present Opportunity to Prevent Continued Exploitation of America's Toilers.

Written for the Labor Day Edition of The Labor World
By WILLIAM GREEN
President American Federation of Labor

Labor Day 1933 finds our nation utilizing its resources to carry out recovery plans. Business men had declared themselves unable to deal with the situation and banks were unable to perform their functions. Then the administration proposed a partnership under governmental supervision so that organized business and organized labor might join in developing rules to facilitate balanced recovery. The principle of partnership—joint interest—is the ground work for our recovery agencies. The practical effectiveness of all these plans depends upon the good-will and wisdom of those concerned and upon the degree of co-operation that develops.

We have in the traditions and practices of our nation the characteristics that come from the discipline of self-government. The difficulties of combating and living in an undeveloped continent, have made individual responsibility and co-operative habits of daily practice. These are qualities which we should apply to the present undertaking and incorporate in industrial relationships. As a nation we have declared it is the patriotic duty of every American citizen, as employer or employe, to assume responsibility for making recovery plans successful and for identifying himself with his group and for carrying out the same principles as a consumer. The new elements in our present undertaking are partnership with government and machinery to control business so that we may carry out our purposes. The business world has become so complicated and interdependent that unless we plan our policies and organize machinery to carry them out, we are so checked and diverted by outside forces that we make little headway.

Under the recovery act, organization is the order of the day—organization of employers in trade associations, workers in trade unions, and channels to reflect the interests and needs of consumers. Without the co-operation of labor, the national recovery administration would be fatally handicapped. The work experience and the needs of those who carry on production processes are essential in order to formulate the rules of the industry wisely. In order to organize this information for use, workers must be organized so as to collect and collate facts and judgments.

The recovery act provides that every code must contain specific provisions assuring employes the right to organize in unions with representatives of their own choosing and to conduct their affairs without interference from employers. When such codes have been signed and approved then the law stipulates that employers must deal with representatives of their employes—chosen without coercion or interference of any kind on the part of the employer. Never did the union have a more vital or more constructive function than it does in our national emergency. It is essential to the formulation of codes and to their administration so as to carry out the purposes of the recovery program.

Workers organized in unions will have a part in formulating a program to provide jobs for the unemployed and to increase consumer buying power. Workers outside of unions will be unable to participate and by their failure to participate will lessen the influence of the organized group. Wage-earners need organization to help in the administration of the code for the industry, in working out problems and in suggesting improvements. It is to the workers the government must look to know whether employers are living up to their contracts.

Labor Day 1933 finds the labor movement with new opportunities, busily trying to meet new obligations. The line of organizing activities reaches from coast to coast, and from northern to southern boundaries. After four years of depression and steady retrogression, wage-earners now know that only through organization can they provide the kind of economic security that will prevent a recurrence of the present breakdown. We cannot return to the business practices of 1929, and if we would have better balance in our institutions, we must be able to direct their development.

Our greatest responsibility in the immediate future is to carry the message of unionism to all who work and to do our part to prevent exploitation by helping to organize business in the service of all.

Citrine Makes Stirring Appeal For Labor Unity

Praising Recovery Program of United States, I. F. T. U. Head Urges Affiliation of American Trade Unions.

"The workers' cause is one and indivisible"—this was the keynote of the presidential address delivered by Walter M. Citrine, at the opening session of the sixth triennial Congress of the International Federation of Trades Unions at Antwerp.

The whole international organization of the workers, Citrine said, has been gravely weakened by the suppression of the German trade unions. "Responsibility lies upon us in this congress to take what measures we can to repair this loss by strengthening and consolidating our forces. We must make strenuous efforts to bring in to our federation the non-affiliated trade union movements in other countries. I appeal particularly to the trade unionists of the United States. They, too, inherit the great tradition of freedom and democracy which is ours. We want their help. Their support by affiliation to our federation would be a powerful reinforcement of the principles for which we stand."

They must bring home to the people in all the countries represented that fascism, if it is not checked, will bring about war, he said.

The workers must present a united front to the enemy, Citrine declared, but it must be based upon the principles of democracy and freedom.

"We cannot ally ourselves with those who deny these principles," he said. "We remain ruthlessly opposed to dictatorship whether of the right or the left. The price of liberty is eternal vigilance. Let us take warning from the fate that has overtaken the German workers."

Citrine recalled that two years ago the organizations represented in the International Federation of Trade Unions had appealed to governments of the world to shorten hours and increase purchasing power. Only one country—the United States—had been bold enough to apply the shorter hours, higher wages policy with the vigor and energy with which it must be applied, he said.

As a trade unionist, Citrine added, he had been impressed with the courage and wisdom displayed by President Roosevelt in developing the policy of his administration on these lines. He said he regarded it significant and hopeful that Mr. Roosevelt had brought the representatives of the American trade unions into consultation and administrative co-operation in pursuit of the ends he had in view.

Unhappily it cannot be said, Citrine continued, that the governments of Europe had accepted the doctrine that reduction of working hours is a contributory factor in the solution of these problems. Upon the other aspect of their policy—namely, the increase of consumers' purchasing power by the raising of wages, very little progress has been made.

FIGURES REVEAL PRISON GOODS BIG DANGER TO FREE WORKERS

Washington, Aug. 30.—The realities of the unfair competition of prison made goods with the products of free industry and free labor were brought forcibly to the attention of the national industrial recovery administration and to the country when tabulations prepared for the garment industry code hearing from statistics obtained by the bureau of labor statistics of the department of labor were submitted to Chairman Rogers by Ralph Hunter, the spokesman for the industry.

An increase of 87 per cent in prison population; an estimated value of products by 82,276 prisoners of $75,000,000; an estimated value of prison products sold on the open market in unfair competition with free industry of $28,894,629.90 (not including products made in county jails), are among the facts brought out.

Most serious of all is the competition in actual volume in the operations in which prison contractors have concentrated their activities, as in the case of work shirts and work trousers. These items are of particular interest to the manufacturers appearing before the garment code hearing. President Thomas A. Rickert, of the United Garment Workers of America, and John J. Manning, secretary of the Union Label Trades Department of the A. F. of L., presented the inequities of prison labor competition at the hearing.

Business Men Refuse to Help Check Up on Price Increases

Milwaukee, Wis. — The executive committee of women appointed by Mayor D. W. Hoan to make a check on prices of food and other necessities of life to prevent possible profiteering reported they had not received any co-operation from either the local NRA committee or the Association of Commerce.

Members of the committee said they had sought interviews with both groups but had not been able to obtain a satisfactory answer as to how they could work jointly. The committee was appointed by Mayor Hoan at the request of the United States department of agriculture, which urged the establishment of such women's groups in all cities to make a check on rising commodity prices.

Pen Used by Cleveland to Sign National Labor Day Law Still Kept by A. F. of L.

When the bill making Labor Day a national holiday passed congress in 1894, Amos J. Cummings was a member of the house of representatives from New York City. He had introduced a bill himself with this object in view, but it was supplanted by a bill which passed the senate before the house reached the cummings bill After it was signed by President Cleveland, Representative Cummings wrote the following letter to Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor:

"Washington, D. C., June 29, 1894.

"Samuel Gompers, Esq., 14 Clinton Place, New York City.

"Dear Mr. Gompers—Yesterday I took the bill making Labor Day a national holiday, which had been passed by both houses of congress, down to the president and he signed it. Thinking that you would like to have a memento of the passage of a law elevating labor which will probably remain on the statute books as long as the republic lasts, I send you the pen and holder which the president used in signing the bill.

"Yours sincerely,

"AMOS J. CUMMINGS."

President Gompers sent the following reply:

"New York, July 3, 1894.

"Hon. Amos J. Cummings, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

"Dear Sir and Friend: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your favor of the 29th, informing me that you took the bill making Labor Day a national holiday to the president, that he signed it, and that you sent me the pen and penholder which the president used in signing the bill.

"I also received the pen and holder, and assure you that I esteem it, not only as a valuable souvenir in connection with the passage of the law, but also as a high compliment expressive of your attitude towards the great movement for the elevation of labor . . .

"Very truly yours,

"SAMUEL GOMPERS, President, American Federation of Labor."

The pen and holder used by President Cleveland in signing the bill making Labor Day a national holiday is preserved in the archives of the American Federation of Labor as a lasting reminder of one of the most important achievements of the American labor movement.

Postal Clerks Demand End to "Starvation" Pay

Locals and State Federations Ask Restoration of Wage Cuts and Establishment of Five-Day Week.

Washington, Aug. 30.—Resolutions to be presented to the National Federation of Postal Clerks' convention, in Chicago, beginning Sept. 4, demand restoration of wage cuts and establishment of the 30-hour week. The resolutions charge that it is unfair for the government to seek to shorten hours and raise wages in private employment while denying these benefits to federal workers.

Locals in Washington, D. C., Virginia and other places are demanding restoration of the 15 per cent pay cut and the establishment of the five-day week. Other locals and state federations are demanding a 30-hour week, the Indiana federation declaring "it is plainly apparent there are some substitutes at the point of starvation."

Local No. 10, of New York City, asserts "Federal employes in large numbers, particularly substitute postoffice clerks and substitute letter carriers, whose earnings are as low as $8 a week and who are deprived accordingly of the actual necessities of life, now are reduced to a starvation basis."

Leo E. George, president, declares: "The business depression reached its lowest depth during this two-year period, and the tide of hysteria that engulfed workers of every kind in wage reductions, unemployment and the loss of hard-earned privileges became insurmountable and took its toll from postal and other government employes.

"It now appears the turning point has been reached, and the federation will be in the van of those fighting for not merely the ground that has been lost but also for the continued improvements to which postoffice clerks are entitled."

RELIEF MONEY FOR SCHOOLS TO PROVIDE EMPLOYMENT FOR 80,000 IDLE TEACHERS

Washington, Aug. 30.—Relief for some of the 80,000 unemployed teachers and education for a portion of the million children of school age who have been thrown upon the streets through the closing of schools, especially in rural sections, was promised by Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator, after a visit to the White House.

Mr. Hopkins said he had wired governors and state relief administrators authorizing the use of federal relief funds to pay wages to teachers who may be assigned by school officials to rural schools which have been closed or where the terms have been shortened because of lack of regular public funds.

The expenditures from the federal fund will be confined to the minimum needs of the teachers, and no relief money will be allowed for fuel, textbooks or other school expenses.

"I consider this kind of work relief one of the most constructive applications of the principle of exchanging service to the community for public aid," Mr. Hopkins said. "The need for relief to teachers is clearly apparent. Thirty-three states have reported through their education officials that approximately 80,000 teachers are unemployed. Some fifteen states have definitely reported shortened school terms, and in some districts this has meant curtailing them to the vanishing point.

No Subsidy.

"While it is most emphatically not the intention of the federal emergency relief administration to subsidize the school system in any community or to relieve school officials of their responsibility, I believe that the expenditure of work-relief funds in the interests of destitute teachers will result indirectly in great community good.

Closed Schools Injure Children.

"In many rural communities the complete closing of schools virtually means the disintegration of community life for children. No one will ever be able to make up the loss to the children who are deprived of education, for the plastic state of childhood mind comes but once.

"Where schools are closed or terms are reduced to a month or two a year, despite increased enrollment, we have a great paradox. It is the expectation of the federal emergency relief administration that this paradox can be righted, in some part, by permitting the teachers to give their services on the basis of their relief needs."

MORE ABOUT LANE CONCERN

room for your Chattanooga branch store.

You state the opinion that we have been misinformed as to the correct status of the matter, but from statements contained in your letter we are constrained to believe that you have been given an incorrect impression of the situation.

To begin with, it is our information that your company was wired some time in June requesting your influence in assuring that members of organized labor would be employed in the remodeling work on your store-room here. The reply was that your concern had nothing to do with this work, and if any steps were taken toward co-operating with our unions it has never become apparent. In fact, your Mr. Earnest, asked why he had made no effort to contact our representatives when he came into this city after they had wired you, replied that he "did not think it was necessary." Further, it is our information that an official of your concern admitted that the Lane company paid $575 on the cost of installation of the store front, which was done by non-union, cheap labor.

Your offer of a possible few days' work to members of organized labor after the bulk of the job had been finished was not regarded by our organizations as compensating for the apparent lack of interest shown by your company up to that time.

You complain of our reference to your failure to employ local citizens in the operation of your store here. Our reference to this was based on a paragraph in a display advertisement in the Chattanooga Times, issue of Aug. 25, which was as follows:

"Proud? Sure we're proud . . . of a good-looking, shiny new store, complete fresh stock, WELL-TRAINED SALES FORCE, WHO ARE HAPPY TO BE IN CHATTANOOGA, PROUD TO BECOME PART OF THIS PROGRESSIVELY ALIVE CITY . . ." The "caps" are ours.

Furthermore, it is our recollection that your Mr. Earnest, in a conference in this office, complaining at the poor service rendered by the contractor on your local job, declared your opening was being held up and stated four or five people were here now waiting to go to work. Asked if these people were from Atlanta, he replied in the affirmative.

Your reference to the intimate knowledge of your affairs possessed by the Chattanooga Times is noted. When a representative of that paper suggested a conference, our officials readily agreed, and met your Mr. Earnest, Mr. Poss and a Mr. Bowers, who recently came into Chattanooga from another state to take charge of Times advertising. If our officers failed to convince these gentlemen that our position is sound, we, of course, regret the fact. We are glad at all times to have our friends display an interest in our problems, but we must insist on being the final judge of whether or not we have been treated fairly.

Your suggestion, "it is our thought that you endeavor to be absolutely fair at all times," is appreciated, and we assure you is correct. However, this paper agrees with local union officers that your company did not display an interest in the matter of your store building which would indicate a desire to co-operate with organized labor.

In view of the fact that you furnished the Chattanooga Times with a copy of your letter, we are also mailing this reply to them, and we are quite sure that in their desire to see justice done in this case they will gladly publish this also.

Trusting that this will convey to you a more clear idea of our position, and again assuring you your estimate of our desire to be fair at all times is entirely justified,

Yours very truly,
THE LABOR WORLD,
R. M. COOKE,
Editor.

Howard Will Make Labor Day Talk at Des Moines

Indianapolis, Ind.—Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical union, will deliver the Labor Day address at Des Moines, Iowa, under the auspices of the Central Labor union.

Minimum Rates Of Pay Set For Public Projects

Wages for Skilled and Unskilled Workers Graded According to Southern, Central and Northern Zones.

Washington, Aug. 24.—Under an agreement signed by representatives of the American Federation of Labor, minimum wage rates to be paid on construction work financed by the Public Works administration have been established and a Board of Labor Review established to handle controversial points arising under contracts for the work.

The minimum wage rates were approved by the Public Works board and are to be effective for a period not to exceed 12 months. They will differ according to three zones—southern, central and northern—into which the country is divided.

"In determining these rates," Secretary of the Interior Ickes said after approving the schedule, "I have given heed to the mandate of congress that wage rates shall be sufficient to provide for the hours of labor as limited, a standard of living in decency and comfort."

Three Zones Established.

The resolution adopted by the special board of public works said in part:

"Be it resolved, that, for the purpose of determining wage rates on all construction financed from funds appropriated by the administrator of public works under the authority of the national industrial recovery act, the United States shall be divided into three zones as follows:

"Southern zone: South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Arkansas, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arizona, Oklahoma, Texas, and New Mexico.

Hourly Rates Specified.

"The hourly wage rates to be paid on construction projects in these zones shall not be less than the following:

"Southern zone: Skilled labor, $1; unskilled labor, 40 cents.

"Central zone: Skilled labor, $1.10; unskilled labor, 45 cents.

Northern zone: Skilled labor, $1.20; unskilled labor, 50 cents."

The resolution further provided that in the event that union wage rates are above the minimum rate set for any district within a zone, that rate shall be paid on any projects of the Public Works administration.

15,000 Miners End Strike Pending Hearing on Code

Coaldale, Pa.—More than 15,000 striking miners here agreed to return to work, pending hearings on a code for the anthracite coal industry.

The agreement was reached at a mass meeting addressed by Howard Colvin, special representative of the national recovery administration, who promised the miners a hearing on the code when it is under consideration at Washington. The miners asked for a distribution of work, saying that some mines are operated steadily, while others furnish almost no employment.

MORE ABOUT FIVE-DAY WEEK

Occasionally reference is made to the fact that Chattanooga newspaper printers are working under a contract calling for a scale of $39 for day work and $42 for night work for a six-day week of forty-five hours. Such statement, while true, is misleading when not accompanied with mention of the voluntary five-day week. Actually, Chattanooga newspaper printers (those regularly employed) are working five days a week, thirty-seven and one-half hours, for which they receive $32.50 for day work and $35 for night work. Three years ago the scale was $44.50 and and $47.50, which, with overtime worked, made the average wage $48 to $52 a week. Even were such scale in effect now, with the five-day week, the average wage would not be more than $40 a week.

Chattanooga Typographical union No. 89, with its 122 members, can proudly point to its record of relief work during the depression, despite cuts in wages, and truthfully state that it has led the way among local organized workers in caring for its members. No other local union, many with a larger membership, has done near as much.

MORE ABOUT ORGANIZATION

"Realsilk Hosiery Mills, notorious for its 'yellow dog' contracts and non-union policies, with a mill in Dalton, is powerless to prevent employes from joining the Full-Fashioned Hosiery union now being formed there, although a company union was 'offered' them, but which somehow or other got lost between the office and the plant.

"A substantial local of textile workers of the Aycock Hosiery Mill in South Pittsburg, Tenn., was installed last Saturday, and this local will very soon be the third 100 per cent organized craft in that city. The other two are the molders and stove mounters."

Helped By Cardui

"I was sick and rather discouraged. I was so weak and thin, I was not able to do my work as it should be done. This made me fret a good deal, and did not help my condition.

"I had pains across my back and lower part of my body. My nights were spent in rolling from one side of the bed to the other, hoping I would soon go to sleep. Then when morning would come, I would be just as tired as when I went to bed. A neighbor, seeing how badly I felt, told me to try Cardui. After I had taken one bottle, I was much better. I kept on taking Cardui, and I was stronger and slept much better at night."

STREET PARADE IS GREAT SUCCESS

Quillers and Plasterers Win Recognition for Entry of Beautiful Float

A crowd estimated at from 10,000 to 12,000 people thronged Warner park Monday to mark the end of a perfect day following the greatest demonstration in the city's history which came in the form of a street parade miles long, arranged through co-operation of local N. R. A. officials and organized labor.

The parade, which was several miles long, was staged without the slightest hitch, and General Chairman Peglar and his assistants were the recipients of many congratulations on the success of the event.

Nearly two hundred floats were entered, including approximately twenty representing Central Body and various local unions. The Times float was awarded first prize.

Following the downtown procession, witnessed by some 50,000 people, the crowds began to drift toward the park, and a splendid program arranged by the Labor Day committee, under direction of President A. C. Hamin, was enjoyed by old and young until a late hour.

A polo game, band concerts, soft ball, baseball, athletic events and the various park concessions were well patronized throughout the day. The field events were in charge of Director Henry Sims, of the Industrial Y, and F. J. Burroughs, physical director.

Angel of Death Claims W. L. Moss

WILLIAM L. MOSS

The Angel of Death last Sunday claimed William L. Moss, 38, climaxing a long illness in a Nashville hospital.

Mr. Moss was formerly a well-known member of Chattanooga Typographical union, having learned his trade in the Times composing room. He early evinced a keen interest in labor affairs, and an unusually intelligent grasp of trade union philosophy was expressed in many contributions to the columns of The Labor World. Transferring his field of activities several years ago to Nashville, Mr. Moss continued to contribute to this paper until his health began to fail. An outstanding contribution was a series of historical sketches covering the formation and early days of the American labor movement. He was also interested in religious work, having received a clerical education at St. Andrew's Episcopal training school at Monteagle. He had been employed on the Nashville Tennessean for the past seven years, and for five years had conducted regular services at an Episcopal mission in East Nashville. Many Labor World readers will remember a series of articles on the life and teachings of Jesus, which Mr. Moss wrote for The Labor World a few years ago. He was chaplain of Nashville Typographical union, No. 20.

Many Chattanooga and Nashville friends attended the funeral services, which were held at Monteagle last Tuesday, with Dr. E. P. Dandridge and the Rev. J. Francis McCloud in charge.

Mr. Moss is survived by his wife and daughter, Mary Frances, of Monteagle, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Moss, of Chattanooga.

The Labor World and its editor mourn the loss of a loyal, sincere friend in the passing of "Willie" Moss, and his associates are deprived of the fellowship and counsel of a high-type Christian gentleman and a scholar.

HOW MANY OF THESE CAN YOU NAME?

Here's a relic of the old days, furnished the Times by G. W. Lucas, and relayed to The Labor World by that paper. The picture was taken on Labor Day, 1892, and represents the Machinists' delegation in the parade on that day.

Mr. Lucas and Tom Hall told the Times they recognized the following: Themselves (of course), Sam Shattuck, Hugh Morgan, John Gribben, Tom Duckett, Blake Shattuck, Homer Gladish, Hal Johnson, John Lucas, J. U. Jones, Isaac Barkla, William Millsaps, John Quintel, Louis Knighton, Hugh Mulligan, Eugene Smith, James Bell, George Bailey, Wallace Cry, George Morgan, A. B. Johnson, Will Bailey, E. A. Fuller, W. G. Jones and J. C. Rogers.

Many of those named are still active in the local movement. How many can you name?

Forbes Solicits Co-Operation of Church With Labor

Local Unionist Occupies Pulpit on Invitation of Rev. Mr. Gabbard.

"So long as there are hungry people in the coal fields, and people in the corn belt are burning corn for fuel, while the railroads are rusting in idleness, wages are not high enough. Until every man who is willing to work has secured a job, the hours of labor are too long."

Above was the conclusion expressed by George Forbes, addressing a large congregation at the Northside Presbyterian church, composed in large part of members of organized labor, invited Dr. E. E. Gabbard, the pastor, for a special Labor Sunday service.

Dr. Gabbard, who delivered a splendid sermon on "The Church and Labor," gave cordial welcome to the workers present, announcing the nature of the service as follows:

"The Central Trades and Labor union joins with us in the service this morning. We extend to them and to all other visitors a most cordial welcome. This is our Father's house. We are fellow members of His family. No Christian is a stranger here. Speak to a comrade; feel at home; lay off burdens; relax nerves; breathe prayerfully and listen expectantly."

Mr. Forbes, who spoke by special invitattion of Dr. Gabbard, urged closer co-operation between the church and labor. He praised the national recovery act as the greatest piece of humane legislation ever passed by human effort, and called upon his hearers for unity in making our country a nation of happy, contented people. He said:

"The American people have entered a new era. We are developing a new conception of our responsibilities and relations with our fellowman. We have discovered that the old system of cut-throat competition of dog eat dog must be replaced with a spirit of brotherly love and fair dealing man to man. It has long been the motto of organized labor "an injury to one is the concern of all." We have tried to improve the conditions under which humanity, especially the working classes of humanity, must live. One of the church's cardinal principles and the greatest command in the Bible is the Golden Rule. Labor's concern was from an economic or industrial standpoint, while the church took a more spiritual attitude. Most people were inclined to view the Golden Rule more as a code of morals for Sunday use only, and as an utter impossibility in the every day trading and trafficking in our modern days of ruthless, wasteful and destructive competition. Our old system of rugged individualism has made ragged individuals of us all. It was an impossibility for organized labor to correct the present economic evils without the co-operation of all workers. As long as the employers who were willing to be fair with labor had to compete with employers who ran sweatshops, worked children, or men and women for starvation wages, it meant bankruptcy for a firm to pay high wages for short hours. It meant cut after cut to meet competition and wound up with four years of stagnation of business. As long as there are hungry people in the coal fields and the people in the corn belt are burning corn for fuel while the railroads are rusting in idleness, wages are not high enough. Until every man who is willing to work has secured a job, the hours of labor are too long. It was also impossible for the church to correct this evil for the industrial captains regardless of their church affiliations failed to observe the Golden Rule.

"The national recovery act is the greatest piece of humane legislation that has ever been passed by human effort and without Divine guidance it could never have been put in operation, and without human co-operation it will never be the success that it should be. It is the duty of the church to use its spiritual and moral influence; the duty of capital and labor to co-operate in making of this country a nation of happy, contented people, and the duty of us all to follow the teachings of Jesus Christ and practice brotherly love and fair dealing, make of this country a nation where we have in truth 'Peace on earth, Good will to Man.'"

"Sandy" Summers Band Instructor

Announcement was made this week that I. R. "Sandy" Summers has been named band instructor for the city schools, a position held for several years by Shelley Sands, who resigned recently. Mr. Summers is one of the best known musicians in Tennessee, and the city school patrons are fortunate in that his services are available for instruction of the youngsters in the art of "horn tooting," and whatever else it is that a band instructor is supposed to teach.

A friend of "Sandy's" resurrected this one, and rededicated it to the "old marster," suggesting it as a vocal exercise for his pupils: "A tutor who tooted a flute tried to tutor two tooters to toot. Said the two to the tutor, is it harder to toot or to tutor two tooters to toot." Selah!

He that falls in love with himself will find no rival.

Rogers Takes Rank Of 'Editor Emeritus'

T. A. ("KID") ROGERS

An announcement of interest to many local trades unionists comes this week from the editorial department of the Times, where T. A. Rogers has been advanced to the rank of "city editor emeritus," and is succeeded by Ed Sussdorf, one-time sporting editor of the morning paper, and who for some time has held a desk situation. Mr. Rogers, it is understood, will remain with the news department of the Times in a sort of advisory capacity.

Partial retirement, if such it may be called, of the "old-timer" marks a milestone in a newspaper career which has earned for him the respect of his employers and of Times readers, and the admiration of a host of friends.

"Kid" Rogers, a pioneer in the local labor movement and for many years active in Typographical union affairs, left the composing room of the morning paper several years ago, and immediately "made good" in his new department. His ability to scent a news story, and his aptitude in handling it after it is assembled, has made "Page 5" of the Times one of the best-edited local news pages in the country.

Mr. Sussdorf, who succeeds Mr. Rogers in the active conduct of the city desk, has had considerable newspaper experience, and The Labor World wishes and predicts for him a successful career.

Prospects Bright For U. C. Football

Annual season football ticket campaign of the University of Chattanooga gets under way next Tuesday morning, and will continue through Friday night.

Depression prices for season tickets is being offered by the university authorities this year. The ticket entitling the holder to all university games on Chamberlain field can be obtained for only $5.

Prospects for a good team at the university are better this year than they have been for the past three seasons. Coach Cecil (Scrappy) Moore has a dependable line and a flock of boys from which to pick a backfield. The training grind is already under way, with Coaches Pop Keyser, University and Baylor star, and Eubanks, who teamed with Scrappy at Georgia, in charge of the squad.

The ticket campaign will be given a peppy start with a dinner meeting Monday night at the University Commons.

Downtown headquarters are being maintained at the Chamber of Commerce, and anyone desiring to make reservations can obtain them by calling the office there, 6-2512.

LANE DRUG CO, HANDS BOUQUET TO LOCAL LABOR

President Naylor Calls Conduct "Dignified."

FAILS TO TAKE NOTE OF WORKERS' CLAIMS

Pickets Encouraged and Publicity Campaign Will Be Continued.

Controversy between local organized labor and the Lane Drug company, a chain concern with headquarters in Atlanta, which arose through the use of non-union labor in remodeling of a store building for the local branch recently opened at 714 Market street, was marked this week by receipt of a letter to The Labor World from President Naylor, who expressed appreciation for the "high-class way in which your publication handled this matter, as well as for the clean manner in which the gentlemen who were assigned as pickets conducted themselves."

Mr. Naylor, however, made no reference to a contention of local labor, called to his attention in a letter from this paper, that the Lane company had spent $575.00 on the store front, which went to non-union labor. Nor did he note The Labor World's justification for the statement that employes of the local branch were sent here from Atlanta, which was a quotation from a display ad of the company in the Chattanooga Times, as follows:

"Proud? Sure we're proud ... of a good-looking, shiny new store, complete fresh stock, well-trained sales force, who are happy to be in Chattanooga, proud to become a part of this progressively alive city."

Pickets patroling the vicinity of the local Lane store report a splendid reception from friends of organized labor, and a fine spirit of sympathy with the workers' position that the Lane company did not demonstrate a friendly interest in the efforts of local labor to have members of building trades unions employed on the remodeling of their Chattanooga branch.

Mr. Naylor's last letter, with the reply, mailed Friday, follows:

The Labor World,
Chattanooga, Tennessee.
Dear Sirs:

We appreciate your frank letter of Aug. 31 which was in reply to our communication of the 28th. We note that you published our letter with your reply in your edition of last Saturday.

We are grateful for the high class way in which your publication handled this matter as well as for the clean manner in which the gentlemen who were assigned as pickets conducted themselves. This is our first experience with labor union controversy and, to be quite frank with you, we were agreeably surprised at the dignified way in which labor has handled this controversy with us.

Very truly yours,
LANE DRUG STORES, INC.,
H. C. NAYLOR,
President.

Mr. H. C. Naylor, President,
Lane Drug Stores,
Atlanta, Georgia.
Dear Sir:

We have your very kind letter of Sept. 5, which we assure you is appreciated and is accepted 100 per cent in the spirit in which it is written. However, it is indeed unfortunate, we feel, that your estimate of local organized labor was not secured some time ago, as we confidently believe that had you known several months ago that we conduct all our business with the same effort to maintain a high plane, your representatives might have given more consideration to our appeals for co-operation in assuring that our members would be employed on your local store building.

A controversy is distasteful to us at any time, and particularly in view of the tone of your last letter it is a matter for sincere regret that the publicity campaign with respect to what we regard as your failure to co-operate with us must be continued.

Yours very truly,
THE LABOR WORLD,

A New Government

Perhaps the time will come when those who write learned pieces for the papers and for the highbrow magazines will discover that we have come upon a time when there not only are new rules in the game, but when there is a new spirit in our people.

At the moment all attention is centered upon the rules. Little thought, if any, is given, as we race down this new pathway, to the changing spirit of the people and to the fact that a new order is in the making.

We are beflooded with a stream of regulations—so many hours, so much wages, such and such practices, just as if Uncle Sam stood at a great crossroad handing out little guide books to industries.

Does it ever occur to us that all of these rules are to be enforced and amended and changed by ORGANIZATIONS of industry? Does it ever occur to us that new kinds of STATES are being created, forming a new kind of government?

And that's where we find the BIG change. It is in the change from one FORM to another. Unless this whole scheme crashes in some titanic disaster, we shall have, within a few months, a complete structure of GOVERNMENT in industry.

That is something to write down in the history books. It is one of the most profound changes in all history. It is BIG. No, it is TREMENDOUS.

Mark this: When congress gave us the authority for this new form it, at the same time, took political hands off, by wiping out the regulatory anti-trust laws for those industries that come in under the new form of government.

One government steps aside the moment a new one is created.

In the long run—and that is all history cares about—it will not be the rules about present wages and hours that will be counted as vital. It will be the complete change in the SEAT OF AUTHORITY.

Long ago labor said authority must go with power and with competence. Industrial civilization requires industrial government.

Perhaps it is very fortunate that the Wall Street powers cannot see very far ahead of their noses. For, as new power of self-rule comes into industry, labor will clamor and will get more and more of a share.

Surely not for long can all the voting power be kept in the hands of a part of the citizenship. And there must be either citizenship or subjects in every government. America demands citizenship—and WHY NOT?

Look ahead, wage earners. Look ahead and see down the road, to the goal that lies not far ahead.

The foundation for all that is happening today was laid in the councils of labor. Even the basic law of this new order is to be found written in the records of the labor movement. Labor, close to the heart of industry, bone and sinew of its growth, saw ahead and knew what must come.

Labor today can look ahead and see the course that must be run. It knows that at last the sun is rising for the toiling masses. It is a day of heroic achievement and a day of triumphant hope.

Martin's Brainstorm on Child Labor

Lawyers everywhere, from Chief Justice Hughes of the United States supreme court down to the humblest tyro lately graduated from law school, are bowed in shame or angered beyond expression by the tirade in opposition of child labor launched in his opening address to the American Bar Association convention by its president, Clarence E. Martin. At the federal child labor amendment, according to press reports, he shrieked:

> It is a communistic effort to nationalize children, making them primarily responsible to the government instead of to their parents. It strikes at the home. It appears to be a definite, positive plan to destroy the republic and substitute a social democracy.

The child labor amendment, which is supported wholeheartedly by hundreds of great publications, by practically all women's organizations and by welfare organizations everywhere, by the entire organized labor movement, by President Roosevelt and a long list of his predecessors, simply confers upon congress the right to regulate, limit and prohibit the employment of persons under 18 years of age for the purpose of preventing un-American employers from turning thee tender bodies and minds of our future citizens into interest coupons and dividend checks.

And this really noble policy, according to the president of the American Bar association, is "a communistic effort to nationalize children," "strikes at the home," and aims to "destroy the republic."

All thinking people will ask whether a mind can make so foul a declaration as this and be sane.

Judge Fisher's Injunction Decision

Another jurist, Judge Harry M. Fisher, of the Cook county, Illinois, circuit court, has taken the advanced stand initiated in Wisconsin and New York, in holding that employers seeking labor and picketing injunctions must come into court with "clean hands" if they hope for successful issue to their suits.

"Clean hands" they have not, Judge Fisher ruled in denying an injunction to La Mode Garment Company, Inc., against the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union, when they are paying their employes wages so low, in this case $6 weekly for 52 hours' work, as to constitute an incitement of the workers to the acts complained of. Judge Fisher said:

> If the injunction issued in such cases were simply corrective measures provided by law for the control of those who resort to violence or tortious acts, the question whether the unfair dealings of employers are connected with the matters sought to be enjoined might become pertinent, but the jurisdiction of the court to issue such injunctions rests solely on the ground that its purpose is not the restraint of the evil doer, but the protection of property and business.
> Clearly, then, if one deals so inequitably in respect to the very business he seeks to protect as to naturally and directly cause the trouble he complains of, how can he be heard to say that his wrong doing is not connected with the subject matter of his suit?

A few more such decisions from judges as courageous and social-minded as Justice Fisher will put a check to injunction procedures in the state courts brought by callous employers bent only on strike-breaking. Probably, however, cowardly and venal judges will be found to obey the will of rich employers until they are forbidden to use the injunction to browbeat workers, as the federal courts now are restrained by the Norris-La Guardia anti-injunction law.

Can the Bankers Live?

If this keeps on, all that will be necessary to wipe out the old banking fraternity will be an order from somebody—most anybody—for the bankers to "cease and desist."

Here is everybody, including the General Motors corporation and the Bartenders' union, lining up and saying: "We Do Our Part"; while the big bankers, apart from some little nonsense about what they do for their white-collared clerks, are just literally cluttering up the map. They are really blocking the traffic.

All this stream of good intentions about hiring more employes and paying 'em more wages, and buying raw material to be worked up into commodities and sold at a reasonable price—you know: well, it calls for some credit. It is not necessary to have money: just credit. Not credit at the bank, necessarily. Credit somewhere where you can get the stuff needed to turn the deal clear over.

Well, the big bankers and their banks just can't cut the mustard. This kind of thing is out of their perspective. The only kind of money they now say they have is the money that belongs to other people—depositors. And they dare not lend it out—much less do they feel like lending it out eight or ten times over, like they used to do.

Fact is: this N. R. A. thing is really an experiment. Say what you like, that is what it looks like to the bankers. They are not sure it will work.

Suppose somehow, this alleged "purchasing power," which is being conjured up by Hugh Johnson, should fail to materialize inside of the ninety days for which the bankers can loan money on commercial paper? Then the borrowers could not pay their loans back. And then——?

Your banker mind—well, it is a peculiar mind. If it does not know everything—it doesn't know anything!

Of course, the real trouble is, that the banking system was never made to fit this kind of a situation. Which means, that America wants a banking system that will function, and make credit available when it is needed, where it is needed.

We are learning some things about credit. And one of them is this: Credit is the life-blood of the processes of production and distribution.

Money is only the set of standards by which credit is measured. Money used to be the means of exchange. But we have passed that day.

Credit—the very breath of life for the economic processes and life of the nation and the world, has had to pass through some little pipes leading through the banks. And the bankers had a set of valves by which they turned the credit off and on, to suit their own ends. This essential of the common existence was a private perquisite of a few fellows who—when they got ready—choked off the supply.

Well, we don't want any more of that.

Of course, there must be a rational control of credit. It cannot be shoveled out of a window somewhere, for the first fellow and the last fellow that yells for it. There are working principles that must govern its handling.

But it may be necessary to handle it through the Postal Savings banks—or something like that—if the bankers keep on failing to meet the needs of this changing order.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

Deposits tied up in closed or restricted national banks total $2,000,000, treasury department figures reveal. This huge sum, if released, would give purchasing power a big boost and do much to start the wheels of industry revolving at normal speed. Yet the administration has done little to release a mass buying power which dwarfs all that can be done for months under the public works program.

It seems to the man in the street as well as to the economist that action might be taken to put at least a substantial part of this money in circulation. But the administration does next to nothing, apparently, and says nothing. It would seem only reasonable that Washington get busy or if it can't move, take the public into its confidence and do some explaining. The money belongs to the people and they are entitled to know what is being done to restore it to them.

The demand for speed in the government's $3,300,000 public works program grows more insistent. There is quite evidently something wrong with the administration of the fund. It is not moving fast enough to put men to work. Employment and purchasing power are lagging behind prices, threatening disaster to the recovery program.

The feeling is abroad that Secretary of the Interior Ickes, public works administrator, is placing too much emphasis on the necessity of moving slowly and carefully in order to avoid graft and waste. As the Business Week says, his policy is highly commendable—to a certain point, or under normal conditions.

"But these aren't normal conditions," the Business week adds. "There is a grim necessity that jobs be made—and quickly, unless we are to have grave social and economic disturbances this winter."

President Citrine, of the International Federation of Trade Unions, said at the annual congress of the organization in Brussels that the United States was the only nation attempting to raise wage levels. He complained that other countries were not following the lead of the United States, though he said there was no longer active championship of low wages. His criticism does not apply to Mexico, which is falling in line. Dispatches from Mexico City report that President Rodriguez has sent a letter to state governors asking them to attempt soon to fix minimum wages for workers in order to raise the standard of living. Other nations, please copy.

C. C. C. Millions Increase Factory Jobs, Fechner Says

Washington.—Business and industry have benefited immeasurably by the expenditures for supplies and equipment for the civilian conservation corps, according to Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work. Further, he says:

"Funds paid out in cash allowances to the 310,000 men engaged in forestation work and the allotment checks mailed monthly to families of the men also play their part in speeding business recovery and lightening the state relief rolls."

Millions, he points out, have been spent directly with merchants and manufacturers for food, clothing, housing materials, trucks, tractors and other mechanical equipment needed in forest conservation, thus increasing the number of men at work in factories.

PAPER MAKERS' UNION BOOSTS ITS MEMBERSHIP

Albany, N. Y.—Editor Arthur Huggins has been doing some traveling, as he discloses in the September issue of Papermakers' Journal, official organ of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers. Also he has been doing some observing, as result of which he suggests a code for labor organizers, who, he finds, have been working overtime and accomplishing things.

Among his citations are the work of Vice-President Barry, who organized strong unions in the Oxford and Continental mills at Rumford, Me., within a short time, besides fixing up some fences at Livermore Falls, Buckport and other places.

Then there is Organizer D'Aust, who organized the Gatinea mill 100 per cent at Hull and Ottawa, Canada, slipped over into the Maratimes and organized the Dalhousie mill, then on to Madawaska to organize a new local and help build up the border local at the same place, and still is going strong at Three Rivers.

A dozen other officials, Editor Huggins cites, naming scores of new locals they have formed, old locals reorganized or built up in Wisconsin, Michigan, California, Washington, Alabama, Virginia and other states.

Editor Huggins closes his commendation with a welcome to the new unions and members, pointing out:

"Only through the maintenance of continuous membership can they realize full benefits and secure protection from that type of employer whose sole desire is to 'trim' the workers. The collective bargaining features afforded workers by the recovery act will prove beneficial only when intelligently used.

"Higher wages and better working conditions are on the way now and can be realized through constructive action. Not only will organization be needed now to secure benefits, but it will be needed when the recovery act expires two years hence."

To Protect Right Of Organization, Green Declares

Court Action Will Be Pressed, A. F. of L. Head Says—Holds Shortening of Hours Set by Codes Necessary.

Akron, O., Sept. 7.—Organized labor will take court action against violators of the collective bargaining provisions of the national industrial recovery act, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, warned in a Labor Day address here. He spoke at a big meeting held by the Arkon Central Labor union.

Placing strong emphasis on the fact that the recovery act gives labor the right to organize 100 per cent without interference or restraint, President Green declared it is the purpose of the American Federation of Labor to "protect workers in the exercise of their right to organize and to invoke punishment, through proper court procedure, upon those eployers who are charged with and found guilty of violating the law."

"The opposition of employers to the exercise of the workers of their right to organize into trade unions," he said, "is as poorly based as might be the opposition of an individual employer against compliance with industrial codes of fair practice.

"Because labor has been compelled to fight for recognition of its right to organize, and to adopt policies designed to protect workers in the exercise of that right, employers in many instances have assumed that labor organizations were a menace to industrial welfare and to society as well. This is an arroneous point of view.

"In my opinion the time has arrived when industrial management should stop fighting the organization of labor and, in the spirit and letter of the national recovery act, give it an opportunity to collectively operate in making real, vital and beneficial all the provisions of the national recovery act. Labor must be made conscious of its right. It must understand that under the provisions of Section 7 (a) of the national recovery act it has a right to organize."

Replying to a demand made by Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, that industry insist on the inclusion in codes of its intention to hire, discharge or promote employes on a basis of merit without regard to union or non-union affiliation, Green said:

"The statement made by Mr. Harriman simply reflects the traditional attitude which the Chamber of Commerce and manufacturers always have pursued, but Section 7 of the industrial recovery act has created a 'new deal' for labor, and Mr. Harriman and those he represents must recognize that labor now has the right to organize even 100 per cent in a factory or mill or manufacturing establishment without interference or restraint from employers, and employers must recognize the representatives the workers select to speak for them.

"That is part of the law of the land and Mr. Harriman, as a good citizen, should conform to the law of the land."

The speaker said that more than 2,000,000 persons have returned to work since March and expressed confidence that "more than a million new members have joined with us."

He described the NIRA as opening "the door of opportunity for industry and labor," and said: "In all fairness, industry could not expect to appropriate to itself the benefits of the national recovery act and deny to labor the benefits which were accorded it.

"If business is permitted to organize and control business, labor likewise must be permitted to organize for mutual helpfulness and protection. And labor is doing that very thing."

Green said that labor was disappointed at the hours of work set in the codes under the recovery act and that it would be the policy of the A. F. of L. to insist on changes as the necessity arose.

"We firmly believe," he said, "that the hours of labor set in the industrial codes thus far provided for major industries have not reduced working time sufficiently so that they would absorb their share of the unemployed.

"We are confident that a further revision of the hours of labor in all industrial codes of fair practice will be necessary before all the millions of workers who are now idle are accorded opportunities of employment.

"Labor will concentrate upon this point because it is convinced that unemployment can only be overcome through a reduction in the number of hours worked per day in all lines of industry to a point necessary to create and provide work opportunities for all."

In closing, President Green pledged the full co-operation of labor in the operation of the recovery act, paid tribute to President Roosevelt and asked wholehearted support of the president's recovery program.

Governor's Wife Becomes Member Of Hosiery Union

Philadelphia, Aug.30.—In convention here, the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers presented a union card to Mrs. Cornelia Bryce Pinchot, wife of Gov. Pinchot, of Pennsylvania. Emil Rieve, president of the federation, introduced Mrs. Pinchot and said her presence in the picket lines "has never failed to bring about strike settlements."

Labor Head Says NIRA Opens Way To New Democracy

Chicago, Sept. 7.—In a Labor Day statement, President R. G. Soderstrom, of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, said:

"The immediate thing that can be secured through application of the recovery act is shorter hours, higher wages, and putting men back to work to give them buying power. Yet there is something deeper than this toward which our eyes must turn. It is the opportunity to build an industrial democracy. That opportunity is provided for in the national recovery act. It does not say that working people must join the American Federation of Labor, but it does say that the government of the United States will protect those who do so. We have been provided with a doorway through which we may march upright, boldly, if we have the ambition, intelligence, strength and courage to do so.

"Over that doorway the searchlights and floodlights of a nation have turned their rays of guidance and direction. The way of democracy in industry is flashed and reflected back from the gateway in one word, 'Organize.' The labor movement has a chance to do battle now in defense of its own faith without being victimized or discriminated against. The Almighty fights on the side of those who have the best guns and for the first time in American history the heavy artillery is on the side of the poor and the needy."

Jackson Central Body Pilots Workers to Trade Unionism

Jackson, Mich.—A special committee of four members was appointed by the Jackson Federation of Labor to aid in putting in their proper organization the vast army of workers who seek to enroll themselves in the trade union movement. The committee consists of James G. Henley, Winn Powers, Frank C. Keyes, Frank C. Leutz and Joseph Ashmore.

The federation still conducts its labor relief kitchen, serving around 300 meals per week. The grand total of fmeals served by the kitchen since its establishment is 462,774.

Railroads Urged To Give Active Backing to NIRA

Federal Co-Ordinator Calls on Carriers to Use "Every Dollar" to Put More Men to Work and Aid Recovery Program.

Washington, Sept. 7.—Railroads can help the recovery program by using "every available dollar, as traffic and revenue increase, to put more men to work," Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, declared in an appeal to the nation's railroads to lend active support to the recovery plan. He said that the fact that the carriers are not under the NIRA makes it all the more important that they play their proper part in the recovery program.

The appeal, sent to all steam railroad presidents and to the heads of twenty-one standard railroad labor organizations, said that much deferred maintenance and other work sorely needs to be done, adding that this would not only help the country but be the "soundest of economy."

The co-ordinator made four suggestions for increasing railroad employment. They were:

1. That no hourly, daily or monthly employe be required or permitted to work every day in the week.

2. That every effort be made to reduce overtime, whether at punitive or straight time rates.

3. That where an hourly, daily or monthly employe, whether in supervisory capacity or otherwise, is now required or permitted to work more than eight hours per day as a regular assignment, this situation should be changed.

4. That employes in train and engine service who are still accumulating high monthly mileage agree to a reduction compatible with the minimum mileages specified in prevailing labor agreements, having in mind also such readjustments downward as have already been made by other crafts in those services.

Anthracite Employment Highest in Three Years

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—Employment in the anthracite coal industry is the highest in three years and 100,000 miners are now at work, Thomas Kennedy, international secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, estimated in a statement. Kennedy said the number of men employed at present indicates a gradual return of normal conditions in the industry. He added that he believed 30,000 more men will soon return to the mines.

Tennessee Valley Development Seen As Aid to Many Industries

Washington, Aug. 17.—Creation of a vast buying reservoir that will draw in products from every section of the United States is one purpose of the Tennessee valley development, says Arthur E. Morgan, chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, in an article in the August Electrical Workers Journal.

"Though available work in the valley will go to local residents so far as possible, there are national advantages," says Chairman Morgan. "Much of the money spent for materials, tools, wages, etc., will find its way outside of the valley. Projects will require steel rails from Pittsburgh, auto trucks from Detroit and road-building equipment from St. Louis. Things that the workers use will be mostly drawn from the outside—shoes from New England, textiles from the south, and house furnishings from Grand Rapids, etc. Foodstuffs will come from California to Florida, meats from Chicago, wheat from the plains, dairy products from the northwest and cornbelt products from the middle west. This will mean increased business for railroads, waterways, and motor truck transportation."

The title of Chairman Morgan's article is "Tennessee—Fragment of a Vast National Plan." He discusses the project as a great enterprise in social engineering. The scheme includes widespread services to inhabitants in seven states, the erection of cities and towns, the establishment of schools as well as a strictly engineering venture in flood control and power generation.

Three other articles in the August Electrical Workers Journal deal with the Muscle Shoals project. Richard M. Beard, an engineer, discusses the project as one of power application to benefit consumers. Milton M. Flanders, another engineer, discusses the kind and character of jobs that will be available. Dan W. Tracy, president, outlines the services that the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers can render to the United States government in achieving this national plan.

Central Labor and Building Trades Councils Plan Merger

Richmond, Cal.—The Central Labor council and the Building Trades council at a joint meeting here decided to merge the two groups in the interest of more effective trade union work. The consolidated councils will qualify as the central body for all local unions both in the building trades and the miscellaneous crafts.

PEOPLE FEAR SELFISH INTERESTS WILL DEFEAT RECOVERY PROGRAM

Observer Finds Masses Favor NIRA, But Are in State of Inertia Which Gives Opportunity for Enemies to Sabotage and Wreck Plan—Declares People Must Be Aroused to Fighting Pitch.

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago, Sept. 7.—It seems certain that something of an extraordinary character will have to occur to arouse the great mass of the people to a point where they will place themselves wholeheartedly and enthusiastically behind the program of the national industrial recovery administration.

There is a great deal of sentiment favorable to the program, but it is spotty and insufficient to overcome the Machiavillian machinations of high placed scoundrels who command sufficient financial resources to defeat the plan almost in its entirety unless the people are aroused to fighting pitch.

The people as a whole are in a state of mental and physical inertia after long years of unemployment and destitution. They have faith in the sincerity and good intentions of President Roosevelt, but are doubtful as to his ability to overcome the opposition of the barons of finance, commerce and industry. That, at least, is the impression one gains in talking with the general run of persons met here and there around the town.

It is difficult to diagnose the case precisely, but several outstanding causes for public indifference are easily discernible. That NIRA is being "kissed to death" by the daily newspapers is one important factor. The newspaper columns are filled with NIRA news, but it is uniformly of a negative character. The newspaper publishers showed their real sentiments when they filed the worst code that came from any branch of industry or from any profession. The daily newspaper publishers know that they do not dare come out in the open and show their true colors, so they set out to help their "open shop" and "American plan" friends by damning NIRA with faint praise and by gloating each time that organized labor seemingly gets a setback.

Of course there are some daily newspapers which have given the president splendid support in his efforts to overcome the depression, but they constitute only a small minority.

Big merchants are helping to kiss NIRA to death by using the Blue Eagle for advertising purposes, while at the same time they are operating on the "open shop" basis and are working with other "open shop" interests. For example, Marshall Field & Co. has been flying the NRA flag and displaying the Blue Eagle in its show windows for several weeks. Outside on the sidewalk men have been parading back and forth carrying the legend, "Marshall Field & Co. Unfair to Organized Labor." The building trades have the place picketed.

Hundreds of thousands of world's fair visitors from all parts of the United States and from foreign countries have an opportunity to view this paradoxical exhibition as they wend their way through Chicago's great shopping district.

These examples could be multiplied indefinitely, but what's the use? The people know these facts and it makes them skeptical.

With the "open shop" and "American plan" employers of the nation organized to fight NIRA under the leadership of the National Association of Manufacturers, disguised with false whiskers and all under the title of Council of American Industries, the outlook is not so good.

The crisis perhaps will come when snow begins to fly and hunger and want and destitution again stalk the land. Congress will then be in session and it might not be a bad idea were the congress to declare the country in a state of siege, authorize the president to declare martial law and following that stage a few drumhead courts-martial with summary punishment to follow.

San Juan, P. R.—A 25 per cent wage increase ended a strike of many thousands of women employed in the needlework industry at Mayagues.

New Organization Aims to Stir Row In Administration

Seeks Rift Between Gen. Johnson and Labor—Nockels Says "Open Shoppers" Are Doomed to Defeat.

By JOSEPH A. WISE

Chicago, Aug. 30.—There was one national convention held here recently which neither the participants nor the citizens of Chicago were proud of. The convention, held secretly at the Palmer house and from which newspaper reporters were barred ,was composed of delegates from 500 "open shop" and "American plan" employers' associations from all parts of the United States.

The convention, or caucus, gave birth to what is to be officially known as the Council of American Industries, organized for the purpose of sabotaging the aims and objects of the national recovery act. One of the first objectives aimed at will be to drive a wedge between Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and organized labor, with a view of eventually wrecking the entire national industrial recovery administration.

Utah Man Named Chairman.

A. C. Reese, head of the Associated Industries of Utah, was named permanent chairman of the new organization. The National Association of Manufacturers took an active part in launching the new movement. James A. Emery, atorney for the National Association of Manufacturers, not wishing to put himself "on the spot" by appearing in Chicago personally, sent John Gall from Washington to Chicago to pinch hit for him and to guide the new organization along the pathways of uprighteousness.

James L. Donnelley, executive vice-president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, took a conspicuously active part in the convention. Colonel Thomas S. Hammond, president of the Illinois Manufacturers' association, was not in chicago at the time. He was in Washington attending to his duties as a NIRA deputy administrator and, as alleged, the "right hand man" of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson.

Hammond Was NIRA Critic.

It is recalled with what vehemence Colonel Hammond denounced the national industrial recovery act when it was passed by the U. S. senate on June 9 last. The following day Colonel Hammond issued a statement to the press in which he said the act would "wreck business recovery by starting an era of strikes, racketeering, lockouts and wage controversies." He further said:

"Illinois employers, particularly manufacturers, are apprehensive that widespread dislocation of business with accompanying injury to employers, workers—particularly the white collar class—and the general public will result from the threatened program to force all industrial employes in this country into labor unions.

"War time wages maintained by the labor unions already have contributed to depressed industrial conditions by forcing prices for many commodities and railroad transportation that the consumer has been unwilling or unable to pay.

"Farmers and a great mass of the population, including the white collared class and professional people of fixed incomes and not connected with industry or commerce, would receive no higher incomes as a result of the passage of the act and would have to pay much higher living charges. It also will adversely affect American exports."

One of the old wheel horses of the Illinois Manufacturers' association said to International Labor News Service:

"All that we intend to do through the new organization is to make an effort to preserve some of our rights, privileges and liberties as employers. You know, organized labor is in a pretty strong position at Washington at this time, and we have got to do something to protect ourselves."

E. N. Nockels, secretary of the Chicago Federation of Labor, commented as follows:

"It appears to me that those fellows are planning a fight and are already afraid of the consequences. If they were not afraid, why did they hold a secret meeting? If we were engaged in a foreign war, and these men were to plan to do the things that constitute their present objective, they would be regarded as traitors to their country, and I am not so sure that that will not be the view entertained by the public when the facts in the case become generally known.

"Their talk of rights, privilege and liberties is just so much bunk. What they mean is that they want to continue their slave-driving tactics toward their employes, which have been one of the principal causes for the depression.

"We would like to solve our present problems peacefully, but if those 'open shop,' company union, racketeer profits which make up this so-called American Council of Industries are seeking warfare, which seems to be the case, then we will meet them more than half way. I am of the opinion, however, that this new 'open shop' outfit will die in infancy. The American people are in no mood to be trifled with."

A. F. OF L. REPORTS REAL PROGRESS IN NIRA DRIVE

Figures on Employment, Wages, Buying Power and Retail Trade All Show Clear Signs of Progress as September Opens, Monthly Survey Says.

Washington, Sept. 7.—Clear signs of real progress in the recovery campaign are evident with the beginning of September, the American Federation of Labor says in its monthly survey of business.

"Since the speculative rise of business was checked in July, figures are beginning to reveal a solid foundation for business activity," the survey reports, going on to outline the encouraging features as follows:

"First, employment: From March to July, the A. F. of L. estimate shows that 2,033,000 men and women have gone back to work, and our trade union reports show that in August re-employment continued almost as rapidly as July in spite of the check to business. By July, unemployment had been reduced by nearly 1,900,000, the number still out of work in July being 11,573,000 compared to 13,471,000 in March. Preliminary trade union unemployment figures for August show 23.7 per cent of the membership out of work, compared to 24.1 per cent in July, 24.5 per cent in June, 25.8 per cent in May and 26.6 per cent in March.

Buying Power Jumps.

"Purchasing power: Incomes of wage and salaried workers were higher by $287,000,000 in July than in March. On a yearly basis this amounts to a gain of $3,444,000,000. Farmers' income this year is estimated at $2,000,000,000 above last year. Thus even before it is fully under way, the recovery program has already poured new purchasing power into the market at the rate of over $5,000,000,000 a year. This alone would be enough to raise total retail sales 17 per cent.

"Retail trade: The effect of this new purchasing power is already being felt. Department store sales in July were 4 per cent above July last year—the first rise above the previous year since depression. Early August reports show department store trade holding its gains. August estimates of sales of ready-to-wear clothing chaims show a 38 per cent gain over August last year; five-cents-to-one-dollar chains, 15 per cent gain. Sales of mechanical refrigerators, washing machines, oil burners are increasing, and automobiles sales are holding well above last year. Gains in these more expensive products are doubtless also stimulated by the rise in prices.

Pay Up, Hours Cut.

"Wages and hours: In July, for the first time since the bank crisis wage rates per hour have turned upward and hours per week have been shortened. The total average changes are slight, but they are most significant because they show a distinct change of trend for millions of workers in thousands of shops. From March to July, average hourly earnings of workers in eighty-eight industries declined steadily from 45.0 cents to 43.5 cents; average hours actually worked per week increased steadily from 40.3 to 43.3. In July, the trend was reversed—hourly earnings increased from 43.5 to 43.8 cents, average hours were shortened from 43.3 to 43.1 (from June 15 to July 15). This is the first concrete evidence of success of NRA in its drive to shorten hours and increase wages, and the change of trend occurred before any code had gone into effect and before the Blue Eagle drive began—the small amount of the change indicates many plants had not yet begun to co-operate.

"These first reports are straws to show which way the wind is blowing. There are many adjustments yet to be made. For instance, wage increases for the individual worker are not yet catching up with the increase in retail prices; gains in 'real' purchasing power thus far are due to re-employment rather than any general increase in the 'real' income of workers already employed. The south is the exception with reports that wage increases have doubled and trebled retail sales in some communities."

Laborers' Pay Should Be Cut 50%

That's What ROY McDONALD, Owner of the HOME STORES, Wants

Can You Afford to Spend Your Money with a Man Who Wants YOUR Pay Cut in Half?

McDonald is now publishing a weekly "throw-sheet," and employed an out-of-town operator in preference to a Chattanoogan.

McDonald says: "President Hoover made a mistake in 1929 when he asked that wages be maintained. If he had cut wages 50% in 1929 the depression would now be over."

DO YOU BELIEVE THAT?

VALLEY WORK "NOT CHARITY" SOLON IS TOLD

Appeals of McReynolds Meet Cool Rebuff.

MATTER MAY GO BEFORE CONGRESS

Apparent Inactivity of Valley Board Protested by Local Labor.

Applicants for positions in connection with the Tennessee Valley project may receive new blanks by calling at the local postoffice, it was announced Friday morning. These blanks, which have just arrived, must be filled out regardless of whether the citizen has previously made application.

There is also available, it was explained, a sample examination sheet, which will give to each applicant an idea of the nature of test for fitness which he or she must take at a general examination to be held later.

Apparent apathy of the Tennessee Valley Authority, charged with administration of the plans for development of the valley, has brought a strong protest from organized labor, which is backed 100 per cent at least by Congressman S. D. McReynolds, and labor officials believe that Senators Bachman and McKellar will concur also in the protest lodged with them by Central Body, which Monday night instructed Secretary Cuthbert to write the lawmakers on the subject.

The proposed development, after the Authority has had nearly six months to act, "remains a fanciful scheme," Secretary Cuthbert told the congressional representatives, and the only persons so far employed are a few technical experts.

Congressman McReynolds, who received a committee from Central Body, expressed himself as 100 per cent in sympathy with the protest, but stated, in effect, that appeals from him had brought from Chairman Morgan the trite statement that the valley authority "is not a relief organization." The congressman then very properly suggested to the authority chief that there might be no harm, even so, in employing people who need work.

In Friday's issue of the Times, the editorial writer of that paper, running true to form, takes a "nasty crack" at Congressman McReynolds for his firm stand in the matter, and indicates that the movement toward speeding action by the professor's board is altogether political. Jobless men, however, facing the possibilities of a winter of want and privation for themselves and families, will hardly approve the sentiment expressed by the newspaper writer, whose bread and butter is assured and whose family will not know want during the cold months to come, and who may complacently defend the apparent dilatory tactics employed by the schoolmaster and his board.

At press time no reply had been received from Senators Bachman and McKellar, who are in Washington, and who had hardly had time to answer Mr. Cuthbert's letter, which expressed the sentiment of delegates to Monday night's meeting of Central Body, as follows:

The Tennessee river valley project, as set out by President Roosevelt and made into law by congress, was created for the main purpose of providing employment for our citizens, and that immediately. President Roosevelt has said that the United States cannot stand another winter like the last three and, furthermore, that there will not be another like them.

Nearly six months have elapsed since the Tennessee Valley Authority was named, and to this day nothing in the way of re-employment has been effected, other than office forces for "research" and other technical experts. As for the laboring man, we view with grave apprehension the prospects of this coming winter. In fact, from meager reports, we feel that even if work is started that very little benefit will be derived by journeymen skilled workmen.

Therefore, as your constituents, we beseech you to leave no stone unturned to see if something cannot be speeded up so that this winter will not come on us and find the Tennessee river valley project still a fanciful scheme, with no tangible benefits coming from it for the uenmployed of this section. If it is red tape, let's cut it into little ribbons and put some of these suffering and patient Americans of this vicinity to work. Yours truly,

CHATTANOOGA TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL,
T. R. Cuthbert, Secretary.

McDonald Adds Patent Medicines To Varied Lines

"Sole Owners" May Be Supplied With Line of Drugs to Add to Stocks.

The Home Stores tire business having been established, it is reported this week, Mr. Roy McDonald, grocer, baker, dairyman, printer, publisher, tire merchant, philanthropist, individualist, has added a line of drugs to be dispensed by the "boys" to whom the merchant prince "sold" his grocery stores a few weeks ago—not because of the code, but as the culmination of a dream of years.

Report that McDonald has added a drug business arose doubtless from the fact that a large display ad has appeared in his throw-sheet for a patent medicine manufactured locally, and which it is presumed will be added to the stocks of the "sole owners" of the grocery chain.

The display ad was accompanied in the last issue of McDonald's advertising sheet by another for the "Don Cherry Tire Company," which new institution also had a nice write-up in the throw-sheet.

Local citizens are wondering what line McDonald will enter next, and it has become quite a sport for individuals to speculate on the possible activities of the versatile business man.

Labor World readers will remember that McDonald told a committee which called upon him that he was an individualist, and that anyone who works for him will come to work at such time as he orders, and will quit by the same sign.

President Hoover, he said, made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders to keep wages up as an aid to prosperity. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer-baker-dairyman - printer - publisher-individualist averred, we would now be out of the depression, and further, he held, we will never be out until wages are further and further cut.

NIRA Is Called Greatest Hope Of Union Labor

But Act Also Has Its Dangers for Unionism, New Jersey State Federation of Labor Convention Is Told.

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 14.—Meeting in annual convention here, the New Jersey State Federation of Labor was told that while the National Industrial Recovery Act offers "the greatest opportunity in history for organized workers," at the same time it carries a threat of danger to the labor movement.

The Recovery act was hailed by President Arthur A. Quinn, of the federation and Emerson L. Richards, president of the state senate, but Richards also warned of what he saw as the danger in the law.

"The right of men to organize and to bargain collectively," Richards said, "embraces the right to choose your own leaders and your own method of bargaining. Already there seems to be a disposition to usurp this function.

Labor Must Be Watchful.

"Organized labor must be very watchful or it will find that its tried and true leaders have been supplanted by a bureaucracy in Washington dictating terms and conditions. If that should come to pass, it would no longer be an organization by and for labor."

President Quinn declared that success of the whole recovery plan depends largely upon the workers' units.

"There is no doubt," he said, "that many are signing the codes who do not intend to obey them. It will be organized labor's duty to see that they are enforced not only by closed shop employers but by the far more numerous group of open shop owners.

Big Responsibility on Labor.

"Our form of government depends upon the success or failure of enforcement of the Recovery act. That's in turn, depends in large measure on labor's strength and determination, and on the honesty, intelligence and unselfish devotion of labor's leadership."

Quinn added that "one of the best means of enforcing the Recovery act and protecting the fair employer against the chiseler is in insisting on the union label."

Automobile Workers Eager For Trade Union Benefits

Flint, Mich.—J. F. Anderson, international representative of the American Federation of Labor here, is very enthusiastic over his success in persuading employes of the Flint automobile factories to join the United Automobile Workers of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Under Mr. Anderson's guidance charters have been granted to workers in the Chevrolet, Buick, A. C. Spark Plug and Fisher Body corporation.

In an address before the Flint Federation of Labor outlining his experiences in organizing the auto workers, Mr. Anderson said it has not been necessary to employ old-time brass band methods to attract the employes. They are coming voluntarily in groups of one to a dozen to the Labor temple daily for the purpose of joining up. In his organization work, he asserted, he stresses the achievements of the American Federation of Labor, showing the many improvements which have been brought about through the efforts of the organized workers.

Today is the tomorrow you were worrying about yesterday.

Johnson Bars Modification Of Collective Bargaining Clause In All NIRA Codes

By B. C. CLARKE

Washington, Sept. 14.—The other morning at one of the little Delaware ocean-front beaches, with a salt marsh behind it, I pushed the starter of my car. The engine sputtered and then went into a furious roar. In an instant the air was filled with mosquitoes, swarming like bees—hundreds of them, near relatives of those of Jersey, and almost large enough to masquerade as bees.

They had sought hiding from the dawning day in the dark recesses under the hood, confident of protection from the brilliant rays that slanted in from the waves. But with the sputter of the engine and the whir of the fan, indicating that the hood after all was an unsafe hiding place, they fled, possibly in terror, into the sunlight.

Johnson Stirs Up "Mosquitoes."

General Hugh Johnson, Uncle Sam's industrial commisar, is having the same experience. The other afternoon, without reckoning the consequences, he said pithily that he would not allow qualifying and modifying clauses to Section 7 (a) of the recovery act to be inserted again in industrial codes. This is the section of the law which says that the right of employes to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing without interference of employers shall not be abridged.

The industrial chieftain had in mind the qualifying clause of the automobile code, which he said he had consented to "in an unguarded moment," and the company union clause that was originally in the steel code. His remarks were innocent enough, but they were the push that set the engine whirring and chasing a veritable cloud of mosquitoes into the air to face the dazzling light of the Roosevelt recovery effort.

NIRA Head to Use Swatter.

Attempt of the steel interests to qualify or nullify the labor clause of the recovery act through quibbling language inserted in their initial code was seized upon by a veritable swarm of industries and trades—some of them a mere dot on the industrial map—to put some qualification of the mandatory labor clause into their proposed codes. Most of them adopted the language verbatim which Johnson had unwittingly consented to allow in the automobile code. They believed apparently that with quibbles and vague phrases they could destroy the plain mandate of a statute and set aside the definite intent of a law.

Johnson's tart remark stirred mosquitoes from hiding under the automobile code hood, and into the reach of the swatter. And Johnson proposes that as each of these codes comes up for a hearing he will use the swatter. No such clause, and, in fact, no language of any kind, he asserts, may be put into a code hereafter in connection with or as a part of the mandatory Section 7 (a) provision—a provision that must be written into every code, word for word, before it will be approved by Johnson and the president.

Clause Barred for Good.

While the automobile code with its qualifying clause continues in effect for only six months, Johnson said that this phrase has led to such confusion in industry that he would not permit its inclusion again. There is evidence that it has inspired a definite relief among industrialists that the mandatory labor section can be modified in the wording of codes, and the plain intent of the law changed.

Thus, with a single sweep, Johnson has removed one of the most irritating and complexing problems that has beset his recovery administration since the steel code was filed. It has led to futile and wearisome delays in finishing and promulgating other codes, and on a conservative estimate, wasted a whole month of time of Johnson and his entire staff.

CATES' RESIGNATION NO LOSS TO RECOVERY ACT SERVICE

Chicago, Sept. 14.—The separation of Dudley Cates, Chicago insurance man, from the government service as a deputy NIRA administrator, was a big gain for the government rather than a loss. His retention in the service undoubtedly would have resulted in a violent unfavorable reaction eventually.

Cates is the man who was touted as the close personal friend of Thomas E. Donnelley at the national employing printers' code meeting held here a few weeks ago. It will be recalled that Donnelley, head of R. R. Donnelley & Sons company, notoriously non-union for more than two decades, wrote the code adopted at that meeting, and that the employers spurned overtures of officers of the international printing trades unions to meet in joint conference to work out an equitable code.

Donnelley was in the saddle and he rode 'em cowboy. Cates was the fair-haired boy of the Donnelley meeting. It was Dudley Cates this and Dudley Cates that. If a knotty problem came up for which there seemed to be no immediate solution, why, just refer it to good old Dud, and he'll fix it.

The "open shop" employing printers were in high feather. They had the world by the tail and a downhill pull. They unanimously agreed on a code that just suited them, and they crammed the code down the throats of union employers who refused to fight.

The non-union employing printers then went back to their homes in the four corners of the United States hugging the delusion that Dudley Cates would be the deputy administrator before whom hearings on the printing code would be held, and that dear old Dud would just naturally rubber stamp the Donnelley code and everything would be hotsy-totsy for the "open shoppers" some more. But Dudley has taken a run-out powder on his friends.

NIRA Mediation Board Assails Bakery Owners

Employers Scored for Failure to Co-operate by Refusing to Accept Decision in New York Strike.

Progress of organization among local bakery workers is highly gratifying, according to T. R. Cuthbert, organizer, and it is expected that within the next few weeks employes of these local plants will boast a 100 per cent union.

Except in one plant, Mr. Cuthbert said, no opposition has been encountered. Conferences now being held with the management of this concern, however, indicate a possibility of withdrawal of opposition in a short time.

New York City, Sept. 14.—The Specialty Bakery Owners association was criticised by the mediation board of the local NRA organization for rejecting the board's decision in the strike of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' union.

Reviewing the mediation proceedings, the board scored the bakery owners for their failure to cooperate and declared that the employers "prefer to keep strikers on the streets rather than yield to arbitration."

The mediation board consists of Mrs. Elinor W. Herrick, chairman, representing the public; James C. Harbord, chairman of the Radio Corporation of America, and Leon Rouse, of Typographical Union No. 6. The board's decision was to have been accepted by both parties to the dispute, but the employers, contrary to the action of the union, have declined to abide by the verdict.

Union Accepts Decision.

The statement is expected to have a bearing on the final disposition of the injunction against the strikers prohibiting them from picketing, granted by Justice Selah B. Strong in the supreme court in Brooklyn.

The statement pointed out that the union representatives had yielded on a number of points to which they had clung stubbornly and had accepted the decision of the board as a basis for arbitration.

The decision provided that the hours of labor continue as fixed by existing contracts pending adoption of a permanent code for the bakery industry and fixed the basic working time at 48 hours a week. The decision also provided that there should be arbitration on the wage question.

GREEN URGES FIGHT

Washington, Sept. 14.—In a telegram to Matthew M. Levy, attorney for Local 505 of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International union, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, urged a strong fight against the injunction prohibiting picketing by striking bakers in Brooklyn.

"In the particular case in Brooklyn where labor has been restrained by an injunction order from exercising its right to peaceful picketing labor must utilize every honorable and legitimate means at its command to have the injunction order set aside," Green said.

Rail Workers Increased Nearly 20,000 in Month

Washington, Sept. 7.—Railroad employment and payrolls picked up sharply from May to June, interstate commerce commission figures reveal.

Class 1 railroads, switching and terminal companies reported a total of 957,532 employes as of the middle of June, compared with 938,406 in May, an increase of 19,126. Since the middle of March, when the low point was reached, the increase was 37,651.

Including those on part time, the total number employed was 1,074,651 or 24,099 more than in May.

Pay in June was $115,433,189, as comjared with $113,505,929 in May, an increase of $1,927,260.

Central Bodies In Various Cities Hear Lane Story

Attitude of Georgia Concern Explained to Workers Where Stores Operate.

Central bodies in all cities where the Lane Drug company operates were notified this week of the controversy between the Atlanta concern and Chattanooga labor, which arose through failure of local labor to prevail upon officers of the chain store company to insure employment of members of organized labor on a storeroom at 714 Market street, where the Chattanooga branch of the Georgia concern is now located.

The Lane controversy was marked this week by what the pickets described as increasing interest upon the part of the public, and a most gratifying spirit of sympathy is reported.

Following action by Chattanooga Typographical union at its regular monthly meeting, which provided for an automatic fine of $10 on any member patronizing a place declared "unfair" by Central Body, Local No. 80, American Federation of Musicians, passed the following resolution:

"Resolved, that any member of Local No. 80, A. F. of M., found patronizing any place of business or any employer declared unfair by the Central Labor body, regardless of the craft, after due trial, if found guilty, shall be fined $10 for each offense."

Other local unions have taken similar action both with respect to the Lane company and to the so-called Home Stores and their various branches.

Piedmont Strikers Still Holding Line

Walkout of some 700 textile workers in the Piedmont, Ala., mill of the Standard-Coosa-Thatcher company was unchanged according to latest advices received by The Labor World, workers and management maintaining their stand as taken when the strike occurred last Monday morning. A delegation of the strikers were in Chattanooga this week conferring with labor representatives and others.

The Piedmont Journal, which is standing loyally by the workers, covered the situation this week in a front-page article as follows:

"With both the union forces and the management of Standard-Coost-Thatcher company cotton mills seemingly as far apart as when the strike started Monday morning, approximately 750 employes remain out of the mills and idle.

"The trouble started about one week ago, when Mr. F. E. Blair, waste mill foreman, was demoted. The union protested the action, and in addition requested a raise of 20 per cent in wages and made other minor requests, it is understood, but without coming to any understanding.

"All day Saturday and Sunday the question of a strike was imminent, with numerous meetings being held between the union men and the company officials. W. O. Hare, Alabama state secretary of American Federation of Labor; V. C. Finch, southern labor representative, of Atlanta, together with local leaders of the textile union, were in conference with the mill officials, including T. H. McKinney, president of the company. Following a lengthy conference Sunday afternoon a meeting of the union was held Sunday night, when the definite decision to strike was made.

"The mill whistle was blown as usual Monday morning, and although hundreds of employes gathered at the gates no employe offered to enter the mills for work, and no signs of disorder in any way were in evidence.

"Superintendent S. H. Harris read a notice that the mill would be shut down indefinitely as a result of the strike.

"It is understood that conferences are still more or less in progress between both the union and the company."

MANY KNOCK AT DOORS OF FEDERATION

New Unions Being Chartered Weekly.

MANY LINES SEEK COLLECTIVE ACTION

Old Established Locals Gain Members in "New Deal" Movement.

The past few weeks have seen no diminution in the great wave of organization which has swept Chattanooga and vicinity, and almost weekly new groups, after having been worked into strong organizations, are added to the rolls of Central Body affiliates.

"Chiselers" on the code have become somewhat numerous, but in each instance victims of this un-American practice are biding their time with a confidence that the N. R. A. administration will eventually adjust all unfair practices and punish the guilty parties.

T. R. Cuthbert, voluntary organizer for the American Federation of Labor, reports increasing activity in nearby communities. At Dalton, Mr. Cuthbert said Friday, a textile union composed of several hundred enthusiastic members is gaining strength with each passing day, and the new organization has a set purpose of making the North Georgia metropolis 100 per cent organized in this line within a very short time.

At Chickamauga, Ga., another textile union will be installed Saturday morning, membership already having reached several scores, and at South Pittsburg and other nearby points unions of mill workers are functioning splendidly, Mr. Cuthbert said.

Locally the textile organizing situation is progressing very satisfactory, he continued, although in some cases the "stretch-out" system is being installed and other unfair practices are being attempted against the spirit of the code.

Besides the textile unions, new organizations already formed or in the process of formation were listed by Mr. Cuthbert as follows:

Cement Workers, Enamel Workers, Electric Welders, Retail Clerks, Upholsterers, Dairy Workers, Bakers, Paper Makers, Furniture Workers, Truck Drivers, Operating Engineers and others. The dairy workers comprise members from every large dairy in the city with the exception of the Grant-Patten plant, and several of the larger plants are "100 per cent andproud of it."

In addition to the above and other new and prospective locals, practically every one of the old-established unions have greatly increased their membership, and particularly is this true of the Iron Molders and Contract Machinists, it was said.

Mr. Cuthbert requested The Labor World to state that every effort is being made to answer appeals from each craft for assistance, and to urge that those desiring to come under the banner of the American Federation of Labor be as patient as possible.

"It is a great task to reach all these in a short time, under handicaps, but if the workers will bear with us we will meet with and give every assistance to all who call on us," he said.

W. Alfred Cofer Weds Miss Sadler

A wedding of interest to many trades union friends was solemnized on Labor Day when W. Alfred Cofer and Miss Grace Sadler stole a march on their friends by "slipping away" to LaFayette, Ga., and became man and wife. The secret was kept until this week.

Mrs. Cofer is the daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. N. Sadler, her father having for many years been well-known locally as a Methodist minister. She is a graduate of Tennessee Wesleyan.

Mr. Cofer is the son of C. E. Cofer, of the Cofer Electric company, and is a member of Local 175, Electrical Workers. He is a graduate of Central High school.

They are at home at 1400 West Fifty-third street.

What Next!

Air conditioning for automobiles promises to be the next development in the air conditioning industry. Refrigerating machines, motors, and coils are slung underneath the floorboards. Air is filtered, warmed or cooled, in accordnce with the needs of the season, and the humidity adjusted before passing into the car.

Wisdom

History shows us that all great principles, however ardently espoused for a time, have a tendency to fade into traditions, to degenerate into a hollow cant, to become words of little import, and to remain for declamation when their vital power is gone.—William Ellery Channing.

Bad Taste in Mouth, Sour Stomach

For quick relief from constipation troubles, such as are mentioned below, get a 25-cent package of Thedford's BLACK-DRAUGHT and begin taking it today.

"I have suffered a great deal from biliousness and constipation," writes Mrs. D. C. Jones, of Waterloo, Ala. "When I get bilious I have a bad taste in my mouth, have sour stomach, my color is bad, and I get dizzy and feel awfully bad. I have headache constantly. When I take Black-Draught it relieves me and I feel like a new person. I don't think there is a better medicine than Black-Draught."

"Outside Interference"

In their statements against trade union collective bargaining the executives of anti-union corporations, of which the United States Steel corporation is typical, have stressed the terrible menace which they visioned in "outside" organizations like national trade unions "interfering" with the wages, hours and other work conditions which the executives of the corporations see fit to impose upon their employes.

These questions, they said, should be settled by the strong and united authority of the corporation on the one hand and the weak and disunited employes on the other. There must be no "outside" interference.

Hypocrisy in the extreme, organized labor replied. Now we have an illustration of that hypocrisy.

In Washington, D. C., the employes of the Crittal Manufacturing company, operating under the blanket N. R. A. code for the steel window sash industry, struck for a 20 per cent. increase in piecework wages. Under the code the 48-hour week was reduced to 36 hours, with a 10 per cent. increase in the hourly wage, which resulted in lower weekly wages.

The strikers said they could not live on the reduced pay and walked out with their demand for an increase. They knew that the minimum wage was fixed by the code, but they believed that maximum wages were fixed by the management. Not so. According to the press report of the controversy, Charles C. Anthony, manager of the Crittal concern, told the employes he did not have authority to grant their demand. Why? Because wages for the employes of every member of the trade association of the steel window sash industry, a national organization of employers, are fixed by the officials of the association, and the association at the time of the controversy was holding a meeting in Cleveland.

Here is "outside interference" with a vengeance. The manager of a steel window sash company in Washington cannot increase the wages of his employes without the consent of the national trade association for the industry!

The natural corollary to this condition is a national organization of the employes of the industry in a national trade union to bargain collectively with the national trade association of the employers. This is what the American Federation of Labor demands. This is what the American Federation of Labor is endeavoring to secure. This is what the National Industrial Recovery Act approves when it declares that employes shall have the right to organize in bona fide unions without interference from employers and use their unions for collective bargaining. And this is what anti-union employers compactly organized in national trade associations themselves, sponsored by the anti-union Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the anti-union National Association of Manufacturers, are making strenuous efforts to prevent.

They shall not succeed. "Labor Omnia Vincit"—Labor Conquers All—is the motto of the A. F. of L. In this fight for the right to organize, the motto shall become a living reality throughout the Republic despite the determination of anti-union employers to turn the workers into voiceless and soulless industrial serfs responding like robots to the will of those who own and control American industry.

Speeding Up the Workers

An editorial writer of the New York Times says too many trade unionists have set up standards "which mitigate against the sections of the industry in which they find their livelihood" and asks if they will continue to insist on "limited production" or if they will assist the national recovery by dropping the plan of "making work," which he defines as requiring that things be done needlessly in conformity with the rules which the workers make themselves. "In this and many other matters," he says, "there is ample reason for employers and the public to appeal to labor unions."

This editorial explosion of the New York Times is a restatement of the silly old charge that members of trade unions either by loafing on the job or other devices resort to wholesale limitation of the amount of work done per unit of time.

The charge is baseless. "A fair day's work for a fair day's pay" has been the slogan of organized labor throughout the United States from the inception of the labor movement. This does not mean, of course, that trade unionists subject themselves to the exploitation of speed-up men and destroy their bodies and minds by driving themselves or permitting themselves to be driven to the performance of inordinate tasks.

The body of the worker is a human machine which must be preserved in good condition for many years to insure the worker a living from the sale of the use of the labor power which it generates. "A fair day's work for a fair day's pay" accomplishes this preservation, and organized labor will not permit either editorial taskmasters for the employers or the employers themselves to use the N. R. A. as a speed-up scheme to wear the workers out in the shortest possible time and then throw them into the army of the so-called "inefficient" with the almshouse as their home.

Wages and the Cost of Living

Perhaps the outstanding anomaly of the recovery program is the penalty of static wages imposed in many instances upon the workers in connection with shorter hours by the persistent price boosting applied by manufacturers and merchants who own and control the machinery for manufacturing and marketing the necessities of life, commonly called a living.

This anomaly was well illustrated in certain cotton mills about the time the 40-hour maximum work week was put into effect.

In one southern community thousands of textile workers struck for a 25 per cent. wage increase. The mill superintendents refused to grant the increase, but reduced the length of the work week to 40 hours at the same weekly wage the workers had been paid for 55 hours.

This was a reduction of well over one-quarter in working time, a very remarkable victory for the mill workers and a distinct advantage for them and their families. But with their weekly wages fixed and the cost of living going up, their real wages expressed in purchasing power were decreased and their living standards consequently lowered. This reduction in wages and purchasing power is widespread. It is wholly at variance with the underlying principle of the National Industrial Recovery Act.

Unless speedy machinery is developed to secure the automatic increase in all wages equal to and even exceeding the boosts in living costs decreed by manufacturers and merchants, there will be many justifiable protests resorted to by labor to adjudicate a grievance which those who own and control industry could prevent if they had enough social vision to justify their continuance as business executives.

FIGHT PROMISED TO RESTORE SLASHED POSTOFFICE WAGES

Atlantic City, N. J., Sept. 14.—Speaking before the convention of the National Association of Letter Carriers, Representative James M. Mead, of Buffalo, N. Y., chairman of the house postoffice committee, said that strong efforts will be made to cut postoffice department expenses other than salaries. He said the plan was meeting with support of the Roosevelt administration.

Recommendations which Mead announced included restoration of two-cent letter postage, elimination in five years of all special help now given to air lines and erection of hundreds of buildings. These buildings, Mead said, are needed in the postal service to save exorbitant rentals of private property.

Mead explained that since 75 per cent of postoffice department costs consisted of wages, the object was to trim every possible dollar from the remaining 25 per cent. He promised strong congressional support to the fight to regain salary levels which had been reduced under the economy act.

Give a girl an inch and she'll make a dress out of it.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

How dim is the intelligence of humankind at times was shown most graphically at a recent gathering of public works officials of seven leading industrial states. They came together to kick against the federal government's wage scale of 45 cents per hour for common labor, as it is wrongly called.

These official gentlemen, harking back to the old "law of supply and be damned" (or was it "supply and demand?"), said they could get plenty of labor at around 22 cents in their home states and they said it would raise the very dickens if such a high rate were paid. Of course they had visions of "cheap wages" for their factories going glimmering.

And then, when these gentlemen got through beefing, what a wallop they got from the representative of Uncle Sam. This man, one Henry M. Waite, deputy public works administrator, said things in a way to "blow your hat off."

Mr. Waite said the government's contribution to local enterprises was for the purpose of helping the states put their unemployed back to work. He added, with vigor and color, that if the states and cities aren't willing to do their part "then we haven't gone to hell far enough yet."

These assembled state representatives were told that if the present recovery effort fails, through local unwillingness or any other reason, "God knows what is going to happen this winter." He said labor "has had the pants licked off of it" and "didn't have a chance for a square deal." The answer, he said, was to cut the week to 30 hours and double the wages.

Now, when a government representative goes abroad into the day and into the night talking like that, verily we have come upon days worth observing. It's a time to be alive.

What labor has to do is to organize and to show capability in its organization and in its new power. The great front door into the very house of opportunity is open unto us.

The logic of events is with those who are seeking to curb the evil powers in our civilization. Name calling is of no use. What is of use is to tear away the things that worked badly and to build institutions that will work for humanity.

To this job there comes no hand so well fitted as the hand of the organized labor movement.

Denver labor has a new creed that ought to bring big results, if faithfully observed. It is: Think organization; talk organization; do organization. Delegates to the meeting that adopted the slogan urged that each trade unionist consider himself an organizer charged with the duty of enlisting under the banner of unionism at least one unorganized man or woman.

"That," as one delegate put it, "is the way to organize the city of Denver; the job is too big for a few officials and paid organizers of the labor movement to handle."

Labor in every city could adopt Denver's creed and follow it with profit. Organizing America's millions of workers is too big a task for a few; it needs the enthusiastic help of every trade unionist.

Baltimore has taken a step surprising in a community with such a reputation for liberality and tolerance. The city's fire board has issued an order forbidding firemen from joining or retaining membership in any "outside organization." The order followed efforts to unionize the firemen.

The Baltimore fire board's action is harking back to the archaic idea that firemen and other public servants should not be permitted to organize, an idea that is entirely at variance with sentiment now sweeping the nation. The board ignores the fact that firemen are organized in many cities throughout the land in the International Association of Firefighters and that organization has detracted not a whit from their efficiency and general usefulness. On the contrary, it has been found of benefit and has met with general approval.

BRICKLAYRS WIN AGAIN

New York Court Decision on Arbitration Award Gives Union Second Big Victory.

New York, Aug. 30.—An arbitration proceeding between unions and employers, where neither witnesses nor arbitrators are sworn is a common law proceeding and its actions are not subject to court review, in the view of Supreme Court Justice Hofstader, in a ruling just handed down sustaining the award in the case of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International union and the Mason Builders' association.

The court considered that the only point at issue was whether and when the award was actually delivered. The employers contended that an award favorable to them was delivered July 15, whereas the final award, almost entirely favorable to the union, was delivered Aug. 5.

The court held that unless the first so-called award was actually delivered formally to the principals there was no delivery and no award and that the arbitrators, or a majority of them, had a perfect right to change their views, even if they had signed an agreement, providing there had been no actual delivery of that agreement or award.

The ruling constitutes a second smashing victory for the union. Whether the employers will appeal is not known. The arbitration presented a dozen or more issues, including wages, hours, sub-contracting and the jurisdiction of certain local unions.

CLEVELAND EDITORIAL WRITERS ORGANIZE UNDER RECOVERY ACT

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 30.—Reporters, deskmen and other editorial workers on the three Cleveland daily newspapers have organized under the National Recovery Act to improve their economic status. The new organization, formed at a meeting called by a committee of nine, is named the Cleveland Editorial Employes' association.

Lloyd White, labor editor of the Press, who was secretary of the meeting declared that reporters and editorial workers have no voice with the Recovery Administration at Washington. A statement distributed by the committee of nine declared that if editorial workers do not move promptly to protect themselves against what may be expected of the permahent code they will get only the "jackal's share" after the "new deal" is applied to their industry.

I. L. Kenen, political writer for the News, declared newspaper workers have accepted drastic pay reductions and longer working hours during the depression, and that the time had come to demand better conditions.

The motion for organization was adopted by unanimous vote.

Three hundred workers in the circulation departments of Cleveland newspapers have formed a union under the name of the Newspaper Distributor and Circulation union. It is affiliated with the Cleveland Federation of Labor and the American Federation of Labor.

GREAT UNION TIDE REPORTED TO LABOR'S EXECUTIVE BOARD

Washington, Sept. 14.—A tremendous rising tide of organization sentiment, which has already added more than 1,000,000 new members and 350 directly affiliated local unions to the ranks of the American Federation of Labor, was reported to the Executive Council of the federation as it met in Washington for the last meeting previous to the annual convention in October.

Reports from the organizing campaign, which is being pressed in all sections of the country, were received and plans were made for extension of the drive. The Executive Council took steps for the advancement of the new organizations and made plans for according to workers everywhere the widest opportunity to organize of their own free will. The exercise of this right is guaranteed under Section 7 of the national industrial recovery act, the council emphasized.

Special consideration was given to the recovery act and to the development of codes of fair practice applicable to all lines of industry.

Work was begun on the annual report of the council. The report covers the administrative work of the past year and all the activities of the federation and its departments.

Preparations were also made for the dedication and unveiling of the Samuel Gompers memorial in Washington, which will be dedicated on Saturday, Oct. 7, during the A. F. of L. convention. President Roosevelt will be invited to participate in the unveiling ceremonies. It is expected that many thousands of visitors, members of organized labor and their friends will throng the city for the dedication ceremonies.

POSTOFFICE FURLOUGHS TO BE ENDED SEPTEMBER 30

Chicago, Sept. 14.—The National Federation of Postoffice Clerks, in convention here, was told by First Assistant Postmaster-General Joseph C. O'Mahoney that the postoffice department will discontinue its general furlough policy on Sept. 30.

O'Mahoney gave increasing revenues and success of economy measures as reasons for the decision. He said this year's postal deficit will be the lowest since 1929.

Postal employes were given nine days' furlough without pay during the first three months of this fiscal year, in addition to the general 15 per cent pay cut. The furloughs had been expected to continue until next July.

NOTICE CITY TAX PAYERS

The city administration, fully appreciating the fact that due to conditions a great many of our taxpayers could not pay their taxes, has endeavored in every way possible to show every consideration to the taxpayer.

Under the law, 1931 taxes should have been sued upon Oct. 1, 1932, but inspired by a desire to prevent additional court costs being levied upon the taxpayer these suits have never been filed.

Under the same law 1932 taxes go to the Delinquent Tax Attorney for suit on Oct. 1.

The time has come when we have no choice in the matter except to enforce the law and make every effort possible to collect taxes. This government cannot function unless these taxes are collected, debt services cannot be paid, school teachers cannot be paid, firemen and policemen cannot be paid and other functions of goveernment cannot be carried on unless taxes are paid.

We must collect the money to run this government or suspend government, and we desire to give notice that lists are now being made up of delinquent taxes for 1931 and 1932 to be turned over to the Delinquent Tax Attorney on Oct. 1, with instructions to immediately bring suit. There is no other alternative, as much as we regret it.

There is an unusually heavy delinquency in paving assessments. These bonds are maturing and have to be protected by the city; and all delinquent paving taxes and street widening taxes will be turned over to the Delinquent Tax Attorney along with other taxes.

ALVIN SHIPP,
City Treasurer.

George Is Again Named President Of Postal Clerks

Re-elected for Sixth Term at Chicago Convention—Gilbert E. Hyatt Chosen Legislative Agent and Editor.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—Leo E. George, of Washington, was re-elected president and Gilbert E. Hyatt, also of Washington, was elected legislative representative and editor, at the closing session of the convention of the National Federation of Post Office Clerks here.

President George was elected for his sixth consecutive term. He was born in Medford, Wis., June 13, 1883, and served 18 years in the Chicago post office before his first election to the presidency of the organization.

Hyatt was formerly president of the federation, previous to George's incumbency. For some years he was a labor reporter, doing brilliant and notable work during the textile strikes at Marion, N. C., and other southern mill centers.

The convention, the largest and most enthusiastic ever held by the federation, adopted as its paramount issue the restoration of salaries and a program of major objectives as follows:

Substitute relief; organization of all post office clerks in one organization; 30-hour week without reduction of salary; liberalization of retirement law, including annuities to dependents; seniority; court of civil service appeals and instruction to national executive board to seek increase in salaries commensurate with increase in living costs.

NRA Is Endorsed.

The National Recovery Administration received the unanimous endorsement of the convention.

Atlanta, Ga., was chosen as the convention city for 1935 over Washington.

LABOR CONVENTION SPEAKER LAUDS LABOR PRESS AND ILNS

Chicago, Sept. 14.—A warm tribute to the labor press and to International Labor News Service was paid by Joseph A. Wise, Chicago correspondent of ILNS, in speaking before the annual convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor.

Mr. Wise recalled that the last four years have been most trying to the labor papers and pointed out that they have kept going by only great sacrifice. "I know editors who have gone hungry that there might be a labor press," he said. "I know many who have gone in debt, that they might not have to haul down the flag."

"Today you need your labor press," he added. "Today the doors of opportunity are open to every organizer and to every union man. New members are coming in by the thousands and unless you have a labor press that can educate these thousands to the principles of true trade unionism you will be gathering in merely another crop of war babies who will not know how to carry on the movement and who will not know how to stand firm and true in time of stress."

Mr. Wise told how International Labor News Service was started under the personal direction of Samuel Gompers and how it has served the labor press for more than ten years. "The labor press has been made better by the existence of this splendid news service," he said. "Its record is beyond reproach. Its policy has never wavered from the letter and spirit of the policies laid down by the American Federation of Labor. I think I have the right to say that it is regarded by President Green as an arm of strength to the labor movement and an agency of genuine service."

Charges of Discrimination Against Union Workers Will Be Probed by Labor Board

Washington, Aug. 24.—The national labor board, appointed by President Roosevelt to adjust labor controversies arising under both the president's nationwide blanket agreement and the specific industrial codes as they are applied, announced that it had decided to deal directly with company officials in cases where workers charge they have been discriminated against and discharged because of union activities.

Dr. Leo Wolman, acting as chairman, said that many complaints had been received, particularly from the coal fields of West Virginia and Kentucky. The first step will be to submit the charges by individuals, groups and organizations, to the company with a request for information. When that has been received, Dr. Wolman said, the board will be ready to act if necessary.

50 NEW TRADE UNIONS ORGANIZED IN FLORIDA

Miami, Fla.—Under the protection of the labor section of the national recovery act, guaranteeing the right of the workers to organize into unions of their own choosing without interference from employers, plus the militant organizing campaign conducted by the Florida State Federation of Labor, fifty new local unions have been organized in Florida, according to Wendell C. Heaton, president of the federation. In addition the membership of the older local unions has materially increased.

On his return from a tour of the state Mr. Heaton said he found the workers eager to secure the benefits of the trade union movement.

"We are going to keep up this campaign," he declared, "until there is no longer any necessity for it. It is the biggest drive ever made by organized workers of Florida. It is different from other movements of the sort and will benefit employers as well as workers, largely because the national recovery act codes practically do away with the possibility of disputes over hours and wages.

"It is an appeal for the workers to help themselves under the recovery act and to put themselves in position to help their employers.

"One of a number of ways in which they can help employers is by policing—keeping check on unscrupulous competitors to help enforce the national recovery act. I think labor can be of inestimable value in enforcing the act because it is in a position to do it."

YELLOW-DOG-CONTRACT BOSSES ORGANIZE CHARGE ON THE NRA

Chicago.—Representatives of 500 trade associations organized here the Council of American Industries and planned for a charge on Washington, where they hope to induce the national recovery administration to ignore the plain terms of the national recovery act and recognize the notorious "open shop" and its closely associated yellow dog contract as representing adequately the will of the workers.

"Individual bargaining" is the slogan with which delegates from the organization formed here at the instance of the American Plan Open Shop conference will try to pry NRA officials from their allegiance to the collective bargaining provision of the recovery act, and the lever they will attempt to use is the alleged political power of 500 business organizations scattered over the country.

HAVANA DOCK WORKERS WIN UNION RECOGNITION STRIKE

Havana. — The 3,000 stevedores, longshoremen and other harbor workers who tied up shipping and interrupted commerce generally in this capital have compelled the employers to recognize their union and comply with other demands, and have returned to work.

The employers yielded to the demand for union recognition and job rotation to spread employment only after supplies had run so low that, in the printing industry, for instance, two papers had been forced to suspend publication and others were on the verge of suspension for lack of paper and other materials.

It is rumored that pressure of the new Cespedes administration was brought to bear on the employers, as the interruption of trade, it is estimated, had cost the government $1,000,000 in customs revenues, an amount that threatened to increase largely.

NEW YORK LABOR PLANS JOB INSURANCE DRIVE

Syracuse, N. Y.—The New York State Federation of Labor convention here decided to throw the full weight of the federation behind a drive for unemployment insurance.

The convention supported the recommendations of President John Sullivan for this fight and for a preelection compaign for support of Assemblymen favorable to labor legislation.

The convention went on record also as supporting a proposed state bond issue of $60,000,000 for temporary emergency relief.

It unanimously supported a resolution calling on Gov. Lehman to restore to the old age pension fund $500,000 sliced from it in the 1933 appropriation.

Edward Flory, president of the International Hotel and Restaurant Workers' union, stressed the need of labor organization to make permanent the advantages being gained for the work through the NRA.

Andrew J. Doyle, assistant chief mediator of the state labor department, urged union men in the building trades to report to him any discrepancies they might find in payrolls, thus avoiding sub-standard wages.

Bakers Are Enthusiastic Over Increased Membership

Chicago.—From Lynn, Mass., in the east, to Los Angeles on the Pacific coast; from Milwaukee on the Great Lakes to Birmingham in the far sunny south, reports of successful organizing and membership drives are pouring in here to headquarters of the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International of America.

Ten new shops have been organized in a brief period and nineteen locals report large membership accretions. Los Angeles, Lincoln, Neb.; Clinton, Ia.; Oakland and San Francisco, Cal., and Birmingham, Ala., furnish the banner reports.

Anderson Textile Strike Probed by U. S. Arbitrator

Anderson, S. C.—The United States department of labor has taken a hand in the strike at the Appleton mills here, where 850 employes are out demanding decent wages and working conditions.

Secretary of Labor Perkins has sent a department investigator, E. H. Dunigan, to try to obtain an equitable composition of the dispute between the workers and employers.

The mill owners have created a difficult situation for him by announcing emphatically that they will not accede to the workers' demands which, after a conference, they termed "exorbitant."

Green's Labor Day Speech Goes Over Radio Network

Washington.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, will deliver a Labor Day address at Akron, O., at 2 o'clock Eastern standard time. He will speak under the auspices of the Akron Central Labor union. The speech will be broadcast over a national hook-up by the National Broadcasting company.

Preparations for a celebration on a large scale are being made by the Central Labor union. They have secured the use of the Armory for the meeting and they are also making provisions for broadcasting the address to overflow groups on the outside.

Relieves Women's Pains

"I was very thin and pale," writes Mrs. F. H. Scott, of Roanoke, Va. "I suffered from weakness and a severe pain in my back. This pain unnerved me, and I did not feel like doing my work. I did not care to go places, and felt worn, tired, day after day.

"My mother had taken Cardui, and on seeing my condition she advised me to try it. I have never regretted doing so. I took three bottles and it built me up. I gained in weight, my color was better and the pain left my back. I am stronger than I had been in some time."

Cardui, the purely vegetable medicine which so many women take and recommend, is sold by local druggists.

GREEN URGES FEDERAL WORKERS TO MILITANT WAR ON PAY CUTS

Washington, Sept. 14.—Speaking before the convention of the American Federation of Government Employes here, President William Green of the American Federation of Labor urged a militant counter attack to win restoration of old pay rates, cut the last two years in the name of "economy."

Green promised the federal workers the support of organized labor in fighting for a 30-hour week in the government service. He charged the government has suffered financially and lowered efficiency standards by wage cuts, dismissals and furloughs and called on federal workers to "fight back."

"I am not one of those who believes we are 'doing our part' by accepting pay reduction from the richest, most powerful government in the world," Green said.

Twice during the opening sessions, the National Federation of Federal Employes was attacked for its secession from the American Federation of Labor. Replying to the attack of President Luther C. Steward of the unaffiliated organization, Green charged Steward with complacently accepting the 15 per cent cut. He charged the National Federation, which seceded from the American Federation of Labor two years ago, with "isolating" itself from the organized workers of the country.

John Arthur Shaw, retiring president of the American Federation of Government Employes, opened the attack on the unaffiliated National Federation of Federal Employes. He declared it an "autocratic body, more or less under control of a monarch" and defended Green from Steward's onslaughts.

President Green suggested the following legislative program for federal workers:

1. A six-hour day and a five-day week in government, without reduction in pay.
2. Immediate restoration of the 15 per cent cut.
3. A dismissal wage for government employes.
4. Representation on the Civil Service Commission.
5. A court of appeals for federal workers.
6. Optional retirement.
7. Scientific classification legislation.

Green plans to lead the executive council of the A. F. of L. to the White House in the near future to ask abrogation of the 15 per cent pay cut.

LABOR HEAD FLAYS HARRIMAN FOR "OPEN SHOP" OUTBURST

Chicago, Sept. 14.—Red hot resentment was expressed in trade union circles here in reference to the foul blow delivered against the National Industrial Recovery Administration by Henry L. Harriman, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, on Labor Day. He threw a monkey wrench into the machinery by broadcasting an appeal to all chamber members to stand shoulder to shoulder for the open shop and in opposition to an interpretation of the labor clauses in the recovery act, which, he charged, would be writing a mandate for a closed shop into law.

It was not so much what Mr. Harriman did as the way he did it, and his evident intent that aroused the ire of trade union officers here.

"First of all," said John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor, "Mr. Harriman showed extremely bad taste and a venomous intent by choosing Labor Day as an occasion to vent his spleen. Mr. Harriman apparently has been unable to make good his promises to his members throughout the country that he can control the situation at Washington and he is passing the buck back to them.

"The worst feature of Mr. Harriman's action is his evident desire to throw confusion and demoralization into local Chambers of Commerce throughout the country just as a large number of them have completed formation of local councils designed to help in the administration of the National Industrial Recovery Act and codes operative thereunder.

"Mr. Harriman, by his reprehensible action in this instance, has placed himself outside the pale of decent citizenship."

Painters Union Cuts Dues In Organization Campaign

Lafayette, Ind.—The general executive board of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America has reduced the initiation fee as an aid to more effectively organizing the workers so that full advantage can be taken of the collective bargaining clause of the national recovery act. The text of the board's decision, as sent to unions throughout the country, follows:

"That each and every local union and district council of our brotherhood be immediately ordered and instructed to inaugurate an intensive and continuous organizing campaign until Jan. 1, 1934, at a maximum initiation fee of $5."

This order was signed and sent out by Clarence E. Swick, general secretary-treasurer.

WINDOW CLEANERS ON STRIKE

Philadelphia.—Following the breaking off of negotiations between the employers and the union, 300 Philadelphia window cleaners went on strike. Demands of the workers include a $25 minimum wage, a 40-hour week and union recognition.

Hosiery Workers' Union To Build Model Apartment

Philadelphia, Aug. 31.—Delegates to the annual convention of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, in session at the Rittenhouse hotel, adopted resolutions speeding the union's model housing project on the way.

The resolutions officially indorsing the project provided necessary legal step for formation of a corporation to construct the three-story tenement for which the government under the public works section of N. R. A. has appropriated more than $800,000.

The resolutions were adopted following an address by Oscar Stonorov, of the firm of Kastner & Stonorov, architect of the project, detailing the need and benefits of the project. Stonorov also disclosed that the site of the model apartments is a block bounded by Huntingdon Park avenue, Bristol, H and I Streets and the name of the housing corporation will be the N. I. R. A. Housing corporation. Stonorov said organization of the union's housing corporation will be immediately formed.

Emil Rieve, international president of the American Federation of Full Fashioned Hosiery Workers, will be president of the housing corporation. Other officials of the union will fill official posts. Directors of the corporation will be chosen by the union.

Government May Prosecute Plotters Against Wage Act

Washington, Aug. 30.—The department of justice has expressed the opinion that two or more persons who conspire to violate provisions of the Bacon-Davis wage act may be prosecuted for conspiracy. The Bacon-Davis act requires payment of the prevailing rate of wages on government projects.

In an opinion on the subject submitted to Corporation Counsel William W. Bride, of the District of Columbia, Assistant Solicitor-General Angus D. McLean wrote:

"It now occurs to us, and we submit for your consideration, that while this statute makes no provision for criminal penalty of violations thereof, a conspiracy of two or more persons to violate this act would constitute a criminal conspiracy within the provisions of Section 5440 of the revised statutes, which makes it a criminal offense to 'conspire to defraud the United States in any manner or for any purpose.'"

Complaints have been frequent in Washington that contractors have been cheating their employes out of the prevailing rate of wages called for by the act.

Federal Funds to Employ Jobless Teachers To Educate Illiterates Indorsed by Green

Washington. — Enthusiastic commendation of the action of Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator, in making federal funds available to pay work relief wages to unemployed teachers competent to teach adults to read and write English was expressed by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

"If the twelve million illiterates in the United States were able to read," Mr. Green said, "they would rejoice to learn through recent newspaper announcements that the federal government is at last ready to make a determined effort to meet their problem.

"The announcement of the federal relief administration that it is prepared to pay work relief wages to unemployed teachers competent to teach adults unable to read and write English marks an important step forward, not only in providing a creative form of employment for a substantial number of the 80,000 idle teachers, but also provides a basis for a broad program of adult education in America.

"Each day it becomes increasingly clear that the success of the program of economic reconstruction, sponsored by the new administration, depends upon a program of continuing education for the whole citizenship.

"The education of the adult worker, both as a producer and a consumer, is imperative, if he is to do his part in restoring a larger measure of well-being to the people of this country.

"This action on the part of the relief administration implies a continuing program of education, after the first stage of adult literacy has been attained.

"Because these twelve million illiterates cannot give expression to their own needs it is most appropriate that the American labor movement, as represented by the American Federation of Labor, should speak in their behalf.

"If they could state their desires in writing, they would ask for instruction which would enable them to understand their position as wage-earners and as citizens. Because they are inarticulate, we must not deny them this broader opportunity for education.

"In making provision for their educational needs at this time, we must at the same time lay the foundation for an integrated system of education, providing for their cultural as well as their vocational need. With the shorter working day, this combination has become indispensable."

JOHNSON WARNS BLUE EAGLE BOOTLEGGERS

Washington.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, wearied of apparently authentic "racket" stories brought to his attention issued emphatic warning that any and all Blue Eagle "bootleggers" will be severely penalized as rapidly as he can catch up with them.

Gen. Johnson was ired by reports that racketeers were printing pamphlets and booklets and selling them to "suckers" on the implication that the national recovery administration was sponsoring them. Also there were reports that cadging newspapers were trying to wheedle unsuspecting advertisers into paying to have their names printed in so-called "honor lists."

McDonald is now publishing a weekly "throw-sheet," and employed an out-of-town operator in preference to a Chattanoogan.

McDonald says: "President Hoover made a mistake in 1929 when he asked that wages be maintained. If he had cut wages 50% in 1929 the depression would now be over."

DO YOU BELIEVE THAT?

Go to your Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

HOLD EAGLE IN ONE HAND, SLAVE WARRANT IN OTHER

Suits for Lost Time May Be Filed on Behalf of Workers Discriminated Against by "Patriots." Labor Men See Parallel With War-Time Attitude of Chattanooga Bourbons---Organization Wave Continues Unabated.

Local chiselers, becoming more bold as the machinery of the NRA grinds slowly in the great effort of the United States government to bring back prosperity, are facing prosecution in the civil courts, according to a suggestion made this week by T. R. Cuthbert, voluntary organizer for the American Federation of Labor and accredited representative in this territory for the United Textile Workers of America.

Reporting to textile headquarters on the large number of discharge cases growing out of efforts of the workers to co-operate with their government in the working out of various codes, Mr. Cuthbert said:

I propose that if and when these discharge cases come up for disposition, and we win, I shall thereupon enter suit against the offending employer for all back pay of illegally discharged employes. I shall also enter suit for damages done by such unfair and illegal discharges.

Local employers, displaying the Blue Eagle and shouting from the housetops their patriotism, are "lying awake nights" in an effort to figure out new ways to defeat the purposes of the act, local labor officials charge, and shrewd but unscrupulous attorneys are burning the midnight oil with their plans to earn "fat" salaries from their designing employers by suggesting schemes to circumvent the law.

Employes in many different lines are being discharged, for no other reason than that they have endeavored to take advantage of the provisions of the recovery act which guarantee to workers the right to speak for themselves in the working out of the "new deal." Some employers, it is pointed out, are brazenly open in the plot to defeat the act in this manner, while others are more subtle, and attempt to cover their hypocrisy by assigning various reasons for discharging employes.

Local working men recalled this week that certain mill owners had brazenly stated that "the government could not run their business," and before they would submit to organization in their plants they would close them down. Others, possibly mindful of the Biblical injunction, "Let not thy right hand know what thy left hand doeth," are waving an Eagle in one hand and "sticking a knife in the backs" of their faithful employes with the other.

All manner of subterfuge is being employed, it is said; petty discriminations and intimidations are being practiced through arrogant straw bosses, and petty tyranny is being used against employes guilty of doing what their government has said they may do.

The local compliance board, in a letter to Washington authorities this week, expressed the belief that the Recovery Act has resulted in more workers being discharged here than have been employed by reason of the act. It is believed that conditions are worse in Chattanooga than in other places, but the workers as a rule have been patient under the unfair and unpatriotic tactics of industrial rulers.

Chattanogans are drawing a parallel between the present situation and that immediately prior to and during the world war, when a certain type of local employer figuratively held aloft a flag in one

Expect Passing Of Home-Store Throw-Sheet

Rumored McDonald to Replace Experiment With Regular Handbills.

Demise of the throw-sheet printed for the past several weeks by Roy McDonald, grocer, baker, dairyman, tire dealer, druggist, printer, publisher and self-styled individualist, as an advertising scheme for the so-called "Home Stores," which Mr. McDonald "sold" to the individual managers shortly after the code went into effect, was forecast this week through a rumor that the merchant prince has decided to replace the throw-sheet with handbills which contain nothing but advertisements for his various business enterprises.

Local business men and others have felt from the beginning that the Home Stores' throw-sheet was an expensive toy, and its suspension has been expected ever since it became evident that Chattanooga advertisers did not approve of the policies of McDonald with reference to labor, and practically unanimously, when their business was solicited, declined to patronize the "effort" of the ambitious merchant.

Mr. McDonald employed an out-of-town operator in the face of the fact that local printers had been victims of the depression and had suffered from unemployment.

Labor World readers will remember that McDonald told a committee which called upon him that he was an individualist, and that anyone who works for him will come to work at such time as he orders, and will quit by the same sign.

President Hoover, he said, made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders to keep wages up as an aid to prosperity. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer-baker-dairyman - printer - publisher-individualist averred, we would now be out of the depression, and further, he held, we will never be out until wages are further and further cut.

Workers Are Eager To Join A. F. of L.

Freed from Employers' Intimidation, Toilers Have Established 3,000 Trade Unions, Morrison Says.

Washington.—Working men and women throughout the country are joining the American Federation of Labor in unprecedented numbers to get the benefits of unionization under the NRA program, Frank Morrison, secretary of the organization, declared at the annual banquet of the American Federation of Government Employes at the Hamilton hotel here.

Mr. Morrison, who was given an ovation by the banqueters, said:

"Since the national industrial recovery administration started operations, the American Federation of Labor has issued charters to 3,000 new unions. Men and women are affiliating with the A. F. of L. by the thousands and all government employes should enroll under the banner of organized labor at this time"

11,000,000 Jobless.

Mr. Morrison declared that although 2,600,000 unemployed persons have been given jobs since last March, there are still 11,000,000 idle, and the A. F. of L. will exert every possible effort to restore them to the wage-earning class.

He evoked applause when he referred to the successful conference which members of the A. F. of L. had with President Roosevelt regarding early lifting of the 15 per cent reduction in federal employes' salaries. Secretary Morrison expressed belief that government workers should benefit by the NRA program by a shorter work week with no reduction in pay.

TRAINMEN CALL SENATOR LONG LABOR'S FRIEND

Local Lodge Boosts Louisiana Solon.

APPROVE PROPOSED BILL OF "KING FISH"

Secretary Brien Seeks Support Tennessee Delegation for Curb on Wealth.

Senator Huey Long, object of considerable ridicule recently by the daily press, has a local champion, at least, in the Brotherhood of Trainmen, which at its regular monthly meeting instructed Secretary-Treasurer J. M. Brien to advise the Tennessee representatives in congress that that organization approves the policies of the Louisiana solon, particularly with reference to a bill introduced by him in the last session which would "prevent the wealth of the United States from being placed in the hands of a few, through a method of taxation on excessive fortunes and wealth."

The bill referred to provides for limiting personal fortunes to $7,000,000, and was published in The Labor World last winter.

The Trainmen declare that they have followed Senator Long's career, have always found him to be a true friend of labor, and at all times championing the cause of the common people.

Secretary Brien's communication, under date of Sept. 18, addressed to Senators McKellar and Bachman and Congressman McReynolds, follows:

During the last session of congress Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, introduced a bill proposing to decentralize the wealth of America. This bill is generally known as the "Long Plan," and its purpose is to prevent the wealth of the United States from being placed in the hands of the few, through a method of taxation on excessive fortunes and wealth.

Lodge No. 215, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, in regular session assembled Sunday, Sept. 3, 1933, instructed the undersigned to express to you gentlemen our approval of this bill and urge you to support same when it is again introduced in the next congress.

Many of us "Trainmen" have followed Senator Long's career since he entered public life and we have always found him to be a true friend to labor and at all times championing the cause of the common people. We regret to notice the campaign being waged in the "paid press" endeavoring to besmirch and belittle this friend of labor, postal employes, Veterans of Foreign Wars, the farmer and the common people in general, and we sincerely urge each of you gentlemen to support the above mentioned bill in the next congress.

Yours respectfully,
J. M. BRIEN,
Sec.-Treas., B. R. T.,
Lodge No. 215.

Local Agencies Blamed by Ickes For Work Delays

Secretary Denies Red Tape Holds Up Program and Says Many Communities Seem Unable to Get Jobs Started.

Washington, Sept. 21.—Replying to charges that the public works program is not providing employment with sufficient speed, Secretary of the Interior Ickes, public works administrator, told reporters "the major delays now are caused by the inability of local agencies to put to work the money we have already allotted."

"Some of these delays," he declared, "are the result of political sniping and others are due to the negligence of municipalities in making applications."

Secretary Ickes denied emphatically that there is bureaucracy or red tape in the public works administration. Referring to the charges that the public works program is not putting men to work, he said he was not going to take this criticism "sitting down."

"I have taken the telephone in hand myself," he added, "in an attempt to stimulate public works in localities which apparently were unable to get them under way."

Public works officials say that outside interferences are holding up work. They class these as political efforts to cause uneconomic expenditures, inefficient applications, dilatory tactics by recipients of funds in letting contracts, attempts of contractors to eliminate competitive bidding, failure of many communities to find out what information and action is required by the public works administration.

Union Growth Worries Rayon Manufacturers

New York.—Rayon weavers and converters are worried for fear the strikes of union silk workers in Paterson and Pennsylvania to convince the national recovery administration of the injustice of wage provisions in the code submitted by the Silk Association of America may spread to the rayon industry.

The condition in the south, where some of the locals already have petitioned President McMahon, of the United Textile Workers, for permission to strike, is especially disturbing to the employers. The union is known to be rapidly lining up workers throughout the southern mills, where formerly union organizers were given short shift in the company-controlled mill villages.

The big fellows are particularly concerned over what they term the disloyalty of some of the smaller manufacturers in allying themselves with the unions by suggesting that silk and rayon mill wages be set higher than in the cotton mills under the textile code.

Judge Finds Pickets Guilty of Contempt

Long Branch, N. J.—Vice-Chancellor Maja Leon Berry adjudged five workers guilty of contempt of court. The vice-chancellor claimed the men had picketed the Sigmund Eisner uniform plant at Red Bank in violation of an injunction issued Aug. 23. Ninety-two other men charged with violating the same injunction were ordered to appear before the vice-chancellor on Sept. 28.

If the vice-chancellor were a federal judge he would be subject to impeachment for violation of the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction law which prohibits federal courts from issuing injunctions in labor disputes as against the public policy of the United States.

The fact that state judges of the Berry type persist in issuing these injunctions in violation of the pronounced policy of the federal government makes it all the more important for the organized labor movement to see to it that state laws are enacted in conformity with the spirit of the federal statute.

M'KELLAR, BACHMAN DEPLORE DELAY ON COVE CREEK WORK

Join McReynolds in Support of Labor's Contentions.

SENIOR SENATOR DEPLORES INACTIVITY OF BOARD

"If I Had My Way," He Declares, "Work Would Already Be Started"---Bachman Expresses Disappointment in Lack of Progress Toward Employment of Needy Workers---"Red Tape" Continues to Block Actual Operations.

Senators Nathan L. Bachman and Kenneth D. McKellar this week joined Congressman Sam D. McReynolds in support of the contention of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council that work on the Cove Creek dam should be started immediately, and the charges of local labor men that "red tape" is responsible for the delay is fully substantiated by the replies to letters addressed the representatives by Secretary Cuthbert on behalf of the local Central Body.

"If I had had the power to control it," Senator McKellar remarked, "it would have been started long ago."

Senator Bachman, by letter, and Congressman McReynolds, through personal contact and in interviews in the local press, have approved the position of Chattanooga workers, and each has expressed his disappointment that the work has been delayed, and his opinion that no further time should be lost in assuring employment for distressed workers in this territory.

Labor World readers will recall that Prof. Morgan, chairman of the board, told Mr. McReynolds that the Cove Creek project is "not a charitable affair," or words to that effect, and the reply of the Third district representative that at least no harm could come from giving needed employment to hungry people.

Senator McKellar's letter to Mr. Cuthbert, indicating the strong stand of the senior senator, contained the following paragraphs:

I am deeply grieved at the delay in the building of Cove Creek dam and the transmission line between the two dams and the consequent deprivations to the unemployment of labor that ought to be there. I have strongly protested along this line. I think actual work should begin immediately, both on the transmission lines and on the dam. We have at least three splendid months in which this work could go on before the winter season, and there is no reason on earth why it should not be carried on.

Thank you so much for your letter. I shall do everything in my power to get operations started at the earliest possible moment, and if I had had the power to control it it would have been started long ago.

South Carolina Textile Labor Disputes Board Completed

Greenville, S. C.—H. H. Willis, dean of the textile industry school of Clemson college, has been named by B. E. Geer, of the cotton textile national industrial relations board, to represent the public on the South Carolina industrial relations board to which all wage and labor disputes within the state under the cotton textile industry code will be first referred.

Earl R. Britton, of Columbia, is labor's representative, and J. E. Shrine, head of a local engineering firm, represents the employers on the state board. Disputes this group may be unable to settle will be carried to the national board.

HOTEL, RESTAURANT WORKERS MAKE GAIN

Cincinnati.—The big organization campaign of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes and Beverage Dispensers' International Alliance resulted in the formation of thirty-three new local unions in August, Secretary-Treasurer Bob Hesketh announces.

Since the campaign began on March 1, hundreds of members have been added to old locals by the admittance of new members and reinstatement of old ones.

FURNITURE WORKERS STRIKE.

Stratford, Ont.—Following refusal of the employers to grant higher wages and better working conditions, more than 600 workers in Stratford furniture factories struck. Public sentiment was strongly in favor of the strikers.

Textile Workers' Union Gains in South Carolina

Greenville, S. C.—More than 6,000 South Carolina mill workers have already been enrolled in the United Textile Workers of America, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, with membership rolling up like the traditional snowball, according to John Peel, general representative of the United Textile Workers.

Locals already have been organized here and at Spartanburg, Gaffney, Anderson, Columbia, Abbeville, Pelser, Easley, Seneca, with Rock Hill and Greenwood next in line. Some 3,000 new members have been enrolled in the Greater Greenville area alone.

Anti-Picketing and Boycott Laws Suspended in Colorado

Denver, Colo.—The recent special session of the Colorado legislature suspended for two years Colorado's anti-picketing and boycott laws. The bill also repealed for the same two-year period the anti-blacklisting and anti-trust laws of the state.

These laws were originally enacted in an attempt to hamstring the effective application of the union policy of refusing to patronize concerns well known for their outspoken and persistent opposition to trade union living standards.

The legislature believed the laws were a barrier in the way of the national recovery program and consequently suspended them. It is the hope of the organized labor movement of the state that the suspension will result in the absolute repeal of these obnoxious anti-labor statutes.

What Next!

A "baby" combine, which cuts and threshes wheat and other grains has been put on the market, designed to give the small farmer the benefits of mechanized operation. It is fast, low-priced, cheap to run and can be used in fields where the big combines could hardly turn around. Low pressure tires are responsible for the low price and high speed, as they make possible a lighter construction than big combines. The new combine harvests and threshes 30 acres of wheat, oats, soy beans or similar crops in a day.

Wisdom

The labor union is not a perfect organization to cure all the ills of labor, but it has given such help to wage-earners as could have been attained in no other way.—Garriga.

Labor's Objective.

"What are you fellows after?" is doubtless what some of the employers would like to demand an answer to from the spokesmen of the American organized labor movement, as they appear in the code hearings these days.

The objective of organized labor——? Well, it is probably like the bird mentioned by Omar Khayyam:

"The bird is on the wing."

Fifty years ago the objective of a newly forming American labor movement was the eight-hour day, and that was a long step ahead—from a twelve or a ten-hour day. This year, with the eight-hour day not yet realized throughout all the industries of the nation, although pretty generally accepted as standard labor-time since the steel industry began doing what it had declared was impossible—this year, in the presence of the new machinery and processes of mass production, the thirty-hour week is the objective, immediately.

But it may as well be admitted, that this is a movable target. No man has as yet calculated the exact relationship between the present productive capacity of machinery and the available man-and-woman power in industry, agriculture, trade and commerce. If and when we can get a fairly clear picture of what America can produce in terms of what America wants, and the productive rate of our modern equipment, then we can stop—for the passing moment only, the momentary objective of the American working people in the standard of the hours of labor.

Into what terms of economic, political and other forms of social power this will be translated en route, the American labor movement so far deems to be more or less incidental. But the standard of LIVING, that is and must be the permanent term of the objective of labor. And that has been moving.

William Green and the NIRA

Labor perhaps does not fully realize how fortunate it is in having a champion of the calibre of William Green on the NIRA Labor Advisory Board.

Green has proved himself a statesman in his handling of labor's case at recovery administration headquarters. He has lost no opportunity to promote the interests of the workers under the NIRA and his influence has been potent for good throughout the entire organization and has been felt in all its policies and activities. In seeking to advance the interests of the workers, he has had in mind the welfare of all and his work has been constructive and helpful to the entire nation.

"Bill" Green knows the worker's life, his dangers and hardships (as a miner he worked at one of the hardest and most dangerous of trades) and he can be depended upon to fight to get the worker everything within reason. But he will not waste time and energy seeking the impossible.

Railroad Rebates

The widespread practice of railroad executives giving secret rebates to shippers in the latter part of the last century and the partnership of shippers in the scheme were among the major causes for the enactment by Congress of the law establishing the Interstate Commerce Commission with power to stop the rebate evil.

People have generally believed that this nefarious practice was absolutely and completely a matter of history. But the action of a federal grand jury in Chicago in indicting the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad company and six Chicago commission merchants on charges of unlawfully giving, soliciting and receiving rebates indicates that railroad and business executives still require copious legal compulsion to keep their affairs straightforward and in the public interest.

The indictments followed a long investigation by the U. S. Interstate Commerce Commission, according to Benjamin F. Landis, assistant United States attorney in Chicago. What is of equally serious import is the statement made by Landis that he expected shortly to present to the grand jury additional evidence regarding the practice of certain shippers "of filing false claims with railroads and receiving rebates in the form of false damage claims."

Evidently federal codes of fair competition might give a healthier tone to the practices of both railroad managers and shippers and put an end to these especially reprehensible forms of loot, the cost of which is, of course, taken from the public in charges for freight and passenger transportation.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

In an interview with President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, President Roosevelt the other day said he was moving rapidly to get work started on building construction before the winter months so as to aid the building trades.

This is one of the best pieces of news that has come out of Washington in some time. Building has been perhaps the worst spot in the whole industrial situation. As ILNS and others have pointed out, the government's building program, which is tremendously important in the recovery plan, has been behind the procession. It has not put men to work. Until it does, the recovery program will not make the progress it should. If the president gets behind the building program with his dynamic personality and starts it to moving, the whole economic picture will immediately brighten.

New York City firemen set a fine example by marching in the recent great NIRA parade. Though they are on duty eighty-four hours a week, 2,000 members of the Uniformed Firemen's association, affiliated with the International Association of Fire Fighters, sacrificed their own time, after working fifteen hours the night before, to march in the parade and show their active support of the recovery movement.

The firemen's action was another demonstration of their keen interest in the general welfare—an interest that has been frequently shown during the depression. In the last four years they have given generous help to the needy, as have firemen throughout the nation. Personal contributions of New York City firemen alone toward unemployment relief from October, 1930, to the present approximate $1,000,000.

Those New York Stock Exchange brokers who booed Mayor O'Brien in the NIRA parade showed poor sense. They booed the mayor because he advocated taxing stock transfers for unemployment relief. The brokers say their business is already heavily taxed and assert they can't stand further taxation. Whatever the merits of their contention, they would have been wise to have kept quiet during the NIRA parade.

The public is doing no cheering for Wall Street these days and brokers who make public outcry against taxation at an inappropriate time, as they did in New York, will not add to Wall Street's popularity. After all, the public might decide to tax Wall Street speculation out of existence and then where would the brokers be? Or just as bad, from the brokers' standpoint, they might close the stock exchange. It has been done. The exchange was closed for weeks during the World war and it was shut again during the banking holiday this year. And yet the country survived.

Some people have argued that the United States could never completely reverse itself. Yet it is doing that very thing now, as state after state votes for the repeal of prohibition. If the nation can change its mind on prohibition, it can do it on other things. For instance, the nation might decide that the present social order must go and be supplanted by an entirely different system. This is a good thing for some bankers, brokers and others who stubbornly and unintelligently oppose any reforms or changes to bear in mind.

PUBLIC SENTIMENT BACKS HOSIERY MILL STRIKERS

Hornell, N. Y.—General community support seems to be developing for the strikers at the Terrill Hosiery company in their demand for union recognition and union rates and conditions.

Over 2,000 persons were present at a mass meeting in the city park following a parade of the strikers through the business district. Well-known unionists from Buffalo and Elmira spoke.

ILLINOIS UNIONS BACK PROGRAM FOR SOLID AID TO LABOR PRESS

State Convention Warmly Supports Comprehensive Plan to Increase Circulation, Income and Influence of Labor Papers Throughout Nation—A. F. of L. Help to Be Sought.

By JOSEPH WISE

Chicago, Sept. 21.—The fifth day of the fifty-first annual convention of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, held at the Congress hotel, Chicago, was a field day for the labor press. The convention was in session for six days.

Walker Makes Fine Speech.

L. P. Straube, editor of the Federation News, Chicago, and William Porter, editor of the Progressive Labor Journal, Joliet, members of the committee, wholeheartedly joined in the report to the convention. Twenty-three other delegates from various local unions throughout the state, who are not connected directly with the labor press, but were members of the labor press committee, signed the report.

Following the reading of the report, John H. Walker, former president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, took the floor and made a splendid speech based on his thirty years of experience as a trade union officer, during which time he has had many contacts with the labor press in Illinois and other states.

Mr. Walker touched on a point not contained in the report. He stressed the necessity of having labor press representatives in the press galleries of every state legislature in the Union to combat the machinations of the lobbyists for the big interests.

Reveals Anti-Unionists' Tactics.

He said it had become an established custom in Illinois for the interests hostile to organized labor to have their minions, with an actual or ambiguous connection with some sort of publication, placed in the position of secretaries of various committees of the house and senate, where they could obtain inside information. Then these same "secretaries," using their suppositious connection with the press as an open sesame, invade the press galleries and fraternize with the bona fide reporters and through cajolery and the purchase of drinks, cigars and meals and the furnishing of entertainment establish a relationship that leads to the coloring of the news favorable to interests antagonistic to the common people.

It was Mr. Walker's judgment that representatives of the labor press could minimize if not entirely destroy this evil influence. Mr. Walker said that the labor movement could well afford to pay for such a service, even if it had to curtail expenditures in other directions.

Leaders Strongly Back Report.

Edwin K. Wright, a former president of the Illinois Federation, and James B. Connors, a member of the executive board, who recently voluntarily retired from the vice-presidency of the International Switchmen's union because of ill health, also warmly supported the report of the committee.

President R. G. Soderstrom and Victor A. Olander lent the committee every possible assistance, as is their wont, and further entrenched themselves in the warm regard and esteem of the labor press representatives present.

A. F. of L. Help to Be Asked.

The committee recommended that the convention indorse the proposition to have the A. F. of L. take up the matter of finding some plan to finance the International Labor News Service until such time as the labor papers of the country are in a financitl condition to shoulder the responsibility fully. It was also recommended that the International Labor Press of America take the necessary steps to bring this matter to the attention of the next convention of the A. F. of L.

To assist in organizing campaigns now under way and to educate the new recruits being acquired under the "new deal," it was recommended that there be a liberal free distribution of labor papers paid for by the labor movement, and that preference be given to labor papers located at points nearest to the places where the organizing is in progress.

Thomas R. Downie, chairman of the labor press committee of the convention, will prepare a circular letter which he will mail to every labor editor in the United States with a view of obtaining united, concerted action beneficial to the labor press as a whole at the next convention of the A. F. of L., through the good offices of the International Labor Press of America, the labor editors' own organization.

The labor editors of Illinois say, "We demand a place in the sun," and they have been seconded by the powerful Illinois State Federation of Labor, which bids them godspeed and good luck! With that as a starter, they ask the labor editors of the other states to put a shoulder to the wheel in order that a full measure of success may be achieved.

750,000 N. Y. Trade Unionists Serve NRA

Workers and Their Families Urged to Act as Vigilantes and Report Code Violations.

New York.—Organized labor in New York City, representing 750,000 workers and hundreds of organizations, enlisted in the local NRA drive and was made an integral part of the campaign organization, which is under the direction of Grover A. Whalen, chairman of the general committee.

Under a plan worked out by the labor campaign committee, headed by Matthew Woll, third vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, all union members in the city and their families will become part of an army of vigilantes keeping close watch on the enforcement of the president's re-employment agreement and the fair competition codes as they receive the approval of the White House.

"In the application of the re-employment agreement as well as of the specific codes, the labor committee, through the hundreds of labor unions in the city, will conduct a survey of the situation, will keep close watch upon the operation of the codes, and will call upon the workers to report all firms not operating under any code or the re-employment agreement," Mr. Woll said. "We will ask the wage-earners and the public generally to patronize only those firms which operate under the NRA insignia."

39,765 Jobs Made by NRA In 57 New York Counties

New York.—Payroll increases under the NRA in up-state New York reached a total recently of $698,178 weekly, or $36,305,256 annually, on the basis of reports made to W. Averell Harriman, chairman of the president's emergency re-employment committee for the state of New York, at NRA headquarters in the Hotel Pennsylvania.

Up-state employers were 97 per cent enrolled when an additional 1,031 signed agreements, bringing the total to 108,642 out of the estimated 112,000 for the fifty-seven up-state counties.

NOTICE CITY TAX PAYERS

The city administration, fully appreciating the fact that due to conditions a great many of our taxpayers could not pay their taxes, has endeavored in every way possible to show every consideration to the taxpayer.

Under the law, 1931 taxes should have been sued upon Oct. 1, 1932, but inspired by a desire to prevent additional court costs being levied upon the taxpayer these suits have never been filed.

Under the same law 1932 taxes go to the Delinquent Tax Attorney for suit on Oct. 1.

The time has come when we have no choice in the matter except to enforce the law and make every effort possible to collect taxes. This government cannot function unless these taxes are collected, debt services cannot be paid, school teachers cannot be paid, firemen and policemen cannot be paid and other functions of goveernment cannot be carried on unless taxes are paid.

We must collect the money to run this government or suspend government, and we desire to give notice that lists are now being made up of delinquent taxes for 1931 and 1932 to be turned over to the Delinquent Tax Attorney on Oct. 1, with instructions to immediately bring suit. There is no other alternative, as much as we regret it.

There is an unusually heavy delinquency in paving assessments. These bonds are maturing and have to be protected by the city; and all delinquent paving taxes and street widening taxes will be turned over to the Delinquent Tax Attorney along with other taxes.

City Treasurer.

Quarry Company Restores Jobs to Union Officials

Milford, Conn.—Fifty Milford union stone cutters declared a strike on Maskell & Sons company quarry because of the alleged dismissal of the presidents of the Quarrymen's and Stone Cutters' unions for their activities in the interests of organized labor. The discharged men were Patrick J. Dacey, of the Qlarrymen's local, and Patrick J. Malone, of the Stone Cutters' union.

The company officials claimed the men were laid off because of slack work—Dacey because he lived out of town, and Malone because he was a single man. The union workers placed but little reliance in these excuses and believed the officials were discharged because of their union activities. The company returned the men to their jobs at the end of a one-day strike.

President May Restore Federal Workers' Pay

Washington, Sept. 21.—Asked by President William Green and members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to restore the 15 per cent cut in federal employes' pay, President Roosevelt indicated that he was not satisfied with the old index on the cost of living and had asked for another survey.

President Roosevelt's remark led the labor head to believe that the administration may be disposed to increase salaries in 1934 to bring them in line with increased living costs.

"The president said he hoped to restore part, at least, of the pay very soon," Green said.

BIGGEST FEDERATION CONVENTION SINCE 1917 IS PREDICTED

Great Meeting To Center Main Attention on NRA

Delegates to Plan Strengthening of Recovery Act to Bring More Employment, President William Green Says.

Washington, Sept. 21.—With a program calculated to add at least another half million members to the million already added, by the time its convention opens here on Oct. 2, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, forecast the largest convention held since Woodrow Wilson addressed the wartime convention in Buffalo in 1917.

"We shall have some important revelations to make to the convention," President Green said. "Our Executive Council has just adjourned after having been in session ten days, preparing its annual report. We have gone over the entire situation, both as to organization of workers and the operation of the national industrial recovery act.

Labor Not to Be Stopped.

"I want to make it clear, as our council's report will make it clear, that the American Federation of Labor is going to organize the unorganized. By that I mean two things:

"First. It is not going to be stopped in its energetic and sweeping campaign to bring workers into unions throughout the nation.

"Second. It is going to continue to be, as it has been for more than half a century, the recognized, all-embracing spokesman for American labor. That means there is no room in the United States for any other labor movement.

"In our convention we shall have delegates representative of all of the workers, elected and responsible only to the membership of labor unions. The voice of labor will be heard on every vital public issue. However, our main attention will be centered upon the recovery act in an effort to strengthen its operation so as to produce more employment and more purchasing power.

Act Must Succeed.

"We have no unduly optimistic picture of the benefits of the recovery act in terms of new employment up to this time, but it is clear that the recovery act is sound in principle, that it has started the nation on the upward swing and that it must succeed, for the reason that its failure means a chaos that the nation cannot stand.

"Not only are we concerned as to reduction of work-hours per week to a level lower than the average thus far fixed in codes, both temporary and permanent, and as to higher wage levels than the average thus far established, but we are concerned about the question of adequate representation of labor in machinery created under codes. Our convention may be expected to express itself emphatically on this question of representation and to demand that in all of the new machinery of industrial government labor be represented by men of its own choosing, as a matter of right and not as a matter of privilege.

To Lay Down Battle Lines.

"In the matter of the creation of proper industrial government we are now about where the American colonies were in the creation of political government in 1778. But just as surely as our political government became responsive to the will of the people through the creation of democratic machinery and universal franchise, so this present contest will be settled in favor of the masses of the people. America then will be able to look forward to permanent well-being and continuous progress. We shall have pulled the teeah of special privilege and our convention undoubtedly will lay down the lines of battle.

"Dedication of the magnificent memorial to the late Samuel Gompers will afford us opportunity not only to express our devotion to our late chieftain and to revere his memory as one of America's greatest men, but it will give us an opportunity to formulate again before the entire nation the idealism of our government.

Goal to Be Made Clear.

"We shall be able to center American attention on our program as a movement for co-operation in industry, for the stabilization of industry and as necessary to national recovery as the very materials that go into commerce in the form of food and clothing. We shall show that our trade unions are vital as a part of the new industrial administrative machinery and that every new union formed in the workshops of the nation is a new element of stability, a new unit in the great labor guarantee of sound practice and progress through co-operation. We fight battles and we shall continue to fight battles. But these battles are fought when there is no other method of preserving the right to function peacefully and co-operatively. Our goal is an industry operated for service to the nation and its people, guided through the processes of organized order, and our convention will, I am confident, make that clear."

Fear of High Pay Unjustified, Says Pricing Engineer

Substantial Jump in Wages Would Not Burden Consumer and Would Boom Buying Power, Expert Declares.

New York City, Sept. 21.—To bring the vast low-wage army at once up to present average standards in a great blanket increase would fall lightly on the purchaser, is pointed out by W. L. Churchill, pricing engineer. Mr. Churchill, vice-president of the John R. Hall corporation, declares that a 110 per cent increase in the 1928 average wage in cotton textiles could have been given, with a manufacturers' price increase of only 23 per cent, putting into circulation a million dollars a day in added wages, to flow in the general market for purchases not possible under the then existing cotton textile wage.

"Wages paid to workers of manufacturing industries as per reports of the department of commerce for 1928, and relating to more than 4,600,000 wage workers, averaged only 19 per cent of the amount that the manufacturers received for their products," Churchill said in explanation.

"A review of the twenty-six industrial groups," he continued, "for which complete figures were available for 1928, discloses that the largest proportion of income received by employers that is paid out to employes was 50 per cent, paid to workers engaged in manufacturing and repairing railroad cars. As little as 6 per cent was paid to factory workers by manufacturers of bags.

"In 1928 the average wage of all factory workers in these twenty-six industrial groups was $1,330 a year.

"It has been estimated that if minimum wage rates were fixed at 50 cents an hour, based upon 48 hours a week, the average of all wages paid to factory workers would have been equal to at least $1,600 per year. If 50 cents an hour had been the minimum wage rate in 1928 and $1,600 the minimum average annual wage for all industries, the price increase to absorb the wage increase would have been surprisingly small proportionately.

"For example, in the cotton goods industry, whose average wage was only $763 per year, it would require an increase of 110 per cent to elevate the wages of the workers to $1,600 per year. The manufacturer, however, would only need to have 23 per cent added to his average selling price in order to have paid his workers 110 per cent more wages.

"Available statistics indicate that the adoption of a minimum wage scale of $1,600 for a factory worker in 1928 would have meant an average increase in all factory wages of 20.3 per cent, and yet would have required only a 3.9 per cent price rise to absorb such an increase in wages. Obviously, the tremendous increase in purchasing power represented by increased wages would be a tremendous stimulant to business, which in turn would go a long way toward eliminating unemployment."

"Some folks let sleeping dogs lie," but others had rather do their own lying.

hand, proclaiming that the world should be made safe for democracy, while in the other was tightly clutched a lifetime slave warrant for the worker in his plant. It is held that this type of Bourbon, accustomed to rule with an iron hand, cannot now conceive of the advent of a new system which contemplates a guarantee of American rights to each citizen, whether he be wage-earner or capitalist. "Can the leopard change his spots?" is a question on the tongues of many.

In simple justice, however, it should be said that the outrageous activities of some employers is not condoned by many of the larger and fair-minded industrialists. Numbers of large concerns, as well as the less pretentious ones, are making every effort to comply with the spirit of the recovery act, many at unquestioned sacrifice, and scores of local employers frown upon the machinations of the selfish, arrogant group which is bent upon destruction of the efforts to return to the principles of a genuine democracy through a program initiated by the president of the United States and backed overwhelmingly by a progressive congress and by many leading industrialists and financiers of the nation.

Unrest, constantly increasing, is reflected in scores of affidavits made voluntarily by workers who are victims of discrimination, desperate even in the face of probable discharge for their temerity in making the truth known, and in spite of the threats against their livelihood, hundreds upon hundreds are rushing to the protection of American Federation of Labor unions.

Seasoned trades unionists, accustomed to the hypocrisy displayed by local "patriotic employers," have continually counseled patience, although workers in several lines have appealed for strike sanction to their various internationals.

In this connection, "old-timers" have seen a velopment in the past few days which is disturbing to the conservative, when men who have spent many years in an effort to maintain industrial peace and co-operation and accord with employers have openly threatened to retire from the picture and allow the harrassed and distressed worker to use his own judgment with respect to remaining on the job which has become in many cases almost too burdensome to bear.

George H. VanFleet, commissioner of conciliation of the Department of Labor, has been in the city all week making a survey of conditions, and will probably remain here until a complete check is made on the violators of the recovery act.

Report of Mr. Cuthbert, as organizer, to the United Textile Workers of America, contains the following paragraphs:

"It seems that we just cannot find any sort of board to go to in cases of discharge, but are told that one will be appointed later. This is very disturbing to those who come to me that are discharged and I have to tell them to pull in their belts and patiently wait.

"I propose that if and when these discharge cases come up for disposition, and we win, that I shall thereupon enter suit against the offending employer for all back pay of illegally discharged employes. I shall also enter suit for damages done by such unfair and illegal discharge.

"We have most certainly backed the President's program sincerely and wholeheartedly. I know for certain that we have kept down trouble. We have swallowed raw discrimination. In face of all this the workers are ready for any advice we might give, and to be frank, we are becoming less and less inclined to hold on the leash, but are about ready to tell them to turn their dogs loose and use their economic powers given them by our laws and constitution."

Union Label Best Weapon To Smite NRA Chiselers

Atlantic City, N. J.—The union label is "one of the best means of enforcing the national recovery act and protecting the fair employer against the chiseler," declared Arthur A. Quinn, president of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor, in an address here before the federation's annual convention, made up of 100 delegates.

Mr. Quinn asserted that the success of the whole NRA plan depends upon the workers' units.

"There is no doubt," he said, "that many are signing the codes who do not intend to obey them. It will be organized labor's duty to see that they are enforced not only by closed-shop employers but by the far more numerous group of open-shop owners.

"Our form of government depends upon the success or failure of enforcement of the recovery act. That, in turn, depends in large measure on labor's strength and determination, and on the honesty, intelligence and unselfish devotion of Labor's leadership. We must have a greater sense of social responsibility. We must be our brother's keeper, even though that brother is not counted in the union ranks."

TUG WORKERS ASK 8-HOUR PAY

New York City.—Tugboat workers in New York harbor are asking the 8-hour day and higher wages. They also want a six-day week and a one week vacation with pay for every man who has worked a year.

Go to your
Union Meetings

Don't say you are too tired; the weather is bad; or there is too much quibbling and "hot air" to interest me.

Every time you miss a meeting and leave it to the other fellow to look out for your interest, you are doing an injustice both to yourself and your organization.

Your views on especially vital subjects should be represented in discussion and by vote, and the only way for this to be done is for you to be at your union meeting.

You are responsible for the good and welfare of your organization, and non-attendance of union meetings on your part is not excuse enough for you to voice your opinion after a measure has been passed. It is then time for you to concur in what has been done and work in harmony with the officers and other members of your union.

Go to your union meetings regularly and induce others to do the same, because one important thing to remember is the meaning of the slogan:

"United we stand,
Divided we fall."

EMPLOYERS MUST RECOGNIZE UNION'S CHOSEN SPOKESMAN, NATIONAL LABOR BOARD RULES

Law Explicit as to Workers' Representation, Decision in West Virginia Mill Strike—Employers Barred From Refusing to Deal With "Outsiders."

Washington, Sept. 21.—Employes have the explicit right to be represented by any one they choose, under national industrial recovery act codes, the national labor board has ruled.

The decision is a sweeping victory for organized labor and is regarded as of immense importance. It means that employers must deal with the employes' representative, irrespective of whether or not he is an employe of the plant involved in a dispute. It puts an end to the refusal of employers to meet workers' representatives on the ground they are "outsiders."

The decision was made in the case of the Berkeley Woolen Mills, of Martinsburg, W. Va., whose 400 employes went on strike Aug. 15. The employer failed to appear before the board after due notice and the default was held to be willful.

Seven workers who were discharged early in August charged that their dismissal was due to their union activities. A strike followed and a representative of the department of labor who attempted to adjust the dispute was unsuccessful.

On Aug. 14, a committee of employes asked the management to recognize their local union as part of the United Textile Workers of America. The management told the committee that it would recognize only a union composed of employes of the mill and would not recognize a national union.

The labor's board decision was announced by Chairman Wagner in a statement which said in part:

"The question before the board is whether employes are in any way limited in their choice of representatives to deal with employers. Section 7 of the industrial recovery act describes that each code must contain the following condition:

"'That employes shall have the right to organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing and shall be free from the interference, restraint, or coercion of employers of labor or their agents, in the designation of such representatives.'

"We fail to see how it is possible to put any interpretation on the phrase 'representatives of their own choosing' which would make it necessary for employes to choose these representatives from a particular class or a particular group.

"The statement to the effect that representatives must be chosen by the employes cannot be any reasonable interpretation be deemed to mean that representatives must be chosen from the employes. To give to the code the interpretation sought by respondent would nullify the employes' right to organize as they choose, for, in effect, it would limit each employes' organization to the individual plant, and would prevent the employes of a plant from joining any organization already in existence. Such a result would be be opposed to both the letter and the intent of the indutrial recovery act.

"We rule, therefore, that employes have the right to choose any one they may wish as their representative and not limited in their choice to fellow-employes."

SEEK NAMING STATE TEXTILE ARBITRATORS

Central Body Asks Board Be Appointed.

Bakers Urge Support of New Union — Colonial Still Out of Fold.

Appointment of a state board for adjustment of disputes in the textile industry was asked of the national recovery administration following discussion at Monday night's regular meeting of Central Body of flagrant disregard of code provisions by certain operators in the Chattanooga district.

It was brought out that the local compliance board is powerless to pass upon textile cases, and the naming of similar boards in neighboring states was pointed to. These boards, given broad powers, delegates stated, are already proving successful in adjusting matters in dispute which arise out of the working of the N. R. A., and the unusual need of such a body in Chattanooga was stressed in an appeal to the national administration to set up such a board for Tennessee.

DELEGATES HEAR REPORTS OF PROGRESS.

Reports of splendid progress among the newly-organized workers marked the largely-attended and enthusiastic session of Central Body Monday night. Greatest problem of all, it was brought out, was availability of sufficient organizers to instruct and advise with the thousands who are clamoring for admission to the American Federation of Labor from many groups of workers. Organizations are being formed and charters installed continually, it was reported, and many groups have not as yet been reached. Delegates were urged to contact members of those groups which are impatiently calling for assistance, and impress upon them the great task which has fallen upon local officials, and to counsel patience.

BAKERS SEEK CO-OPERATION.

Representatives of the newly-organized bakers' union asked co-operation of all organized labor in their efforts to make Chattanooga a "100 per cent" town from their standpoint. It was declared two of the larger bakeries are thoroughly organized, and attention was called to the fact that efforts to enlist employes of the Colonial plant have as yet borne no fruit.

It was recalled that in the early efforts at organization Colonial bakers took a leading part, and that for some mysterious reason the ardor of these workers was suddenly cooled and that since none has appeared at the meetings, Management of the Colonial has been charged with "breaking up" the organization there, and although this was denied by Manager Wasson, subsequent negotiations with him failed to bring an agreement and the status of the Colonial is unchanged.

Delegates were urged particularly to use their influence in assisting the bakers.

LANE DRUG COMPANY DISPUTE UNSETTLED.

Dispute with the Lane Drug company, a chain organization with headquarters in Atlanta, has not been adjusted, it was reported, and pickets continue to patrol the vicinity of the local branch of that concern at 714 Market street. It was recalled that the Lane company gave scant consideration to appeals of workers for employment of organized labor on remodeling of the local store, and that certain employes were brought in from Atlanta to operate the Chattanooga branch.

GREEN ASKED TO SPEED RIVER WORK.

Assistance of President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, was asked in a telegram ordered sent that official by Secretary Cuthbert. Following discussion which brought out the opinion of delegates present that work on Dam No. 3

Evidence Laid Before Johnson By Labor Head

Washington, Sept. 28.—President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, has laid before Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, a mass of evidence which he asserted "shows the various types of effort being made by certain great corporate powers to defeat the labor section (Section 7-A) of the national recovery act."

"It has been said by persons not familiar with the facts that labor has slowed up the recovery administration's efforts by strikes and by demands for codes that respect the law as it was written," said President Green, "but I have presented to Gen. Johnson the definite, documentary evidence of astonishing evasions by great employers, some of these so bold and so hostile to the letter and spirit of the law that I am certain the administrator must take immediate and very drastic action."

Described by President Green as "typical of company union plans laid before Gen. Johnson" by him is one submitted to its employes by the E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. of Delaware and subsidiary companies. The plan, as detailed in an eight-page pamphlet, provides for the election of "works councils" in each plant, consisting of appointed representatives of the company, an equal number of representatives appointed by the management, a chairman elected by and from the membership of the "works council" and a secretary named by the management but having no vote.

The du Pont plant sets forth that the company "shall provide suitable places for meetings of the 'works council' and its committees. Another provision says that employes attending meetings of the 'works council' or any of its committees, shall receive their regular pay from the company for such time as they are necessarily absent from work for these purposes."

Plans Branded Law Violation.

"These provisions," said President Green, "together with that for company representatives on the 'works councils', brand them as in no sense bona fide employe representation and as at variance with the collective bargaining provision of the national industrial recovery act. The law in Section 7-A guarantees the right of employes to 'organize and bargain collectively through representatives of their own choosing' and further provides that they 'shall be free from interference, restraint or coercion of employers of labor or their agents, in the designation of such representatives.'"

A plan of "employe representation" proposed by the Aluminum Company of America and its subsidiary companies and included in the material submitted to Gen. Johnson is very similar to the du Pont plan. It provides for "work councils" in each plant, composed of elected representatives of the employes and an equal number of appointed representatives of the management. As in the Du-pont plan, the aluminum company specifies that the company shall provide meeting places for the "works councils" and shall pay representatives for the time spent at meetings.

Other documents showed promotion of "employe representation plans" by the Chevrolet Motor company, Pittsburgh Plate Glass company and RCA Victor company. The Chevrolet plan is being pushed in thirteen cities.

The Pittsburgh Plate Glass company offers an "employes representation plan" to its employes in its window glass plants. It differs little from others. A provision not contained in the plans already cited gives exclusive right to the management to hire, suspend or discharge for "proper cause."

The RCA Victor company, in its big factory at Camden, N. J., set up an "industrial representation plan" in June. A joint conference of employe-elected representatives and representatives appointed by the company was established to adopt a joint agreement to "govern the future practices and proceedings in matters of mutual interest to both employes and management."

Other "employe representation plans," all of similar nature, which President Green laid before Gen. Johnson are outlined in letters and pamphlets from the Kohler company, Kohler, Wis., headed by former Gov. Kohler, of Wisconsin; the Jones & Laughlin Steel corporation, Aliquippa, Pa.; Sinclair Refining company, Marcus Hook, Pa.; Grays Harbor Pulp and Paper company; Hoquiam, Wash.; Pharis Tire and Rubber company, Newark, O.; Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock company, Newport News, Va.; Lamson & Sessions company, Kent, O.; Frigidaire corporation, Dayton, O.; Market Street Railway company, San Francisco; Louisville Gas and Electric company, Louisville, Ky.

Commenting further on the material submitted to Gen. Johnson, President Green said:

"The documents offer clear evidence that employers all over the nation are doing their best to encourage a spurious form of 'employe representation.' Most of the plans provide for company representatives on the joint committees or councils. They also provide that the committees or councils shall meet on company property, during working hours and that the employes attending shall be paid for their time.

"Of course no real trade union would do business that way. Trade unions meet outside working hours. They do not meet on company property. There are no representatives of the employers present at these meetings.

"It is absurd to think that workers are organized of their own free will, as provided for in Section 7-A of the recovery act, when they meet under conditions established by the company union plans. The 'employe representation' plans are a fraud from start to finish and labor holds they are in direct violation of the spirit and letter of the recovery act. We shall continue to fight them, pointing out that they have nothing in common with trade unions organized by voluntary action of the workers."

EPOCHAL CONVENTION AMERICAN ORGANIZED LABOR MOVEMENT MEETS MONDAY IN CAPITAL CITY

Recovery Plan Seen Paramount Convention Issue

Delegates to Meet in Atmosphere of Hope Created by NIRA Program and Big Organization Gains.

Washington, Sept. 28.—One of the biggest and most representative conventions ever held by the American Federation of Labor will be called to order here on Oct. 2 at the Willard hotel. The convention will be the fifty-third annual meeting of the federation and will be one of the largest in years.

More than 500 delegates will be present, representing national and international unions, city central bodies, state federations of labor and local unions directly affiliated to the A. F. of L. Directly affiliated unions will have a big representation, as there are more of such bodies than for many years.

When President William Green calls the convention to order, the delegates will be called upon to consider problems arising out of a new industrial order, now rapidly coming into being as a result of the national industrial recovery act.

To Report on NIRA

A full report upon the operation of the recovery act, the development of industrial codes affecting great numbers of workers and the result of the operation of the act to date will be submitted to the convention by the Executive Council. That debate on the recovery act will be spirited is a foregone conclusion. No other subject has been of so much interest to the hosts of organized labor in recent months and labor is watching the recovery administration and the whole recovery program with close attention.

The Executive Council, headed by President Green, regards the recovery act, with its guarantee of the right to organize and the establishment of codes to assure fair wages and working conditions, as of paramount importance for the consideration of the convention.

Outcome Not Clear.

"No one," the council says, "can clearly foresee the outcome of this great adventure on the part of the government into the field of industry.

"All classes of workers are inspired to hope and trust that the primary purpose of the recovery act to reduce unemployment and increase purchasing power through increases in wage rates, will be fully realized."

The delegates will meet in an atmosphere of hope created by the recovery program and also by the remarkable progress which their organizations have made in the last three or four months. They will hear reports showing that the wage-earners of the United States are awake to the value of organization as they have not been in decades and are turning to trade unionism as the best assurance of benefits under the recovery act.

Thousands of New Unions.

Reports made by the Executive Council will show the chartering of upward of 600 federal labor unions since July 1. Many of these unions are in basic industries and, labor executives believe their organization foreshadows a mighty sweep of workers in these industries into the ranks of trade unionism.

In addition to the federal unions, national and international unions represented at the convention have gained thousands of new members. It is estimated that at least 3,000 new charters have been issued by the national and international unions since the last A. F. of L. convention. These unions have also gained strength through the reinstatement of many former members.

So the convention delegates gather in Washington inspired both by what they are doing and by what the nation as a whole is doing to overcome the depression and once more put America on the road to lasting prosperity.

WILL PRESIDE AT MEETING

COLONEL WILLIAM GREEN
President American Federation of Labor.

GREEN DENIES RECOVERY ACT PREVENTS CLOSED UNION SHOP

Washington, Sept. 28.—Efforts to interpret the national industrial recovery act in such a manner as to seem to deprive the union shop of sanction under the law were denounced by President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, in a reply to Henry I. Harriman, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and Robert L. Lund, president of the National Association of Manufacturers.

"Mr. Harriman is quoted as having said in a speech in Chicago, 'if I read the language (of Gen. Johnson) correctly it means that Gen. Johnson considers the closed shop prohibited by the recovery act,' while Mr. Lund is represented as having said that labor's organizing campaign 'is the most serious obstacle to the attainment of the objectives of the recovery act.'

"I hesitate to challenge the good faith of these gentlemen, so I shall be forced to challenge their intelligence. The national industrial recovery act does not pretent the closed union shop and I mean by that term just what we have always meant by it. I mean the shop which is union by agreement between the workers and the employers. There never was any other kind and there never can be any other kind.

"What the recovery act does is to give the workers their freedom to organize, so that we now have a great many more really union shops than ever before and the number is growing daily and rapidly. What hurts Mr. Harriman and Mr. Lund is that the workers now have this freedom and having it are using it. They are dismayed because wage-earners are free to follow their own counsels and are no longer under the necessity of paying tribute to the company union schemes of employers who hate to abandon their role of industrial dictators and are no longer under the necessity of signing individual or yellow dog contracts."

JOB GAIN SEEN IN ROAD BUILDING

Washington, Sept. 28.—Direct employment should be given to 125,000 men on the emergency road building program of the bureau of public roads, the bureau estimates. Work on 1,600 projects should be under way in October, the bureau says.

15,000 Painters Strike for More Pay, Fewer Hours

New York City, Sept. 28.—A strike call issued by the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paper Hangers of America brought a stoppage of work by 15,000 workers in support of the union's demand for fewer hours and higher pay.

The union is asking a six-hour day, a five-day week and $1.65 an hour. The men have been receiving $8 for an eight-hour day.

Leaving their work in Manhattan, the Bronx and Staten Island, the strikers marched to twelve halls designated for registration, where they received strike and picketing instructions.

Pickets were sent to the Empire State building, the Chrysler building, the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, the Commodore hotel, the Pennsylvania and other places. Hundreds of strikers marched down Park avenue in overalls to their picketing posts. Union officials reported that the response on the part of both union and non-union men was almost unanimous.

Bagley Is Guest Of Local Musicians

Officers and members of Local No. 80, American Federation of Musicians, were honored Wednesday by a short visit from C. L. Bagley, vice-president of the international organization.

Mr. Bagley, whose home is in Los Angeles, Cal., stopped over in Chattanooga en route to the Washington meeting of the American Federation of Labor.

The Musicians' official was entertained at noon Wednesday with a luncheon, at which the local officers and executive board were present, as well as officials of Chattanooga Trades and Labor council.

Mr. Bagley declared he expects the coming session of the federation to make history. Developments in the N. R. A. campaign, he said, will unquestionably be an outstanding problem of the convention, and the future progress of organized labor will be planned under the new deal.

Chattanooga came in for high praise from the Californian, who stated that, although he has visited here before, he is always delighted to return to enjoy the "natural beauties of your wonderful city, and the wholehearted hospitality of its people."

While in the city Mr. Bagley was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Cohn on Signal mountain. He left for Washington Thursday morning.

Theaters Revert To Former Management

Tivoli, Rialto and State, three local de luxe houses, will on Oct. 1 revert to the former management, headed by R. B. Wilby, of Atlanta, after having been operated by receivers named by the federal court. Sale of the theaters was made last week.

Members of Local 259, asked what effect the transfer would have upon their activities, expressed confidence that a mutual understanding will be reached with the new management, and recalled that a desire to co-operate has been expressed by both employer and employe in correspondence carried on since the sale became known.

Mr. Wilby is at present "tied up" with matters pertaining to the theater code, it was said, and the matter of a contract will be taken up when he returns to the city. Agreement has been made that provisions of the contract, when signed, will be retroactive to Oct. 1.

Local 259 has recently signed new agreements with certain of the independent houses, providing for increase in the wage scale.

MORE OLDER MEN REPORTED IN "UNEMPLOYABLE GROUP"

New York.—More and more men of 50 and over are becoming members of the "unemployable group," Frank J. Taylor, commissioner of public welfare, stated in a report based on a compilation of lodgings at the municipal lodging house. Expressing the opinion that the men of 50 and over will experience real difficulty in ever obtaining regular employment, the report said:

"The younger homeless men, who are occasionally employed, average ten nights per month at the municipal lodging house. Those over 50 years of age (many of them are much older than 50) average eighteen nights a month per man."

N.R.A. CHAIRMAN RIDICULES 'SALE' OF HOME STORES

Shepherd Calls McDonald's Scheme "Cute Evasion."

SAYS MANAGERS BOUGHT NOTHING

Company Attorney Admits Stores Will Close If Proprietor's "Dream" Fails.

"Sale" of the so-called "Home Stores" to the various managers, which occurred shortly after the code went into effect, was ridiculed by Chairman T. Pope Shepherd, of the local compliance board, at a hearing Wednesday which ought to determine whether the alleged sale was a violation of the N. R. A. provisions.

"It looks to me like a pretty cute avoidance, if not an evasion," said Chairman Shepherd, who expressed the further opinion that the "contract" was weak and that the managers "have not actually bought anything."

Sam J. McAllester, who admitted he was a director in the company, appeared as attorney for the McDonald stores, and made the plea that if the "sale" was voided it would mean the closing of the thirty stores.

Although McDonald was quoted immediately following the "sale" as stating the plan was "a dream" which he had had for years, and was not concocted for the purpose of violating the code, Attorney-Director McAllester admitted to the board that the stores were not in position to pay the managers $35 per week to enable them to work unlimited hours, and for that reason the "contract" was arranged whereby the stores were "sold" to the respective managers.

"What it amounts to," Chairman Shepherd commented, "is that McDonald has gotten out of the responsibilities of the retail business, but has retained for himself all the benefits. It looks to me like a pretty cute avoidance, if not an evasion."

The case was taken under advisement.

THROW SHEET APPEARS AGAIN.

The Home Stores throw-sheet, which McDonald admittedly established as a sort of stepping-stone to entering the daily newspaper field, is said to have appeared again this week, although reports had become current that last week's issue would mark the end of the experiment. Practically unanimous refusal of local business people to use the sheet as an advertising medium, due to McDonald's labor policies, has been regarded locally as making certain eventual failure of the experiment.

Labor World readers will remember that McDonald told a committee which called upon him that he was an individualist, and that anyone who works for him will come to work at such time as he orders, and will quit by the same sign.

President Hoover, he said, made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders to keep wages up as an aid to prosperity. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer-baker-dairyman - printer - publisher-individualist averred, we would now be out of the depression, and further, he held, we will never be out until wages are further and further cut.

LABOR PARTY COMMITTEE URGES CURB ON PREMIER

London.—A special committee of the labor party has recommended sweeping changes in Great Britain's unwritten constitution designed to limit the power of the premier and chancellor of the exchequer. The recommendations will be submitted to the party's annual conference in October.

The committee proposes that the prime minister have the "assistance" of three members of his party in choosing a cabinet and that on all questions he must be subject to a majority decision of the cabinet. The committee also proposes curbing the "excessive authority" of the chancellor of the exchequer in expenditure and finance generally.

What Next!

After years of experimenting, a Japanese inventor has developed a silver which will resist tarnishing under normal exposure to air and moisture. The silver is an alloy, with zinc and tin and has met all tests. The alloy not only resists actual tarnishing, but retains its natural lustre.

The lights in the crowded bus had failed and the passengers were thrown into confusion.

Tall Young man (to young lady at his side)—Can I find you a strap?

Tall Young Man—Good, then perhaps you wouldn't mind letting go of my tie.

Black-Draught
Clears Up Sluggish, Dull Feeling

"I have used Thedford's Black-Draught for constipation for a long time, and find it gives relief for this trouble," writes Mrs. Frank Champion, of Wynne, Ark. "I think it is good for spells caused from gas on the stomach. If I get up in the morning feeling dull and sluggish, a dose of Black-Draught taken three times a day will cause the feeling to pass away, and in a day or two I feel like a new person. After many years of use we would not exchange Black-Draught for any medicine."
P. S.—If you have CHILDREN, give them the new, pleasant-tasting SYRUP of Thedford's Black-Draught.

Brains of All Needed

Some of the objectors to the new order of things economic are being heard to say that no human brain can direct the development of society. Well, by the same token, it may as well be understood right now, that no human brain, and no set of human brains, is able to stop the development of society. Not now!

So that those who think that by pulling back in the traces or by sly bits of financial sabotage here and there they can stop the processes which have been put in motion in America, may just as well hang up their hatchets and go home.

But, whoever said that any human brain could direct social development? If we understand the meaning of the protest that is being given expression now, it is to the effect that it is about time there was a gathering together of all the brains concerned in social development for the handling of the job.

There have been a few fellows who seemed to think that they—and their especially fortunate colleagues—were capable of doing this little job of throwing all the switches in and out of the main lines of traffic in the world of trade and labor.

Well—a fine mess they made of it all!

And that is why the clause which is coming to be known as "Section VII (a)" is going to stand in the law which established the NRA.

"Collective bargaining" has come to stay! There has been enough of this antiquated idea of "individual initiative"—and the hypocritical reading of the reverse side of that: the so-called hiring and firing on "individual merit."

Better face the new facts, gentlemen!

"No one brain can direct social development."

Wholesome Spirit Abroad in Land

Some day somebody is going to draw a picture of the prevailing business practices of the early twentieth century in America.

He is going to take for his material the things which are now being defined as "unfair competition" in the codes of industry drawn under the aegis of the NRA.

Some of our present young business men are likely to be hard put to it to answer the embarrassing questions of their grandchildren who read that account.

It used to be said, to the enthusiasts who wanted to change the methods of doing business: "But you cannot change human nature!"

From all appearances, there is an attempt going forward at present, on a national scale, to change the human nature of folks who have been indulging in practices that their grandchildren will be ashamed of!

Some of the spirit of the Carpenter who cleaned out the Temple at Jerusalem, with a whip of small cords, seems to be abroad in the land. It is a wholesome spirit. May it do a clean job.

Buying Power Must Rise Faster

Complaint is general that prices are running too far ahead of buying power. The purchasing power of the masses is not keeping pace with the steadily rising cost of commodities.

Despite gain in employment and wages under the NRA, incomes are still generally low and wage and salaried workers are finding it difficult to make both ends meet. They are exhorted from all sides to buy to the limit of their capacity and they are perfectly willing to do so. But their capacity is very limited.

There is general suspicion that many prices are higher than increased costs under the codes warrant. This suspicion has been voiced not alone by the man in the street but by high Recovery Administration authorities.

Though desirable, it is doubtful if prices can be kept down to enable purchasing power to catch up with them. In the emergency, the only quick and sure remedy is shorter hours and higher wages than have been set in the codes. This is organized labor's program for coping with the situation. The sooner it is adopted, the quicker will the recovery be.

Employers Impose Low Wages, Long Hours, On Women Workers, Federal Bureau Finds

Washington.—The extreme handicaps of low wages and long hours which employers in the United States have imposed on women workers for a hundred years are graphically described in "Women at Work," a 50-page pamphlet issued by the United States Women's bureau of the U. S. department of labor.

Written by Eleanor Nelson and illustrated by Jean W. Hill, of Washington, the brochure describes the changes that have taken place in the occupations of women who work for a living during the past century.

Driven from home work by the factory system and later hired to operate the typewriter and filing systems, employers have persistently imposed lower wages on women than on men doing similar work. The general result, the author declares, is that "for many thousands of women, wages have always fallen far below the cost of decent living, even though they must support themselves and often dependents on their meager earnings."

Victims of Discrimination.

The author emphasizes the fact that the jobs which employers have compelled women to take have been mainly in the unskilled and lower-paid classes. This inferior economic status developed the long and difficult fight made by women for better working conditions. The results achieved include the establishment of the women's bureau of the U. S. department of labor, which was enthusiastically sponsored by the American Federation of Labor in 1916 and carried to success when Woodrow Wilson signed the bill setting up the bureau in 1920, and protective legislation against long hours, and night-work, climaxed by the present fair competition codes which carry the minimum wage and maximum work hours into every industry.

The oppressive conditions under which negro and immigrant women are compelled to earn their living are outlined. While these groups have made slight gains, they have been the recipients of the "ragged edges of employment, the lowest wages, and the longest hours."

Two Million Jobless Women.

The pamphlet closes with a vivid picture of the suffering which women workers have undergone during the depression. Out of almost 11,000,000 women who ordinarily work for a living, the number of the unemployed has increased to more than 2,000,000. Included in the jobless army are many married women discriminated against because of their marital status, many older women whose chances of finding jobs are very slim, and many young women workers for the first time in the job market.

Profit-mad employers have reduced wages and lengthened hours until a general breaking down of working standards for women has taken place, which has been partially neutralized by increasing attempts to have state legislatures pass more adequate labor legislation dealing with unemployment insurance, old-age pensions, minimum wages, and shorter hours, supplemented by the minimum wage provisions of the codes set up under the national industrial recovery act.

PRINTING TRADES WORKERS DEMAND CODE 32-HOUR WEEK

Washington, Sept. 28.—The 40-hour week, proposed in NRA codes submitted by the employers in the commercial printing industry was held entirely too long by the printing trades unions, appearing at hearings held on the codes. The unions asked a 32-hour week .

A brief presented by the International Allied Printing Trades association contended that the "prevailing actual hours are less than the number proposed by the code The approval of a maximum 40-hour week will delay re-absorption and restrict the number of employed." Wages proposed in the code were declared totally inadequate.

Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical union, declared that a 40-hour week would not reabsorb the unemployed in the commercial printing industry. He quoted labor department statistics to show that in July, 1933, the average man-hours per week in the industry had been only 37.7.

Little Grace—Why are there no marriages in heaven, daddy dear?

Daddy (after stealthy glance around)—Because that would not be heaven, my dear.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

How about a little more of fairness in this dispute about whether the well-known Henry Ford is going to obey the automobile code?

Of course the dispute thus far has been by no means all against the Ford interests. Ford has reaped millions of words of free newspaper space. He always did have a way of crashing the gates of the Fourth Estate.

Ford has held back and said nothing for the code, nor did he partake in framing it. That was too bad and showed him sulking in his tent. Maybe he had reasons; if so the country would have thought better of him for explaining them.

Now on the other hand—there are always two hands, it seems—there is Chevrolet, in which the men Chevrolet long since claimed to be an interested party. Chevrolet is made by General Motors, which makes many other cars and which competes keenly with Ford.

Chevrolet boasts of being under the code.

But—and here we get one of those old-fashioned standardized buts that have been known to knock over many a fancy structure—but—

Chevrolet thinks so much of the code of which it boasts that it goes right to work to organize a company union in clear defiance of the tap roots of the national industrial recovery act.

Now how does Chevrolet get to be the lily of the field?

Chevrolet is forming an employes' association—a company union. At any rate that's what it is called, by some queer poetic license. And there will be a works council. This stuff is being created in all of the thirteen cities in which there are Chevrolet plants. It is being done to kill the union campaign.

The scheme is old as machine industry. The boss provides the time and the place. He plans the whole thing. If it doesn't work as he wants it to work he can kill the whole thing as easily as he gave it birth.

In this particular scheme no employe can be a member until he has worked for Chevrolet ninety days. For ninety days he is a waif, after which he is a subject.

Of course Chevrolet may not attempt any compulsion or coercion, but it is quite likely that employes are expected not to bite the hand that feeds them this wonderful soup and the employe is expected, to put it another way, to know which side of the bread has butter on it.

There is small excuse for Ford's churlishness. He's a lone duck, always was and will always try to be. He has no more idea of what this new co-operative industrial operation is all about than a child of six—perhaps less.

But if that is so, then there is still less excuse for the bald, calculated effort of Chevrolet to undermine the law and its guarantees to labor, which are all in plain English, easily understood by those who can read—and surely there are those in General motors who can read.

The only point in the whole affair is that if there is riding to be done, let it be somewhat fairly apportioned. Or if there is game to be shot, don't do all the shooting in one pasture.

There are good reasons why the railroads should come under the provisions of the national industrial recovery act, as advocated by the railroad labor unions. If the act promotes the welfare of industries and the workers it specifically covers, it should be equally good for the railroads. Whether railroading is formally placed under the recovery act or whether the act is applied in some other guise is not important. The important thing is to apply the principle of the act to them in some form.

Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, has been active in seeking to gain railroad cooperation for objects sought by the NIRA. He has urged railroad managements to spend every available dollar in needed improvements and in other ways to increase employment and purchasing power. What he will accomplish remains to be seen. So far it appears that the railroads have not supported the recovery program to the extent of their ability.

Muscle Shoals electric rates announced by the Tennessee Valley Authority call for an average rate of about 2 cents a kilowatt hour for the typical general consumer, an average of about 2¾ cents for the typical limited user, and an average of about 7 mills for the fully electrified home. The average domestic rate charged by private utilities is 5.58 cents a kilowatt hour.

The private utilities are asserting that the Muscle Shoals schedule is not founded on a basis comparable with their own. David Lilienthal, director in charge of power development at Muscle Shoals, says that the rates are computed on a conservative basis and cover all costs, including operation, maintenance, depreciation, taxes, interest and amortization.

The Muscle Shoals rates give the "yardstick" of electric rates for which Senator Norris and others have long contended. The rates compare closely with those charged by the successful government-operated Ontario hydro-electric system. They should be of great value in this country in the fight against excessive power utility rates.

It is no exaggeration to say that the world is watching the recovery program in the United States as it is watching no other experiment. European labor is keenly interested in the recovery program and regards it as of the utmost importance, pointing the way to other nations if it is even partially successful. This interest is reflected in a statement by Harold Butler, director of the International Labor bureau at Geneva, who recently said the success of the recovery plan would have a great, perhaps decisive, effect on the general recovery of the world. He added that the measures taken under the recovery program have achieved a substantial degree of success, and the results "may be regarded as distinctly encouraging."

CHILD HEALTH RECOVERY CONFERENCE IS CALLED

Washington.—Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins has called a national "child health recovery conference" in Washington for Oct. 6 under the direction of the children's bureau.

The conference will discuss action for regaining for the children what they have lost in health and strength during the depression. It is expected the conference will inaugurate a nation-wide campaign to find the "sore spots" where child malnutrition exists; to conduct physical examinations of the undernourished groups and to apply remedies.

In calling for the conference, Secretary Perkins estimated that probably in the neighborhood of one-fifth of America's children are undernourished.

UNION RECOGNITION BRINGS END TO MILLINERY STRIKE

St. Louis.—Following signing of an agreement recognizing the union, 2,000 striking millinery workers returned to their jobs here. Terms of the agreement were similar to those accepted previously by 1,500 striking members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' union.

Detroit Auto Strike Ends as Employer Agrees to Abide by NRA Labor Clause

Detroit, Sept. 28.—A strike at the plant of the Bower Roller Bearing company ended in victory for the workers and marked a big forward step in the campaign to organize the automobile industry in the Detroit area.

The strike was placed before the local NRA compliance board because of the complaint of the company that the American Federation of Labor had "intimidated" employes and caused the walkout. After a five hours' conference with both sides represented, the following agreement was made:

"It is agreed by both parties to this dispute that the rights of employes as set forth in Section 7 (a) of the recovery act shall prevail and shall be recognized by employes and employer alike. All men and women shall be reinstated in their employment and all men and women who have been laid off shall be given preference for rehiring before any new men or women are taken on, provided they are qualified. Any grievances that cannot be adjusted between the management and the committee representing the union employes shall be referred to the NRA compliance board for arbitration and adjustment."

The settlement was approved by vote of the union, which is chartered by the A. F. of L. The settlement is expected to lead to increased progress in the organization drive here, which is in charge of Organizer William Collins, of the A. F. of L.

Bradford and Cheek Are Local Visitors

J. L. Bradford, of Nashville, member of the general executive board of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, and W. E. Mr. Bradford, who has been a representative of the Brotherhood in the south for many years, was last month elected to membership on the general executive board, succeeding James Ogletree, who died at his home in Florida in June.

Soddy Mine Workers Take Sharp Issue With Spokesman For Non-Union Coal Operators

District 19 In Convention At Knoxville

Representatives of mine workers in District 19 are meeting in convention at Knoxville Thursday and Friday, planning renewed activities under the "new deal" and celebrating what promises to be emancipation of the coal diggers in the Kentucky-Tennessee fields.

William Turnblazer, president, announces special guests of the gathering include high officials of the United Mine Workers of America and other nationally known labor officials. Edward F. McGrady, assistant recovery act administrator, will be one of the speakers at the two-day meeting, it was said.

Miners in District 19 are now practically 100 per cent organized, Mr. Turnblazer announced.

Operation of the coal mines at Soddy and Durham by a company which recently took over the works there is sharply criticized by George Brannam and Fred Clift, president and secretary, respectively, of Local 890, United Mine Workers of America, and a statement given out by a Col Weeks, representing the company, is ridiculed in a communication received by The Labor World this week from the mine union officials.

A rosy picture of the great prosperity and contentment of the Soddy miners, painted for the Chattanooga News by Weeks, is blurred considerably by the detailed reply of the union chiefs, who declare that no union miners are employed at Soddy, and describe working conditions which have been typical of southern coal fields for the past few years.

Statements of Messrs Brannam and Clift follows:

We, the members of Local Union No. 890, of Soddy, wish you would publish the following in your paper. It is a reply to a statement made by Col. Weeks in the Chattanooga News Friday, Sept. 22.

He would make people think that the miners of Soddy are making a living but they are not. We know of men that have worked as much as fourteen days at these mines and come out 20 cents in debt to the company. There was no living expense included, it all went for mine supplies. Col. Weeks and his operator got the miners and day laborers a small raise in wages about a month ago which does not compare very favorably with the advance on coal to the consumer. The advance to the consumer was far in excess of what advance the miner and day laborer received. These miners do all their dead work without pay. This dead work was paid for by the company before Col. Weeks took charge of the mines. This dead work is composed of bailing water, laying road, moving fallen slate and shooting up bottom for roadway. In taking this bottom for roadway, where the coal is 24 inches in thickness, the miner has to shoot up 3 feet of slate and 5 feet in width that they don't get anything for.

Now in a place like the above-mentioned a miner will load coal for three days and do dead work the rest of the week. He only gets from 60 cents to 70 cents per ton for loading coal and all of the expense for shooting this coal loose is paid by the miner. The expense includes keg powder, 25 pounds, $2.60; pellet powder, by the case, $5.75; fuse, 100 feet, 75 cents. The average tonnage to the keg powder is about 15 tons, and to the case powder is about 80 tons. The miner must furnish his own mining tools and carbide, which is an added expense. The company has a system of docking the miner we think everybody should know about. The company takes 1 2-10 cents for each pound of slate the miner happens to load in his coal.

The day wage rate, inside labor, $2.40 per day; outside labor, $2.00 per day. We can't see why Col. Weeks should fight the minimum wage of $3.60 and $3.80 as set by the code and the company receiving the enormous price he is receiving for his coal at the tipple. The price at the tipple runs from $3.75 to $4.10 per ton.

Col. Weeks says the operators in this area have and are making every effort to co-operate with the N. R. A. Well, according to his own statement, if his miners will accept starvation wages he and his foreman will co-operate, and we think where a coal operator isn't willing to pay but $3.00 per day for practical miners his property should be confiscated. He says they don't want to be classed with the so-called "chiselers." We are just wondering now what you would class as a chiseler. Mr. Weeks speaks very sympathetic about his 50,000 miners in his area, but he has about 75 men working at Soddy and about 75 or 100 at Durham. Two times 75 doesn't quite figure out 50,000 men. If Mr. Weeks and his fellow-operators who employ 50,000 men have $60,000,000 worth of property tied up in coal mines, as he says they have, they should be willing to co-operate with the officils of the United Mine Workers and the president of the United States, instead of trying to hold out and form a code that will comply with cheap wage rate. Mr. Weeks says, "we have spent more money than any other industrial organization in our efforts to get a fair deal for our miners." You will notice from the above prices and conditions at his mines that Mr. Weeks believes in a square deal for his men. We take for granted from his own statement that Mr. Weeks is going to put the $3.00 minimum wage scale up to his workers. We think that is unnecessary because the code has already put $3.60 and $3.80 up to Mr. Weeks.

Mr. Weeks says he intends to continue operation of his mines to give the home owner and the small farm owner employment. Mr. Weeks shouldn't worry about the small farm owner, because a man with a small garden spot could produce more than he could make in Mr. Weeks' mines. Mr. Weeks refers to the discussion of the high wage scale in Washington and he says it was labor representatives who answered that if mine operators couldn't pay the minimum wage provided in the code they should shut down. We are wondering if this was the time Mr. Weeks stepped in with his code of 25 cents an hour for inside and outside labor. We feel sorry for Mr. Weeks for letting the officials of the United Mine Workers and the northern operators get ahead of him to the president of the United States. We say amen to the officials of the United Mine Workers and the northern operators.

Mr. Weeks says he is not contesting the code as a whole or any part except the minimum wage. Why should Mr. Weeks contest the minimum wage scale of the code when he will only pass it on to the consumer, as he has done in the past? The Soddy mines were operated under an agreement with the United Mine Workers for thirty years up to the time Col. Weeks and his fellow-operator took charge of the mines. During this thirty years was when Soddy was built and the men prepared to buy their homes. We still have a local union here at Soddy with a membership of sixty, but not any of the members are employed at the mines. The United Mine Workers and all its members are behind the N. R. A. and the president of the United States 100 per cent.

Coal Operators and Union Sign Pact Covering 340,000 Miners

Washington, Sept. 28.—Bituminous coal operators and officials of the United Mine Workers of America have signed a contract covering wages and working conditions for 340,000 miners in non-union fields, from Pennsylvania to the Alabama line.

The agreement was signed by President Roosevelt and Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator.

Code provisions on tonnage and basic day rates were carried out in the agreement, which fixes the basic wage scales for nearly every mine in the nation and is declared to be one of the most comprehensive labor agreements ever signed in the United States. Only Alabama and Western Kentucky are omitted from the agreement, which was signed by at least one operator who had sworn he would never again have dealings with the United Mine Workers.

The agreement is an aftermath of the active organization campaign carried on in the non-union fields by the United Mine Workers as soon as the Recovery Act became law on June 16.

With its provisions for wage increases of between 20 and 300 per cent and its clauses safeguarding the pay of the men and insuring them the right to check-weighmen on the tipples and check-measuring men to inspect loaded coal cars, the agreement is regarded by the miners as a "magna charta" which will play an important part in the stabilization of the industry.

Dovetailed into the wage and working agreement is the soft coal code which, in the opinion of the operators, will be equally effective in leading to a rational solution of the outstanding problems of their industry.

The operators fought against the unionization of their mines for many weeks, but resigned themselves to signing a union wage agreement when they were convinced that their mines has really been unionized.

Note Bereavement Of Brother Members

Members of Local 1747, United Textile Workers of America, asked The Labor World this week to note the recent passing of relatives of two active members of that union.

Mrs. Jessie Lee Beard Thurman, wife of H. H. Thurman, aged 33, passed away at her home in East Ridge, leaving the husband and two children to mourn her loss. Funeral was held from the home, and interment was in Greenwood Memorial Park.

Claude Hagan, 32, an employe of the Mountain City Mill and brother of Clure Hagan, member of Local 1747, died at his home in the Carlyle apartments, leaving, besides his brother, two sisters.

The Labor World joins with the members of Local 1747 in extending to the bereaved brothers and other relatives heartfelt sympathy.

Lady Took Cardui And Got Rid of Pain In Her Side

"Last summer, my health was bad, so I began taking Cardui," writes Mrs. H. E. Slaughter, of Norman, Okla. "My mother had given me Cardui in girlhood, so naturally I turned to it when I felt I needed it. I felt run-down and a general weakness. I had bad, dizzy headaches when everything would seem to dance before my eyes. My right side pained me so much, but since taking Cardui the pain has left me. I have taken several bottles of Cardui and have improved a great deal."

"ACTION" IS KEYNOTE OF A. F. L. MEET

President Green Says Old, Quiet Days Are Gone.

DAYS OF BLAZING NEW TRAIL HERE

Convention Breaks All Records for Attendance and Interest.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Breaking all records for size, crowding literally against the sides of the convention hall, keyed with enthusiasm and ready for anything, the American Federation of Labor convention in its first week here got set to lay down a fighting program.

The 30-hour week is a more definite goal than ever. The determination that industrial government must succeed and deal fairly with labor is greater than ever.

And the demand for organization simply passes all bounds. Inspired by President William Green's declaration that the next goal is ten million members and the next after that twenty-five million, delegates are united in the determination that the organizing work thus far done is just the beginning.

Labor Aims Paramount.

The outstanding aims of this convention as thus far expressed are strictly labor aims—trade union aims—shorter hours, better pay, more organization, plus a demand for real and effective representation of labor in all code authority machinery and in the whole NIRA structure.

The air seems charged with something that was perhaps best put in the words of President Green when he shouted, "Action, Action, Action," in his opening speech. The old, quiet days, the days of discouragement, have gone and days of blazing a new trail have come. There is, actually, in this convention, the thrill of men engaged in adventure, known only to men who go out to seek a new land or to do a great thing for the first time in the experience of men.

Notables Are Heard.

Notables came this week, too, to address the federation. Of these Secretary of Labor Perkins was the chief. Nor was the convention itself the only arena of action. The International Labor Press of America met on Monday night, while on Tuesday and Wednesday nights the workers' education bureau held meetings, laying plans for vast extension of adult education work.

President Green emphasized labor's contention that hours of labor are too long and wages too low under NRA codes.

"In our honest judgment," he told the delegates, "the hours of labor in many of these codes are so high that in operation they will not absorb a single worker into industry. They fall short of the mark.

"Three million workers taken back, with eleven million still idle, and most of all of the labor codes now completed and applied. This, perhaps, should not be regarded as a criticism. It is merely an acknowledgment of the facts, and so it behooves labor to press upon those in charge of the administration of the act the necessity of revising these codes at the earliest opportunity so that the hours of labor will be reduced to a point where these eleven million men will be taken back into industry, if possible, before winter comes.

Eight-Hour Day Gone.

"We are convinced that the eight-hour day and 48-hour week and the 50-hour week have gone. The four years' experience has shown that through the introduction of mechanical devices you cannot find work for all who are ready and willing to work, on the basis of a 48-hour or 50-hour work week, and yet, despite these overwhelming facts, many of the codes carry a 40, a 48, and even a 54-hour work week.

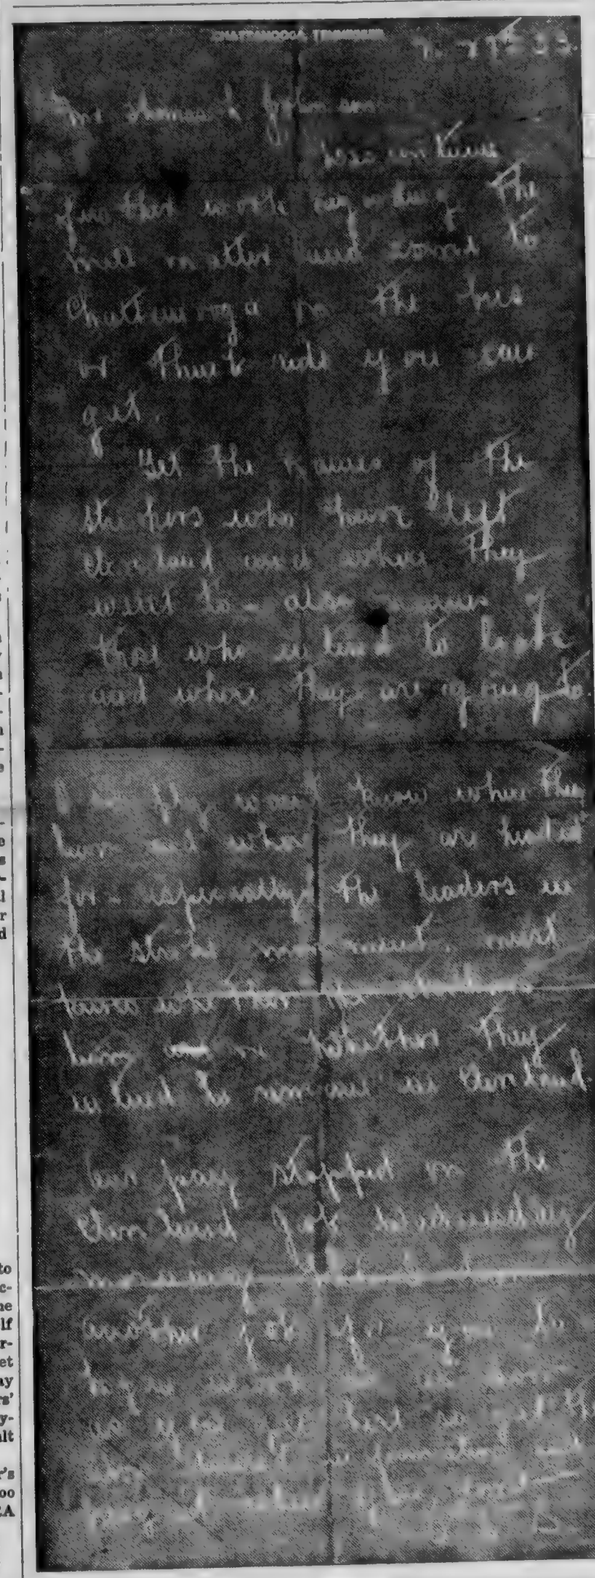
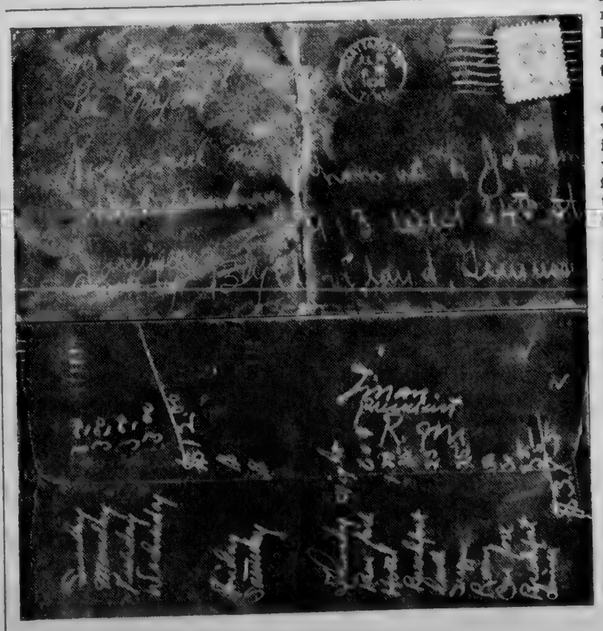
Local Workers Secure Evidence of Stool-Pigeon's Activities in Attempt to Break Textile Organization





PHOTOSTATIC COPIES SENT WASHINGTON

President Green Will Seek Investigation.

MAY EXPLAIN WHY DEBONAIR STRIKE LOST

Report of "Operative" Indicates How Workers Are Harrassed in Efforts to Protect Themselves Against Discrimination and Injustice.

Evidence indicating the nature of the struggle which local textile workers are being forced to go through in their efforts to co-operate with the President and congress of the United States in the great program for national recovery was furnished The Labor World by a patriotic local citizen.

In major industrial disputes in Chattanooga heretofore, labor officials have charged that "private detectives" dogged the footsteps of the workers, snooping into every activity and naturally reporting to their employers when individuals were found active in organization affairs. Result was immediate discharge for the "guilty" workers.

It was hoped, however, that with the nation in the midst of the greatest crisis in history—on the threshold, however, of emergence from constant threats of complete collapse—employer and employe alike would stand together in support of earnest appeals by the President for co-operation in restoring confidence and ultimate prosperity to the people.

That some remain unregenerated, and propose to follow the old rules of selfishness, is indicated in the evidence referred to, and the accompanying photostatic copies of documents which came into the hands of local citizens by chance make interesting reading in these dark and troublous days.

The papers pictured here obviously are in reference to a strike of workers at the Debonair mills at Cleveland, Tenn., some weeks ago, which was lost when the mill owners refused to deal with the workers collectively, and the usual strike-breaking methods were employed. Incidentally, this strike occurred when certain of the employes were discharged for petitioning the management for a raise in wages, and such of the workers as the management chose to re-employ eventually returned to work. A number of the leaders, whose names appear in the accompanying pictures, were forced to seek employment in other fields.

During the progress of this strike one Johnson made application and was admitted to the union. His activities, however, were suddenly ended when he was openly denounced on the floor of a meeting and expelled from the organization for alleged "informing."

The letter on the left, signed "F. S. S.," was written on the stationery of a local business institution, the name of this business being deleted for obvious reasons. It reads:

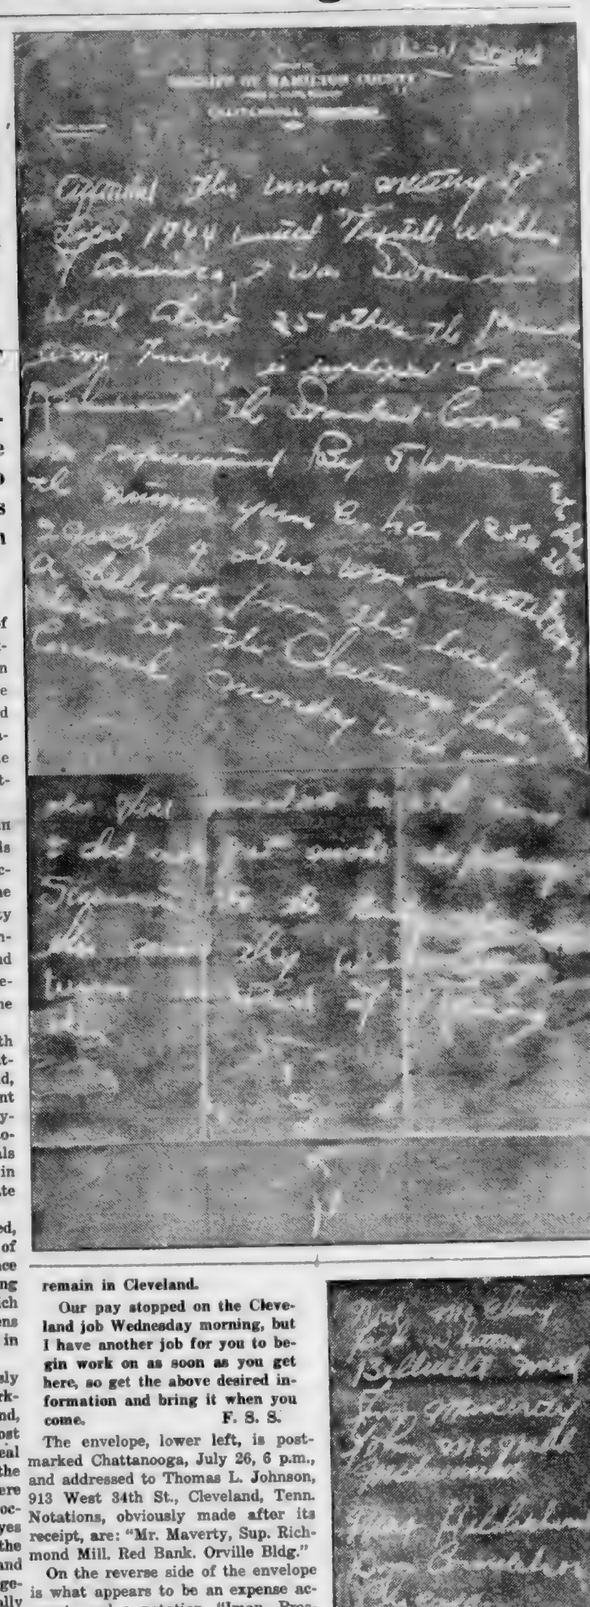
3-23-33.

Mr. Thomas L. Johnson:

Discontinue further work regarding the mill matter and come to Chattanooga on the bus, or thumb ride if you can get.

Get the names of the strikers who have left Cleveland and where they went to. Also names of those who intend to leave and where they are going to. I simply want to know when they leave and where they are headed for, especially the leaders in the strike movement. Must know whether the strikers leave or whether they remain in Cleveland.

Our pay stopped on the Cleveland job Wednesday morning, but I have another job for you to begin work on as soon as you get here, so get the above desired information and bring it when you come. F. S. S.



The envelope, lower left, is postmarked Chattanooga, July 26, 6 p.m., and addressed to Thomas L. Johnson, 913 West 34th St., Cleveland, Tenn. Notations, obviously made after its receipt, are: "Mr. Maverty, Sup. Richmond Mill. Red Bank. Orville Bldg."

On the reverse side of the envelope is what appears to be an expense account, and a notation, "Iman, President. R. M." Mr. Iman, employe of the Richmond mills, is president of a local union.

Letter on the right, top, reads:

Attended the union meeting of Local 1744, United Textile Workers of America. I was sworn in with about 25 others. The president, A. M. Liner, is employed at the Richmond. The Standard-Coosa Co. was represented by 5 women, who joined. The National Yarn Co. has 125 or 26 members. I with 4 others was selected a delegate from this local to represent them at the Chattanooga Labor Council Monday week, Aug . . .

The vice-president, whose name I did not get, made the following report to the body, that in this mill they were cutting wages instead of raising them.

The phone number noted at the bottom of the letter is not listed in the directory, but inquiry at the telephone company brought information that 6-0882 was listed in the name of Frank S. Shipp. Mr. Shipp operates a private detective agency.

At the lower right is a list of names, all of whom were active in the Cleveland strike, and who were forced to leave that city. The notations read:

The photostatic copies here pictured have been sent to Washington, and President Green promises prompt action. He has taken the matter up with the recovery administration, and the letters will also be furnished President McMahon, for use with evidence he is compiling to place before the attorney-general of the United States.

SEES DANGER IN MASS ATTACK ON PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Workers Urged to Rally to Defense.

REACTIONARIES MAY DESTROY SYSTEM

Situation "Alarming and Tragic," Says Executive Council.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Facts and figures on the curtailment of public school facilities and the slashing of teachers' salaries "paint the picture of the passing of the free public school," the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor declares in its report to the fifty-third annual convention of the federation in Washington.

Characterizing the present school situation as "alarming and tragic," the council calls for labor to make the fight of its life in defense of the American public school system.

"We cannot simply sit by and watch the passing of the free public school which organized labor more than any other agency in this country helped to establish," the report says.

Federal Aid Urged.

Federal aid for the schools is strongly urged. "We do not deny local and state responsibility. We insist on it. But while we may be arguing on state capacity to meet these social obligations the point is that they are not being met," the report says. It continues:

"The nation's responsibility is clearly set out; for the boys and girls today denied an education in any one state may migrate into another state, and there become social burdens to people who may have expended wisely and well for their public schools. Just as the state established state aid for educational work to handicapped local communities, so today the call is being made that the federal government aid the handicapped states in maintaining the free public school."

Salary Cuts Condemned.

The report points out that teachers' pay has been drastically cut in the last two years and says the figures tell the tale of the direst sort of poverty for one group of workers—the teachers. It adds:

"At a time when industry is being asked to maintain a living wage; when minima for wages are set in all crafts with additional graduated increments for those who merit them, it is a sad commentary to note that the legal minimum salary of teachers is being reduced to a new low level.

"In the face of current economies local school systems are being forced to effect so-called economies. These so-called economies are all too often forms of tragic waste."

Tax Dodging Is Hit.

Tax delinquency is declared to be the principal cause of the breakdown of the state and local school systems. "Thousands of people simply cannot pay their taxes; unfortunately, thousands more do not," the report says. It makes the following recommendations:

"As tax dodging has become an all too prevalent activity and as state and local taxes as well as federal funds are evaded, thereby causing the tragic shortage in state and local funds, which is reflected in the state's inability to maintain its schools and its social services, we feel there should be made available to the public data on income tax payment."

Other Recommendations.

Other recommendations for dealing with the situation include:

If states wish to borrow from the federal government to maintain schools they should have the right to do so.

While road construction work is necessary and valuable in the employment of many workers, we feel that the building of school houses at this time to take care of the pres-

Lasting Influence of Samuel Gompers

A merited tribute to the beneficial influence of the late Samuel Gompers on the trade union movement and American institutions generally was paid by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in their report to the annual convention of the federation. Relative to Gompers' constructive work in the interest of the toilers while he lived, the council said:

The reason for our choice of Washington for our convention city this year, constitutes an historic link in the continuity of union development—the dedication of a memorial to one of the founders of the American Federation of Labor—Samuel Gompers. The memory and the record of the man who served as the chief executive of the federation for more than forty years are an inspiration to us in this period of re-birth. In the founding of the American trade union movement, devotion, sacrifice and passion for human welfare made possible the union institutions of which we are the present trustees.

The life of Samuel Gompers was devoted unreservedly to the labor movement and the quality of his leadership brought respect and standing to our movement. As in this convention we plan the future of our labor movement in the new era we have entered, it is most fitting we should be mindful of the record of the past and the principles evolved under the leadership of our first president.

Nor was the council unmindful of the fact that the imprint which leaders like Gompers leave on the labor movement and other social institutions endure long after their physical bodies have turned to dust. On this subject the council observed:

As we turn our thoughts from the present to the leader who in a very real sense typifies a definite epoch in development of labor institutions, we are helped to distinguish the things of permanent value.

Though many of the men and the women who were the pioneers in our movement are gone, the spirit of Labor goes on—love of fellow men, concern for their problems and services, the will to get them justice in daily living, to help them steadily and surely move upward and onward—these are the things that have given the labor movement continuity and purpose and endurance.

These are the qualities we must carry from the past into the present and the future. That we may hand on these qualities is the obligation by which future generations shall judge our statesmanship.

The point emphasized by the council is commendable. The influence of Gompers in shaping the principles underlying the American labor movement still holds sway and will endure as long as men and women toil and spin in order to live.

Bankrupt Individualism

Extreme individualism, resulting in cut-throat competition, low wages, long hours, child labor, and a host of other evils which disgrace our civilization, is rapidly becoming a thing of the past, according to the report of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor to the federation's annual convention. On this point and the new concept of institutions based on the public interest the council said:

The fifty-third convention of the American Federation of Labor comes at a time when our industrial life is shifting from the practices of individualism under which it has developed thus far, to group control in the interests of all concerned. The adjustments now in the making require a shift in controlling motives from the spirit of selfishness and conflict to decision based upon scientific data indicating industrial and public welfare. We are trying to work out a revolutionary shift of concepts in a practical way—a shift from the idea that any one group can prosper at the expense of others, to an understanding that permanent progress for any group is interdependent upon progress for all other groups—that there must be balanced progress.

The creation of machinery and the initiation of undertakings to save economic institutions and to start a concerted drive for recovery, have made most compelling demands upon the executives of the American Federation of Labor and upon all union organizations as well as upon responsible representatives of employers and the government. Our efforts to care for the interests of labor so that wage earners might do their share in the forward movement, have been unremitting.

The change from individualism to group control, emphasized by the council, is timely and has been developed by the inexorable forces of economic evolution.

For more than a generation the autocrats who own and control American industry have based their policies on the laissez-faire theory of Adam Smith, Malthus, Ricardo, and other reactionary English economists, who held that the greatest progress would be secured by no interference with free competition.

This policy turned industry into a jungle fight with the workers trampled into the dust of poverty, destitution, and slavery. Its normal result in the United States was the economic chaos which began in 1929 and threw over 12,000,000 American workers into the unemployed army in less than three years, with the rugged individualism of industry and political leaders completely bankrupt as to remedies.

Under these conditions the death of unregulated competition and the advent of group control of economic institutions were inevitable. As the council well says, the influence of the labor movement in shaping the machinery for the development of production and distribution of wealth under the new grouping is imperatively necessary for the protection of all working men and women, organized and unorganized, and it is fortunate for the workers that when the plunge of individualism became inevitable the American Federation of Labor was thoroughly equipped to represent the toilers in shaping the new institutions.

"Safety First"—For Pigs

Mr. James W. Shudder Wadsworth, a congressman from New York, is suffering deep thrills of agony from reading the reports of the "slaughter of the innocents," as he calls it. All of which comes from the efforts of Secretary Wallace to reduce the porker supply so as to increase the price of pork.

Mr. Wadsworth says he "shudders" when he thinks of the horrors of this too youthful slaughter of the innocent piggies. It cannot be that Mr. Shudder Wadsworth is a vegetarian—or he would say so. They always do that. Perhaps he has just been associated considerably with the S. P. C. A., and has cultivated some super-delicacy of nerves.

We respectfully rise to suggest that Shudder Wadsworth betake himself and his nerves down into the "Deep South," where some folks—white as well as black—are undoubtedly thrilling more than he is when they hear of little pigs being turned into fertilizer. But that is not because they "feel for the pigs." It is because they are out of reach of those pigs. There are neighborhoods where those little piglets would not have to be taken to any modern slaughterhouse to find their finishes.

Folks are hungry—in the "Deep South," as well as other places which could be mentioned. If Shudder W. had ever had that kind of a thrill—not the kind that comes from dinner being late on the table, but the kind that comes from thin dinners in succession, or from no dinner at all—it may be that his shudders would be hitched up with a different kind of a story.

There may be something strange about destroying good food to get more grub and clothes for the farmers. But there is something stranger still in the fact that millions are on the edge of the hunger zone in a country where there are millions of piglets to be made into fertilizer.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

President Green, of the American Federation of Labor, is doing a big public service by warning that relief needs this winter will be greater than ever before. He points out that despite encouraging employment gains, progress in re-employment is slow and millions of persons still face a desperate situation.

There is nothing to be gained by blinking the facts set forth by Mr. Green. The nation must gird itself to care for the unemployed. It will be a hard task and will quite likely mean higher taxes and a greater all-around burden on the nation, but it cannot be dodged. Both humanity and enlightened self-interest demand that victims of the depression be given adequate food, clothing and shelter until such time as they can find employment.

Labor can't emphasize too much or too often that prosperity is dependent upon high incomes for many, not of the few. Purchasing power must be widely spread or there can be no sound prosperity. Recovery act codes are raising purchasing power for the masses but they are not going rar enough. Labor recognizes this and business men are beginning to see it.

Among those who sees the urgent necessity of setting higher wages under the codes is Malcolm Muir, business man and deputy administrator of the recovery administration. He said recently:

"The recovery act has been referred to as a 'labor law.' It is in the sense that if we are to have prosperity in this country we must first make sure that the rank and file of workers are gainfully employed. I would remind you that those whose incomes are $2,500 a year or less consume about 80 per cent of all our factory production. Unless this fact is recognized and unless means are found to pay adequate wages to this vast army of employes, our factories cannot be busy and the capital invested in industry cannot receive its proper reward. Therefore, if the codes being worked out by each industry fail to recognize this fact, and also fail to direct industry to correct those abuses which industry was unable to correct, the purpose of this law will fail."

Strikes are peppered throughout the nation. One spokesman for industry suggests a truce on strikes and lockouts for six months.

Workers, freed under the law from the old slavery, are asserting that freedom in a hopeful battle for decency of wages and hours. If the code-making machinery moves too slow they intend to hasten matters.

The fact that there are strikes is encouraging. If there were none it would be a sign of stagnation, of hopefulness, of willingness to go after better things. A nation in which no man is willing to go into battle to gain a better life is a nation for which there is little hope. There is plenty of hope for America!

$51,448,348 Benefits Paid by Trade Unions

Washington.—Over fifty-one million dollars were paid in benefits by the standard national and international trade unions of the United States and Canada in 1932, according to the report of the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor to the federation's annual convention in session here.

The amounts disbursed for the various forms of benefit follow:

Death benefits	$17,674,383.64
Sick benefits	2,308,040.08
Unemployment benefits	19,970,556.86
Old age pensions	6,148,302.12
Disability benefits	4,006,890.68
Miscellaneous benefits	1,340,175.35
Total benefits	$51,448,348.73

Increase During Year.

"Last year the Executive Council in its annual report to the convention showed the payment of $39,961,873.14 in all forms of benefits by our affiliated and recognized trade union organizations. This year we report a substantial increase over the figures shown last year and a total which will astonish even those who have had some knowledge and experience of the benefit benefit system of our trade union movement.

"The total sum paid in all forms of benefits for the year 1932 reached the astonishing figure of $51,448,348.73, an average expenditure of approximately $1,000,000 a week.

Big Unemployment Benefits.

"The greatest individual benefit payment was that of unemployment benefits, a total of $19,970,556.86 having been expended in this one form of benefit alone. This represents a spirit and degree of self-sacrifice unknown in any circles other than trade union circles. It represents the extent to which members of the trade union movement have voluntarily assessed themselves in a substantial form to provide out-of-work benefits for their idle brothers. It is a splendid manifestation of trade union self-sacrifice.

Millions for Death Benefits.

"Over $17,500,000 were expended in death benefits, over $2,000,000 in sick benefits, over $6,000,000 in old age pensions and over $4,000,000 in disability benefits."

MORRISON ASKS 40 HOURS FOR EDITORIAL WRITERS

Washington.—The 40-hour week in the daily newspaper code should be accorded to all editorial writers excepting those receiving $75 a week or more, Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, told the national recovery administration in the hearing on the code.

Mr. Morrison also offered an additional amendment under which persons gathering, writing or editing news would receive a minimum weekly salary of not less than the wages paid to the highest class of skilled mechanics employed on the same newspaper, and that they observe the same hours of work as the skilled mechanics.

The provision of the code which drew Mr. Morrison's criticism is that which declares that professional employes, "within which class may be included reporters receiving in excess of $35 a week," shall not be covered by the code for the industry.

Ogburn Warns of Danger In Soaring Price Levels

Chicago, Sept. 7.—If prices rise faster than wages there will be another economic catastrophe, Prof. William F. Ogburn, formerly director of the NIRA consumers' board, told the City club here. Ogburn recently resigned from the consumers' board after some dissension.

"The tendency undoubtedly is for price to rise the faster," he said. "It is easier to mork up the prices of things you sell than it is to mork up wages, hence it is the consumer's moral duty to watch prices closely and keep them down."

Prof. Ogburn said there was "no doubt that the new deal is weakening the forces of competition which keep prices down."

Militant Efforts of AFL in Organizing Workers Has Achieved Great Success

Executive Council Declares Recovery Act Imposed Upon Wage-earners the Obligation to Group Themselves in Trade Unions —Nationwide Campaign in Basic Industries Has Brought Thousands of Toilers Into Union Fold.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The militant and constructive work performed by the American Federation of Labor in enrolling thousands of workers in the ranks of trade unionism since the enactment of the national industrial recovery law is told with clearness and precision by the Executive Council of the federation in their report to the annual convention here.

"Conscious of the fact that lack of organization among wage-earners had been a major factor in the unbalance in distribution of national income which was one of the causes of our economic breakdown, labor regarded the passage of the national recovery act as imposing an obligation upon wage-earners to organize in trade unions," the council said.

"Wage-earners have been quick to seize the opportunity for organization which the legislation affords them. After four years of uncertainties of unemployment and loss of savings, wage-earners turn eagerly to an agency that provides opportunity for effectively bettering their conditions and giving them a greater degree of security. Accordingly, both spontaneous and directed organizing campaigns have been vigorously under way. More charters per day since July 1 have been granted to federal labor unions than at any previous time for which we have records.

Efforts Centered on Basic Industries.

"We have concentrated our efforts more especially upon organizing the workers in the basic industries; that is, steel, automobiles, textiles, oil and rubber. To the fullest extent of the federation's financial ability organizing campaigns in these centers have been aggressively carried on.

"Progress has been made, not as great as our hopes would realize, but amply sufficient to encourage us to still greater efforts.

"In another section of this report is given the number (340) of newly organized unions directly chartered by the American Federation of Labor since the passage of the national recovery act.

"This in itself is heartening; but, in addition, is the constantly increasing appeals from every section of the country, from the workers of all trades and callings and of no special trade, for aid, help and guidance that they, too, may have actual personal experience of the freedom of the workers guaranteed by the national recovery act.

"Neither have we made any attempt as yet to obtain from the national and international unions a compilation of increased membership through charters issued to newly formed unions.

Automobile Headquarters in Detroit.

"We established organizing headquarters in the center of the automobile industry, Detroit, with a special representative of the American Federation of Labor in charge to direct the organizing campaign.

"In Atlanta, Ga., another special representative is devoting his full time to the campaign of organization among workers in the southern states, particularly the textile workers.

"In the rubber industry in the city of Akron, the federation's special representative is carrying on an active and aggressive campaign.

Campaigns of National Unions.

"In the iron and steel districts we are likewise actively engaged.

"We repeat that the progress made is encouraging. Our organizing campaign has been greatly accelerated by the splendid work of our volunteer organizers, the organizing committees of the state and city central bodies, and the special representatives of national and international unions. Indeed, without their valuable co-operation and aid, our work would be greatly handicapped. We take the opportunity now to express to them our great appreciation for their loyal co-operation and help.

"National and internattional unions have been conducting organizing campaigns which have notably increased membership and brought a new spirit of hope to wage-earners. After four years of depression they are eager for a voice in determining work conditions and are eagerly responding to the opportunity which the recovery act assures, the 'right to union membership. These energetic, well-organized campaigns are steadily increasing union members.

"We urge upon all organizations of labor and their individual members to support and co-operate in every effort which may be made in their localities to organize the unorganized and to build up and strengthen the existing organizations.

"We recommend that the organizing campaign which is now being carried on be continued in a broad, vigorous and progressive way so that all workers may be accorded the widest opportunity to organize and become affiliated with the American Federation of Labor."

FIRST MONTH OF CODES BRINGS DROP IN HOURS AND INCREASE IN WAGES

Washington, Oct. 5.—With only a few major industries under codes in August, it is possible to show now something of their effect in shorter hours and higher wages, in the industries affected. Twenty per cent of all the manufacturing establishments reporting, or 3,776 establishments, showed a total increase of $12,000,000 in wage rates, and a drop in time worked from 42.3 hours to 38.6 hours in the eighty-nine industries covered by the survey. In this there is also felt the effect of the blanket codes.

Industries under the codes showed the following drop in labor hours: Cotton industry, from 49 hours to 36.5; woolen and worsteds, 48.5 to 41.2; shipbuilding, 33.6 to 30.3; electrical machinery, 38.1 to 35.4; women's clothing, 38.9 to 35.1; and corsets and allied garments, 39.8 to 39.3 hours.

Increases in wages in the same industries showed: Cotton goods, from 23.2 cents per hour to 36.1 cents; woolens and worsteds, 35.8 to 43.3; shipbuilding, from 56.4 to 61.7; electrical machinery, 53.7 to 57.0 cents; women's clothing, 34.4 to 43.3; corsets and allied garments, 25.3 to 41.3 cents per hour.

Similar changes appear in other industries under the blanket codes, and the total number of employes affected is reported as 1,145,576, whose rates were increased by 24.3 per cent.

However, the average picture is that of the average worker, receiving about the same wages, working shorter hours, and additional workers employed because of the shortening of the work week.

Dairy Workers Have Live Organization

The newly-organized union of Dairy Workers, which is one of the livest of the late additions to Chattanooga's growing family of locals, is rapidly increasing family of locals, is rapidly five of the larger dairies are practically 100 per cent organized.

Chattanooga Trades and Labor council and its forty-seven affiliated unions will join The Labor World in congratulation to the officers and members of the "baby organization," and we have no hesitation in assuring the co-operation which is solicited in the following joint statement prepared by J. H. Bannister, president, and Arnold Morgan, business agent:

"We are proud of this opportunity to officially give, through the columns of this newspaper, recognition of the newly organized Dairyman's union of this city.

"This is a young local, just now passing through the period of organization. However, they are making wonderful progress and have a fine start. The boys who make up this local are eager, alert and full of life, and it is our opinion that they will be heard from in the future.

"Any co-operation given these men will be appreciated and reciprocated.

"The dairies listed below are 100 per cent, or nearly so, organized:

"United Dairies, both milk and ice cream; Koons dairy, Cream Top Creamery, Clover Leaf Dairy, Morning Star Dairy.

"The following companies have not as yet seen fit to join this movement:

"Grant-Patten Milk company, Southern Dairies, Inc., Fay B. Murphy Dairy, Sterchi & Sons Dairy and some few others.

"If you want milk from a union man, ask to see his union card.

Hope to Adjust Lane Controversy

Building trades representatives held hopes this week of an adjustment of the controversy with the Lane Drug company, which has been in effect for several weeks.

Following a conference with President Naylor, of the Lane company, last Saturday, union representatives expressed confidence that an eventual agreement could be reached.

Pickets which have been patrolling the vicinity of the store were removed this week pending outcome of the negotiations.

"Can labor remain quiet, can it fail to measure up to the situation? No, it cannot do that. It must press with all the vigor it possesses upon the administration the necessity of reducing the hours of work to the point where men and women, willing and ready to work, shall be accorded an opportunity to do so.

"I am going to vote my personal opinion. It is an opinion arrived at after careful and mature deliberation. It is my opinion that unemployment will not be overcome, that the eleven millions of workers who are begging and pleading for an opportunity to work, cannot get back until we face this issue boldly, uncompromisingly, and establish in these industrial codes of fair practice the six-hour day and the five-day work week."

Workers Now Free to Organize.

He maintained that labor was swelling its ranks because the workers realize "that there is a new deal and a new day." The door of opportunity was open and the workers were no longer deterred from joining unions by threats of discharge, or by company unions and "yellow dog" contracts, he pointed out:

"I am of the opinion," he said, "that the time has arrived when the success of the industrial recovery act requires the complete unionization of all the workers in every trade and in every calling in every city and town of the nation."

Mr. Green said the federation was faced with the grave responsibility of educating the 1,500,000 new members. He went on to support the government workers in their effort to obtain restoration of former wage rates and other privileges abolished under the economy program.

Gotham Painters Win Short Strike

New York City, Oct. 5.—A wage increase was granted and overtime abolished by a settlement which ended a strike of 15,000 painters in Manhattan, Brooklyn and the Bronx. The settlement was made through Grover Whalen, chairman of the local NIRA organization.

Under the agreement, which was approved by employers and workers, the painters are given a 35-hour week and an increase of $1 a day over the old rate of $8. Decision on the matter of overtime work was left with Whalen, who ruled in favor of the strikers on the ground that abolition of overtime work to reduce hours and spread employment was a cardinal feature of the whole recovery act program.

Quillers Hold Outing At Lake Roosevelt

One of the most enjoyable affairs of the summer in trade union circles was the picnic-outing staged last Saturday afternoon and evening at Lake Roosevelt, on the Lee Highway, by members of Local 1747, United Textile Workers of America. Nearly 200 members, their families and guests, enjoyed the afternoon and evening.

Leaving the union hall, Main and Dodds, at 2 o'clock, the picnickers enjoyed the various events until 9 at night. Barbecue was the feature from the refreshments angle, and during the several hours spent at the resort various games and contests were constantly in progress. Dancing, swimming, baseball and similar sports were chosen by the younger members, while those not quite so young turned to the ancient and honorable pastime of barnyard golf for their entertainment.

The affair was arranged by a committee consisting of W. F. Murray, George Holmes, Wiley Holmes, Mrs. Ethel Rogers, Mrs. Lucile Barksdale and A. B. Carter.

Members are seriously considering making the picnic-outing an annual affair, it was said.

Hopkins Fixes Medical Aid Rules for Jobless

Recognition of Family-Physician Relationship Is Essence of Relief Administrator's Policy.

Washington.—Rules governing the expenditures of federal funds for medical, nursing and dental care of sick and destitute unemployed persons who are "on relief" were announced by Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator.

The regulations seek to improve conditions of service for the unemployed, the professions and the relief officials in the localities under the immediate supervision of which the needy sick are cared for.

The use of federal relief money for medical care is limited to service in the home or office call. Federal funds cannot be used to pay hospital bills or for treatment in nursing homes or clinics. Office service for ambulatory patients is permitted, on the understanding that it shall not supplant the services of clinics already provided in the community.

The essence of the relief administration's policy was declared to be the recognition of the traditional family and family-physician, physician-nurse and dentist-patient relationship in the authorization of medical nursing and emergency dental care of indigent persons in their homes, and agreement by the physician, nurse and dentist to "furnish the same type of service as would be rendered to a private patient, at a minimum consistent with good professional judgment, and an agreed rate which makes due allowance for conservation of relief funds."

"The common aim," Mr. Hopkins said, "should be the provision of good medical service at a low cost—to the mutual benefit of indigent patient, physician, nurse, dentist and taxpayer."

Public Backs Hosiery Strikers' Demand for Union Recognition

Hornell, N. Y.—Public sentiment strongly backed striking workers of the Merrill Hosiery company in their demand for union recognition and union rates and conditions. A mass meeting in support of the workers was attended by 2,000 persons and sympathy for them was manifested in other ways. Wages in recent years went to very low levels. The whole town suffered from the lack of purchasing power the low wage condition created and is now rooting for a successful conclusion to the strikers' fight.

Toilers Are Held Entitled to Voice In All Decisions

A. F. of L. Executive Council Declares Workers Must Be Represented If Purpose of Recovery Act Is to Be Achieved.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Labor representation in every phase of the operation of the national industrial recovery act is demanded by the Executive Council of the American Federation of Labor in its report to the annual convention of the federation here. The report declares labor representation is essential to success of the recovery act.

Pointing out that the recovery act vitally affects every worker the Executive Council says that the age-long struggle for human justice has centered around the right of representation for those affected by decisions. It continues:

"The right to participation in decisions which concern us either personally or by representation, is a principle growing out of the facts of human nature and human experience. To secure this fundamental right is the primary purpose of the labor movement.

Workers Directly Affected.

"The national recovery administration in attempting to direct planning in industry is setting up industrial policies and standards that affect wage earners profoundly. The whole organization of industry, trade practices, accounting and recording procedures, declaration of dividends, reserves, etc., directly condition and control the opportunities and sources within which standards for wage-earners must be fixed. In order to exercise any real control wage-earners must have the right of representation where decisions are made that limit their own opportunities.

"The right of representation is essential to developing balanced data upon which to make decisions to assure balance in economic progress and, hence, sustained prosperity. Labor maintains, therefore, that if the recovery act is to achieve its purpose —jobs for the unemployed and increased buying power—representatives of wage-earners must have a voice in every stage of code making.

Labor Representation Vital.

"Inequitable distribution of income and unemployment were the result of an industrial control from which labor was excluded. We cannot expect to reverse these two causes of economic disaster unless specific provisions are made for wage-earner representation and participation in every stage of control.

"The American Federation of Labor declares that labor representation in the drafting of code proposals in every stage of code hearing before the national recovery administration and in the enforcement and administrative agencies provided by the code, is essential to achieving the purposes of the national recovery act and to meeting the requirements of human justice."

In discussing tendencies and problems of the recovery act, the report again stresses labor representation, saying:

"Wage-earners, although co-equal with capital as a producing essential, are in almost every code ignored in setting up the continuing code authority for the industry with power to legislate. As codes will provide industrial government, the significance of this situation is very grave. Workers as such should have representation on the code authority on an equal footing with all other members."

Code Revision Urged.

The report reiterates and emphasizes labor's view that hours are too long and wages too low in codes already established. A summary of standards set up by codes, the report says, discloses definitely the following developments and problems.

Hours of work are too long to assure absorption of the millions without jobs.

Minimum wages are so low that purchasing power lags behind production.

"In order to make the national recovery act serve the purpose for which it was intended," the report says, "it will be necessary to have much greater reductions in work hours and very much higher standards for minimum wages—40 and 48 hours—and even longer on those exempted groups such as watch and repair crews—have been set by codes and agreements when the figures showed that no longer than 30 hours per week could be allowed if we were to find jobs for all."

Organization Stressed.

The council declares that if the purpose of the recovery act is to be achieved, it is obvious that many codes must be reopened for constructive revision.

"The future of the recovery act depends upon the honesty and impartiality of such revisions and the increasing development of balanced participation in decisions of policy and standards," the report adds.

The report points out that the workers must be organized to secure the maximum benefits under the recovery act.

"Organization of wage-earners in unions is the first step for labor's participation in national planning and economic control, as it has ever been the first step in labor's progress," it is declared. "Unions can provide representative authority and responsibility. With adequate and competent representation, labor can do its share in carrying out the purposes of the recovery act and in directing developments so that accomplishments may constitute a foundation for future growth."

That public sentiment is overhelmingly in favor of acting favorbly on the rare opportunity to seure cheap money, make needed pubc improvements and create employent cannot be doubted by anyone, it held, and that the vast fund was reated for the purpose of relieving istress is pointed out as a strong arument in favor of prompt action by tate and local officials, in order that uch relief may be placed in motion efore the winter sets in.

Millions Still Must Have Aid, Labor Head Says

dleness Drops 20 Per Cent Since March, But Situation Is Desperate for Great Many, He Declares.

Washington, Oct. 5.—Making pubc the monthly unemployment report f the American Federation of Lar, based on data from affiliated organizations, President William Green aid that the federation estimates nemployment is still more than 11,00,000, though 815,000 persons reurned to work in August.

President Green warned that improvement in employment must not islead the nation into thinking that he need for relief is over. "Relief eeds this winter will be greater than ver before," he added.

"The president's re-employment rogram in its first month brought reater progress in employment than n any month since the depression egan," Mr. Green said. He coninued:

"Reports of the labor department how that in the seventeen indusries covered by their figures, 750,000 ersons went back to work from July 15 to Aug. 15, and when other industries are added to this total, the ederation estimate shows that in all 15,000 men and women went back to ork in the month of August. Nashville to Vote On Big Bond Issues For Public Works

Total of Nearly Four Millions Proposed for Relief Unemployment.

On Nov. 16, citizens of Nashville will vote on proposed bond issues totaling $3,900,000, to be used for fire hall improvement, police station, police court and workhouse, permanent construction, streets and sewers, waterworks extension, incinerators, viaducts and school buildings.

A recent issue of the Labor Advocate of that city contains a large display ad offering "Nashville's proposed program for public improvements under the NRA," and constitutes an appeal by Mayor Howse and the board of public works for approval of the program. "Give employment now; stand by the president," the appeal reads.

The city officials' statement says:

"In keeping with the president's plan for the speedy return to employment of all persons without jobs, by putting on a program of public improvements where such improvements are necessary, the mayor and board of public works of the city of Nashville presented to the city council and recommended the passage by that body of proposed ordinances for a program of public improvements which have long been needed."

Further, the statement, signed by Mayor Howse and members of the board of public works, declares:

"This money will not all be advanced by the federal government at one time, but will be advanced as the work progresses, and the interest will not start until the money is advanced.

"Study this program carefully. Think of the amount of benefit, for the good of yourself and your neighbor, the distribution of $3,900,000 will bring, then help get it, and let all be put to work as soon as possible by going to the polls on Nov. 16 and voting for all of the bond issues proposed."

Gompers Memorial Fund Totals $69,819

Washington.—The Samuel Gompers memorial fund had a balance of $69,819.06 at the close of the fiscal year, Aug. 31, Frank Morrison, secretary of the American Federation of Labor, reported to the 1933 convention of the federation here.

The total receipts from Dec. 20, 1924, to Aug. 31, amounted to $132,827.68, of which $15,016.45 was interest on fund investments. The expenses from Jan. 12, 1929, to Aug. 31 reached $63,008.62.

AFL Building Fund Has $50,452 Balance

Washington.—The American Federation of Labor building fund closed the A. F. of L. fiscal year with a balance of $50,452.54, according to the report of William Green, Frank Morrison and James O'Connell, trustees of the building.

The total receipts were $32,507.09, and the expenses of maintenance $23,649.34.

Chinese Cotton Mill Strike Ended by Arrest of Leaders

Tientsin, China.—The western method of using government violence to end strikes was used here to discipline 5,000 employes of the Yu Yuan Cotton Mill company, a joint Chino-Chinese concern, who walked out in protest over the work conditions imposed by the cotton capitalists.

Two days after the walkout Gen. Yu Hsueh-chung, chairman of the Hopei provincial government, arrested seventy mill hands whom mill officials charged with "instigating" the employes to strike.

With such a large number of their leaders removed and more arrests threatened, the employes gave up the struggle and returned to work without amelioration of the oppressive conditions which inspired the protest.

LABOR WORLD EXPOSE OF 'DETECTIVE' WORK ROUSES WIDE INTEREST

Publication of Photostatic Copies of Letters Brings Assurances of Sympathy From Manufacturer -- Shipp Charges "Frame-Up" and Declares Johnson Is Employed by Richmond Company -- J. Harvey Wilson Had Denied His Concern Hires Detectives.

Publication of photostatic copies of letters, in last week's Labor World, tending to indicate the snooping activities of "private detectives" in the organization of workers under authority given by the United States government, created widespread interest, and local trades unionists have received many calls and personal assurances of sympathy from fair-minded and patriotic business men who until the evidence was uncovered had shown a disposition to doubt claims of the workers that such activities were being carried on.

A very prominent manufacturer told The Labor World Monday that he had always felt labor charged such unfair practices in an effort to gain sympathy, but publication of the documents had convinced him that "chiselers" were actually guilty of the charges; he further expressed his disapproval of such tactics, and indicated a new conception of the problems of the workers had inspired in him a much greater respect and sympathy for the efforts of organized labor to secure a "square deal" for its members.

The letters and other documents, published on the front page of last week's issue, consisted of apparent instructions to one Johnson, at Cleveland, to secure information with respect to activities of workers, which was signed "F. S. S." This letter was written on the stationery of a local business firm, which was deleted for obvious reasons. Among other photos was one of a "report" unsigned, but with a telephone number noted on the bottom, which the telephone company informed The Labor World was listed in the name of Frank S. Shipp, who has for years operated a private detective agency in Chattanooga.

In Saturday's issue of the afternoon paper Mr. Shipp charged the publications were a "frame-up," and denied any knowledge whatsoever of the letters. He stated he is an "investigator," and is employed for the sole purpose of checking up on thefts of hosiery and tools, etc. He stated Johnson had not been employed by him for several years, but operated a detective agency of his own at Cleveland, Tenn. Mr. Shipp said Johnson has been working for the "Richmond Company."

J. Harvey Wilson, high mogul at the Richmond mills, told a News reporter last Friday, "We do not employ detectives."

The experience of uncovering the work of stool-pigeons in the ranks of labor is not new, quite a number of informers, some operating on behalf of national "agencies," having been spotted in years gone by and forced to suddenly end their activities. Vigilance of local trades unionists, however, had been somewhat slackened by reason of the fact that working people take the federal laws seriously, and had believed the employment of spies by local employers would be abandoned at least temporarily in the great national crisis.

This patriotism is an elusive virtue, ain't it?

Roosevelt Pays High Tribute To Departed Leader

Workers Doing Share to Win War on Depression, He Says—Green Presents Monument to Federal Government.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Labor, represented by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and the nation, represented by the president of the United States, joined in paying tribute to Samuel Gompers at the dedication here of the Samuel Gompers memorial.

In the presence of hundreds of delegates to the fifty-third annual convention of the American Federation of Labor and thousands of spectators, President Roosevelt delivered the dedicatory address after the monument had been unveiled by James Calvin Mackay, 9-year-old great-grandson of the labor chieftain. The president's address was followed by an eloquent tribute to Gompers by Mr. Green, who on behalf of labor presented the memorial to the federal government.

The invocation was by the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington, while the benediction was pronounced by the Right Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of the archdiocese of Baltimore. A band played a number of selections, including the Celeste Aida from the opera "Aida," Mr. Gompers' favorite melody. Wreaths from the Mexican Federation of Labor, International Labor office at Geneva, A. F. of L. and other organizations were placed at the base of the memorial. Messages were received from Louis Mornes, Mexican labor leader; Harold Butler, director of the International Labor office, and others.

Reports Persist Federal Agents Probe "Chiselers"

Possibility Suggested Private Detectives' Activities Under Investigation.

Well-authenticated reports that government agents are working locally, checking up on matters in connection with the NRA, have led to considerable speculation during the past few days.

It is pointed out that such activity has been made inevitable by wholesale "chiseling," and if the rumors are correct it would occasion no surprise to those who have kept in close contact with the situation. It has been repeatedly suggested that the government agents may be investigating the activities of so-called "private detectives," who have been found to be working under cover in the interest of certain industrialists who are combatting the provisions of the NRA which guarantee to workers the right to affiliate with a union of their own choice.

Whatever nature the activities of the alleged investigators takes, however, rumors have become so persistent, and are of such character, that there is little doubt in the minds of many that the federal agents are operating in the city, and that results of these operations may become known before many moons.

CANADIAN EMPLOYMENT GAINS

Ottawa.—The Dominion bureau of statistics estimates that 246,000 idle wage-earners have obtained employment since April 1. Twelve thousand went back to work in August. Index numbers show employment well above the Sept. 1, 1932, mark. The upward trend in jobs has lasted since the beginning of April, the minister of trade and commerce reported.

Filene Advocates Organization Of All Wage Earners

Boston Department Store Head Backs Labor's Drive for 25,000,000 Union Members to Spread Buying Power.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Unqualified support of organized labor's objective of 25,000,000 union workers was voiced by Edward A. Filene, Boston department store owner, in a radio address over a nation-wide hookup of the National Broadcasting company.

"If unionism could be destroyed it would be necessary to build it again," said Filene. He declared that unionism meant a better distribution of buying power as well as stability and efficiency within industry. "I think that employers as a body and in their own interest should hope that labor organizations realize their ambition to enroll 25,000,000 members in union ranks."

Urges Standardized Wages.

Mr. Filene said that if wages were standardized on a high level and taken out of competition, employers would concentrate on improving technique, management and the "enormous wastes that still exist in distribution and in 80 per cent of our production in this country." Buying power, he said, would then be of a capacity sufficient to absorb improvements resulting in additional production.

"Suppose for a moment that President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, could achieve his ambition of enrolling 25,000,000 members in unions," the speaker said. "We would have standard wage scales negotiated with employers' organizations throughout the country. No longer would the pace for business be set by the short-sighted, grasping employer who sought to reap profits from unfair employment conditions. His tactics are bad not only for labor, but for all fair-minded, far-sighted employers as well.

Spread of Buying Power Needed.

"The efficient industrial and business plant of the nation can function smoothly, profitably, creating a wealth of useful goods, only if buying power is equitably distributed.

"Wage scales which were standard throughout the nation graduated according to the skill required and risk involved, and coupled with hours of labor properly determined, would spread buying power. If such wage and working conditions existed, by union and employer organization negotiation, the whole wage question would be taken out of the realm of competition."

Matt J. Robinson Recalls Experience With "Detectives"

Veteran Unionist Turns Back Pages of Local History for New Members.

That activities of "private detectives" in the local labor movement are by no means new was pointed out to delegates at Central Body meeting Monday night by Matt J. Robinson, veteran local trades unionist, who returned to the council as a delegate from Lodge 1450, Machinists, after an absence of several years, during which time, he explained, he has been "resting up."

Mr. Robinson recalled various occasions when stool-pigeons had wormed their way into local unions, only to be discovered after varied lengths of time and forced to transfer their activities to other fields. Among others, he reminded the delegates of the case of one McHold, whose photo was published in The Labor World with stripes and a number, with the approved shaved head.

"Even now," the old-timer said, "there are probably some of this gentry in this hall, waiting to carry back to their employers every act of this body, and every word that is said."

The speaker appealed to the newly-organized unions to be vigilant, and to watch particularly the newcomer who is a stranger, and who takes an over-active part in the proceedings of the locals.

He described the methods of the stool-pigeons, and recalled the incalculable harm which their activities have wrought in Chattanooga in the past.

Mr. Robinson's remarks were well received, and he was warmly applauded at the conclusion of his speech.

No Union Members At Colonial Bakery

T. R. Cuthbert, local organizer for the American Federation of Labor, recalled Friday morning that as yet the newly-organized Bakers' union has no member at the Colonial bakery, although the movement for organization practically originated at that plant, and much enthusiasm shown at the first organization meeting was suddenly cooled for some unexplained reason and none of the original petitioners ever attended another meeting.

The organization, Mr. Cuthbert said, is progressing nicely in other plants, the two largest bakeries in the city being practically 100 per cent organized.

AFL Income $457,923, Expenses $424,236

Washington.—The receipts of the American Federation of Labor were $457,923.90 for the fiscal year ending Aug. 31, 1933, and the expenses $424,236.07, according to the annual report of Frank Morrison, secretary of the federation. The receipts exceeded the expenses by $33,687.83.

The federation began the year with a balance of $368,444.97, and ended it with a balance of $402,132.80.

The per capita tax from affiliated unions amounted to $273,416.59. Initiation fees totaled $26,600.35. The federation received $12,973.14 in interest and $82,820.08 from the American Federationist.

The principal items of expenses were: Organizers' salaries and organizing expenses, $100,301.46; salaries of officers and office employes, $132,221.87; executive council meetings, $9,208.92; legislative expenses, including salaries and expenses of legislative committeemen, $10,779.18; supplies and printing, $16,220.27; printing and publishing American Federationist, $56,637.29; telegrams and telephones, $4,768.09; postage stamps, $9,110.15; expenses Cincinnati convention, $7,852.92.

TIRE DEALER TO 'THINK OVER' LABOR'S CLAIMS

Manager of "Don Cherry Co." Interviewed.

SAYS HOME STORES TRADE WITH HIM

Throw-Sheet Continues Despite Lack of Local Advertising.

Management of the "Don Cherry Tire company," opened recently following withdrawal from Roy McDonald's advertising sheet by a leading tire concern, uses the "Home-Store" throw-sheet because McDonald "trades with him," according to report of a committee which called upon the manager with reference to patronizing McDonald's experiment.

Nothing was said, according to the committee, about the report that the "Cherry Company" is in reality a creation of McDonald's, and the manager promised to "think it over" when asked to place "his" advertising in union publications. A member of the committee, however, discussing the widespread belief that the "Cherry Company" is another of the grocer, baker, dairyman, printer, publisher, individualist's various business enterprises, suggested the possibility that McDonald, having "sold" his chain of groceries to his employes shortly after the code went into effect, may have had another dream in which he was directed to sell a tire business to somebody.

Although reports have persisted that the "Home-Stores" throw-sheet would be abandoned, it was scattered about as usual last week, sans advertising, also as usual, with the exception of the "Home Stores," tire company and a patent-medicine ad, the latter a stomach-ache remedy which is being sold in the "Home Stores" along with McDonald's bread and butter.

Labor World readers will remember that McDonald told a committee which called upon him that he was an individualist, and that anyone who works for him will come to work at such time as he orders, and will quit by the same sign.

President Hoover, he said, made a grave mistake in 1929 when he exacted a pledge from the nation's industrial leaders to keep wages up as an aid to prosperity. Had wages been cut in half at that time, the grocer-baker-dairyman - printer - publisher-individualist averred, we would now be out of the depression, and further, he held, we will never be out until wages are further and further cut.

Wagner Declares Pay Must Go Up, Time Come Down

Wages Sufficient to Absorb Whole Product of Industry Vital to National Well Being, Senator Says.

Washington, Oct. 12.—Beginning its second week, the fifty-third annual convention of the American Federation of Labor here heard Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, indorse labor's hours and wage program, warmly praise labor's leadership and extoll the American worker for a record of "patient heroism almost unique in the annals of the world."

Decision on labor policies for the coming year and action on a long list of resolutions before the convention was started with approval of a resolution urging labor to buy from shops that display the union label in addition to the Blue Eagle. "The presence of both the NRA insignia and the union card is proof that the employer is complying with all the provisions of the retail code," the resolution said.

The convention also adopted a report urging that more states join the fourteen which now have minimum wage legislation for women.

Maybe So, Maybe So

Editor The Labor World:

I noticed in last Saturday's News where our old friend Skinny Shipp said Johnson did not work for him any more, but operated a detective agency of his own at Cleveland.

Was just wondering if maybe Skinny had "sold" the Cleveland branch to Johnson when the code went into effect, like Roy McDonald "sold" his "Home Stores" to his boys.

I ask to know.

GULLIBLE.

Chattanooga, Oct. 13.

An Interloper?

Editor The Labor World.

Since "Skinny" Shipp denies authorship of the letter reproduced in your last issue of The Labor World the situation is extremely complicated.

There isn't any doubt in my mind of the authenticity of the Johnson letter and it is a cinch that the Cleveland strikers didn't either hire him or pay him. It is also reasonable to assume that he was hired and paid.

On the face of it, if one wants to believe Skinny (and someone may want to believe Skinny), it follows that there is another gyp joint in business around these parts.

Well, Senor Redactor, in that case the interloper is doing business without having paid the usual license. I suggest that Skinny, the local Sherlock, should put his entire staff, corps or cohorts on the trail of this buttinsky and drag him forth, pale and trembling, before a local 'squire, who will sock him to the full extent of the law, and more if he can get away with it.

Cost-of-Living Wages

A deserved denunciation of the reactionary policy of limiting wages to the amount which merchants charge the workers for the necessaries of life was made by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in their report to the convention of the federation in session in Washington.

In assailing the so-called "economy" law enacted by the special session of congress convened by President Roosevelt last March the council said:

> The law provides for determining wages on the basis of cost of living. This plan of determining wages is probably the most indefensible action ever taken by Congress. It was imported from Denmark where the wages of government employes are based on the cost of four prime necessities—clothes, light, fuel and rent. Food there is not considered in the cost of living. Besides, persons are paid there according to whether they are married or single, separated from husbands or wives, and according to the number of children.
> This was explained in a report made to the Seventy-second Congress. The plan was proposed in that Congress by Senator Gore but it was given little recognition because of its un-American character.

To the council's statement it should be added that the cost-of-living wages theory bars the workers from all participation in economic and social progress, which makes up what we call civilization.

In the application of this theory employers, public and private, paternalistically and autocratically determined on a fixed date the amount of money required to buy the products and services which they believe wage-earners should be paid for doing the necessary work in producing, transporting and selling the commodities, which constitute the wealth of society under the present economic order, and performing various other essential functions.

If manufacturers, merchants and professional men boost the price of these necessaries and services, then the cost-of-living wage employers declare that wages should be boosted to meet that added cost. On the other hand, if dealers reduce prices, then the workers' pay should be cut accordingly.

It is apparent that under the application of this theory working men and women can never raise the standards of living for themselves and their families. They are tied hand and foot to static conditions and compelled to see all of the blessings of more efficient production go to those who own and control modern industry.

The executive council is right. Chaining hundreds of thousands of government employes to a fixed and unalterable living standard for themselves and their dependents is undoubtedly "the most indefensible action ever taken by Congress."

If any proof were needed that David Lawrence, propagandist for big business whose syndicated articles appear in the Times, does not know what he is talking about, at least when he is handing out his sage advice about labor, all doubt should be disspelled by his latest "boner" in connection with internal affairs of the American Federation of Labor. On the eve of the opening of the convention Lawrence wrote that there was great division in the ranks, and pictured John L. Lewis as having designs on the job held by President Green. The "left wing," according to this prophet, was "rarin' to go," and the probability of an open split among the delegates was strongly hinted. The federation has just concluded one of the most harmonious conventions in its history, and John L. Lewis paid high tribute to President Green in nominating the chief for re-election. Ho-hum!

Federal Pay Reductions

During 1931, 1932 and the fore part of 1933 the organized employers of the United States carried on a nationwide drive to coerce members of Congress into passing legislation enforcing drastic wage and salary cuts on over a half million government employes.

In dividend notices and other communications many large corporations urged all their stockholders to write to their representatives in Congress demanding the pay slashes.

Big business even set up the National Economy league, with Rear Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd as its official publicity man, to conduct the assault on the living standards of government workers, the slogan being that "governmental extravagance" must be stopped and taxation reduced.

Inasmuch as many of the "patriots" and labor exploiters who fathered the drive on the pay of federal employes made themselves the principal beneficiaries of government expenditures by grabbing millions of dollars in subsidies and similar forms of plunder, thinking people wondered what was the real reason for the drive of private employers and their satellites against the living standards of federal employes.

The secret is revealed by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor in their report to the 1933 convention of the federation. Here is what the council said:

> Reductions in wages of government employes were seized upon by employers in private employment to reduce the wages of their own employes. When Congress fixed the reduction at 8½ per cent., employers reduced their employes 10 and 15 per cent. When the 15 per cent. reduction went into effect by Presidential order, employers in private employment reduced the wages of their employes generally.

There you have the truth. Big business was just itching to cut the wages of millions of employes. They feared negative public reaction to wholesale pay reduction decreed on their own reactionary initiative. But if Congress would slash the pay of millions of federal workers, then private employers would be able to claim government "leadership" in reducing living standards and smother protests with the explanation that they were merely following the example of the government.

For unparalleled hypocrisy and supreme disloyalty to the higher principles of modern civilization, which demand that those who do the useful work in production and distribution of wealth shall adequately share in human progress, the sponsors of big business in the United States are unexcelled in any other country.

Don't Tempt Fortune

There is much ground for the fear at Washington that arbitrary and unwarranted price advances might bring a reaction that would be disastrous to the N. R. A. Retail prices should rise slowly and never in advance of the rise in demand in bettered conditions through more employment and increase in incomes of the buyers.

A certain amount of inflation talk is being circulated with the hope that buying will increase and prices take an upward turn. Manufacturers who rushed into activity of speeding up factories just prior to adoption of codes in their industries, bringing about excessive production of speculative nature, buying raw products at depressed prices, paying low wages and working long hours have crowded their warehouses with goods. Now they are hoping retailers will replace depleted stocks with goods at sharply advanced prices.

Retailers are looking askance at this situation. Many of them sense the danger of an abrupt upturn of prices without apparent conditions warranting it. The public might respond by ceasing to buy and that is the very thing Washington dreads, for it would do more to stall and retard the recovery movement than anything that could be done. A tactical blunder of that sort might readily become a major calamity.

It is a time when manufacturers may well refrain from greedy profit taking, retailers use caution and the buying public take a reasonable and rational view of the situation. It is an hour for cool heads and steady nerves.

The Passing Show

Note and Comment on Things Doing in the March of Events

"The right of a woman to live from the results of her labor whether industry is making money or not" is upheld as the principle underlying the Ontario minimum wage law in the 1932 annual report of the Minimum Wage Board of that province. The report emphasizes the many difficulties of minimum wage administration during a depression period. It points out that while some few employers are taking advantage of the unemployment situation to exploit male workers, "it is clearly the duty of the minimum wage board to see that the working women of the provinces are not similarly sacrificed on the pseudo altar of economic necessity."

"It must be kept in mind," continues the report, "that we are not administering a fair wage law but a minimum wage law; that we do not fix wages but simply set the cost of living levels below which wages may not fall. The minimum wage law asks no more for working women than society demands for its criminals, imbeciles, and paupers, viz., sufficient food, proper shelter, and modest clothing. When this is clearly understood, surely there can be no argument as to its desirability."

Twelve dollar and $13 minimum weekly wage scales in the cotton textile industry makes a world of difference to those whose children have to be sent into virtual slavery to keep body and soul together, but the employers of the nation had better be told and retold that these kind of wages do not make patriots.

Deny the men and women of the nation the opportunity to make and maintain their homes, enjoy home life and furnish their loved ones with the necessities and common comforts of life and you no longer can call upon them for their patriotism.

They have found that there has been enough for them all the while, but that they have had it systematically taken away from them. The people of the nation are either going to live better and fuller lives from now on, or they will take their government further into the realms of industrial and business control. It is for the employers to know this, realize this, and help to bring better conditions, if they expect to have any business left them.

MORE ABOUT ROSEVELT PAYS

Miss R. Lee Guard were among those on the speakers' platform.

The Gompers memorial, the work of Robert Aitken, New York sculptor, stands on a triangular park at Tenth street and Massachusetts avenue, N. W., a block west from the American Federation of Labor building. Temporary platforms provided seating space for about 2,500 spectators, while thousands of others saw the ceremony from surrounding streets and buildings.

President Roosevelt, who was introduced by Mr. Green, made a stirring plea for "unselfish patriotism" in the present crisis and warned that obstructors "will have to be put in a corral."

"It is fitting," the president said, "that in the capital of the nation a statue should stand through the ages to remind future generations of the services to the nation of a patriot who served his country well. It is fitting that the government, through its representatives, should take part in the dedication of this monument. It is fitting that I should appear here in my official capacity, as one who has always been proud of the personal friendship which he held for many years with Samuel Gompers."

MORE ABOUT MILLIONS STILL

according to our preliminary estimate.

"Trade union reports for the first part of September indicate that the re-employment program is still going forward. They how larger employment gain in September than in August, the largest gain in fact for any month since March, 1933, except June. In September 22.6% of the membership were out of work, compared with 23.7% in August, 24.1% in July and 26.6% in March. The gains were chiefly in full time work, for part-time work did not increase. Of our 24 cities, 20 reported a gain in employment.

"Nevertheless when one considers the 11,001,000 persons still out of work and looks ahead to winter months when more than a million will probably lose their jobs, progress in the conquest of unemployment seems slow indeed. But miracles do not happen even under the NRA, and the fact that more than 2,800,000 have gone back to work since March, when all industries are counted, is at least a beginning toward recovery. Unemployment has been reduced by 20% since its peak in March.

"This beginning of re-employment must not mislead us into thinking that the need for relief is over or that it is even decreasing. Despite the return to work of 2,800,000 by August, the number of families on relief rolls in our principal cities in August was 85 to 90 per cent above August last year. If two or three million are better off by having jobs, eleven million are worse off from their long struggle for existence; their resources are exhausted, and hundreds are weekly applying to the public relief offices for the first time. Relief needs this winter will be greater than ever before. Three and a half million families were on the public rolls in August and this number may increase to four and a half million before the winter is over. Care for those who are without resources is our first duty and every American citizen with a spark of human sympathy will stand firmly behind the national and state relief programs this winter, even when they mean higher taxes."
